What a treat is in store for those who have yet to brew their first pot of Morse's Selected Orange Pekoe Tea!

MORSE'S TEAS

North of Fifty-Three

Bertrand W. Sinclair

It was a gray film of dust had accumulated on everything, and the rooms were oppressive with the many odors that gather in a closed, untenanted house. But apart from that it stood, as they had left it thirteen months before. No foot had crossed the threshold. The pile of wood and kindling lay beside the fireplace as Bill had placed it the morning they left.

"We'll ever so humble," Bill left the key of the old house unfastened, but his tone was full of jubilation. Between them they threw wide every door and window. The cool evening wind filled the place with sweet, pleasant air. Then Bill started a blaze roaring in the black-mouthed fireplace—to make it look natural, he said—and went out to hobble his horses for the night.

In the morning they began to unpack their household goods. Rugs and carpets found each its accustomed place upon the floor. His books went back on the shelves. With magical swiftness the cabin resumed its old home atmosphere. And that night Bill stretched himself on the grizzly hide before the fireplace, and kept his nose in a book until Hazel, who was in no humor to read, fretted herself into something approaching a clam.

"You're about as sociable as a clam," she broke into his absorption at last. He looked up in surprise, then chuckled the volume carelessly aside, and twisted himself around on his head rested in her lap.

"You're bored with yourself? Aren't I here? Surely you don't feel yourself neglected because I happen to have my nose stuck in a book?" "Of course not!" she denied vigorously. The childish absurdity of her attitude struck her with sudden force. "Still, I'd like you to talk to me once in a while."

Bill's eyes narrowed a trifle, but he still smiled. And suddenly he stepped round behind her chair, put both hands under her chin, and tilted her head backward.

"Ah, you're plumb sick and tired to death of everything, aren't you?" he said soberly. "You've been up here too long. You sure need a change. I'll have to take you out and give you the freedom of the cities, let you disport in parks and amusements, and rub elbows with the mob for a while. Then you'll be glad to drift back to this woodsy hiding place of ours. When do you want to start?"

"Why, Bill?" she protested. "But she realized in a flash that Bill could read her better than she could read herself. Few of her emotions could remain long hidden from that keenly observing and mercilessly logical mind. She knew that he guessed where she stood, and by what means she had gotten there. Trust him to know. And it made her very tender toward him that he was so quick to understand. Most men would have resented.

"I want to stack a few tons of hay," he went on, disregarding her exclamation. "I'll need it in the spring, if not this winter. Soon as that's done we'll hit the high spots. We'll take three or four thousand dollars, and while it lasts we'll be a couple of—of high-class tramps. Huh? Does it sound good?"

She nodded vigorously. "Perk up, then," he wheedled. "Bill-boy," she murmured, "you mustn't take me too seriously." "I took you for better or for worse," he answered, with a kiss. "I don't want it to turn out worse. I want you to be contented and happy here, where I've planned to make our home."

"I know you love me quite a lot, little person. Nature fitted us in a good many ways to be mates. But you've gone through a pretty drastic siege of isolation in this rather grim country, and I guess it doesn't seem such an alluring place as it did at first. I don't want you to nurse that feeling until it becomes chronic. Then we would be out of time, and it would be good-by happiness. But I think I know the cure for your malady."

In the morning he began his hay cutting about eleven o'clock he threw down his scythe and stalked to the house.

"Put on your hat, and let's go. I've figured a mystery," said he. "I heard 'ow baw' in the woods a minute ago. A regular baw' bellow."

"A cow bawling?" she echoed. "Sure? What would cattle be doing away up here?"

"That's what I want to know!" Bill laughed. "I've never seen a cow north of Fraser—not this side of the Rockies, anyway."

They saddled their horses, and rode out in the direction from whence had arisen the bovine complaint. The sound was not repeated, and Hazel had begun to chaff Bill about a too-rigid imagination when within a half mile of the clearing he pulled his horse up short in the middle of a little meadow.

"Look!" The track of a broad-tired wagon had freshly crushed the thick grass. Bill squinted at the trail, then his gaze swept the timber beyond.

"Somebody has been cutting timber over there," he enlightened. "I can see the fresh ax work. Looks like they'd been hauling poles. Let's follow this track a ways."

The tiny meadow was fringed on the north by a grove of poplars. Beyond that lay another clear space of level land, perhaps forty acres in extent. They broke through the belt of poplars—and pulled up again. On one side of the meadow stood a cabin, the fresh-peeled log walls glaring yellow in the sun, and lifting an eagle-shaped roof to the autumn sky. Bill whistled softly.

Along the west side of the meadow ran a brown streak of soil, and down one side of this a man pulled the handles of a plow drawn by the strangest yokemates Hazel's eyes had seen for many a day.

"For goodness' sake!" she exclaimed. "That's the true pioneer spirit for you!" Bill spoke absently. "He has bucked his way into the heart of a virgin country, and he's breaking soil with a mule and a cow. That's adaptation to environment with a vengeance—and grit!"

"There's a woman, too, Bill. And see—she's carrying a baby!" Hazel pointed excitedly. "Oh, Bill!"

The man halted his strangely assorted team to watch them come. The woman stood a step outside the door, a baby in her arms, another toddler holding fast to her skirt. A thick-bodied, short, square-shouldered man was this newcomer, with a round, pleasant face.

"Hello, neighbor!" Bill greeted. The plowman lifted his old felt hat courteously. His face lit up.

"Sure!" said he. "Neighbor. Dot lass a goot word in dis country were dere las no neighbor. But I am glad to meet you. Vill you come do der house und rest a while?"

"Sure!" Bill responded. "But we're neighbors, all right. Did you notice a cabin about half a mile west of here? That's our place—when we're at home."

"So?" The word escaped with the peculiar rising inflection of the Teuton. "I half saw dot cabin ven we come here. But I think it was abandoned, till it was der case go. Id vill rest der mule—and Gretchen, der cow. Hah!"

He rolled a blue eye on his teetotal team, and grinned widely. "Come," he invited; "mine wife be glad."

They found her a matron of thirty-odd; fresh-checked, round-faced like out his accent of the fatherland. Hazel at once appropriated the baby. It lay peacefully in her arms, staring wide-eyed making soft, gurgly sounds. "The little dear!" Hazel murmured.

"Later, our name iss," the man said calmly, when they had entered the house. "Wegstuf, mine la." Bill completed the informal introduction.

"I am from Bavaria," Later told him. "Vill you smoke? I light mine pipe—mit your wife's permission."

"Yes," he continued, stuffing the bowl of his pipe with a stubby forefinger. "I am from Bavaria. Dere I sse upon a farm brought coop. I sse in der army my time. Den Amerigo. Dere I marry my wife, who is born in Milwaukee. I work in der big breweries. After dot I learn to be a carpenter. Now I am a hink mit a castle all mine own. I am no more a yage slave."

"You're on the right track," Bill nodded. "It's a pity more people don't take the same line. What do you think of this country, anyway?"

"It iss goot," Later answered briefly, and with unhesitating certainty. "It iss goot. Vor der boor man it iss a las solation. Mit life hunter, tellars und hisst two hants he can himself a home make—and a häng be sure off."

Beside Hazel, Later's wife absently glanced the broad head of her four-year-old daughter.

"No, I don't think I'll ever get lonesome," she said. "I'm too glad to be here. And I've got lots of work and my babies. Of course, if's natural I'd miss a woman friend running in 'n' out and then to chat. But a person can't have it all. And I'd do anything to have a roof over my head."

To The Electors of Digby County—Ladies and Gentlemen—The United Farmers of Digby have been elected to the County Council.

The United Farmers of Digby have been elected to the County Council. They are now in the County Council, and are working to make a success of this, our first venture in politics.

The feeling is universal that the people should take the management of their own affairs, and that they will submit no longer to the dictation of a small clique of party men who have their own more than the country's best interests at heart.

IS UNKNOWN LAND

Much of South American Continent Unexplored.

Room There, and Natural Resources, to Furnish Living for Millions New in Overworked Parts of the Globe.

The undeveloped continent is South America. It is far less known geographically than Africa, and much of what appears on its maps is derived from the imagination of the cartographer.

Most of the interior of South America has never been explored. Civilization might be said to occupy not much more than the edges of the continent, which, as a whole, is sparsely populated relatively to its vast area.

From this time on, however, a flood of people from overcrowded parts of the world will go southward into it; they will be seeking a new life, a new offer, but also fabulous wealth. The natural resources of other terrestrial areas have been to a great extent used up, but those of South America are virtually untouched.

Its tropical regions no longer deny settlement by white men, because of deadly fever. We now know how to clean them up and make them healthy. It has been said that the jungles of the interior harbor many tribes, and that some of them are more advanced than those of other parts of the world.

The River Plate affords a more extensive system of unobstructed navigation than any other stream in the world. It offers a greater number of miles of navigable water than all the rivers of Europe combined. Steamers of 20-foot draft can go 2,700 miles into the interior, these leading for Europe being able literally to enter the wheat fields and ranches to take aboard their cargoes.

From the Rio Negro south to Magellan straits stretches an enormous territory—1,800 miles in length—called Patagonia. It is a region of high mountains, mostly unexplored desert. Wandering tribes, semi-civilized, inhabit it—the tallest people in the world, whose stature (the men) often exceeds six feet. They are a people of the future, and to describe the country as the home of giants.

South of Magellan straits lies Tierra del Fuego, a triangular island nearly 1,000 miles in length. It is a region of high mountains, mostly unexplored desert. Wandering tribes, semi-civilized, inhabit it—the tallest people in the world, whose stature (the men) often exceeds six feet. They are a people of the future, and to describe the country as the home of giants.

South of Tierra del Fuego lies the Strait of Magellan, a narrow waterway through which vessels can actually make their way nearly 3,600 miles southward into the River Plate. On a much shorter trip it will take them into one of the most fertile of the Amazon, in the mouth of which lies an island as large as Denmark.

South America today invites the enterprising young man as does no other part of the globe. He will make a mistake to go there unless he has some money and enough Spanish to get along with.

French Study of War History.

Visitors in Paris have a new place of interest in the opening of the Bibliothèque de la Guerre. The new war library and museum had its inauguration in the presence of the president of the Republic, and as a part of the celebration a number of valuable collections of historical material. Although one purpose is to provide a permanent exhibition for the benefit of the general public, another is the accumulation of material from which the history of the war may be written.

It is now known that, early in the war, Germany began plans to attract the historians of the future to Berlin, in order that they should be their work in an atmosphere sympathetic to Germany. The course of events, however,

DELIVERING GOODS BY AEROPLANE

In our last issue there appeared an item announcing the purchase of an aeroplane by Brander-Henderson Ltd., and the installation of a delivery service by air from their factory at Montreal to the towns and villages within the central division. Since then, we have seen Mr. George Henderson, Brander-Henderson manager at Halifax, who recently returned from Montreal, and he has told us more about it. The conception of the aeroplane idea, he says, was that of the President of the company, Mr. George Henderson, and so far it has proved to be the most effective advertising effort that has ever been made in Canada. Other institutions such as County Fairs, Victory Loan Campaigns, etc., have engaged aeroplanes for special stunts, but Mr. Henderson in his venture went further. He bought an aeroplane outright, lock, stock and barrel, and gave it definite duties which it performs with clock-like regularity.

"Up to the time I was in Montreal," said Mr. Helliar "flights had already been made to a large number of places, one to the River, a distance of 90 miles was made in 50 minutes. On a day when a trip was made to Berthierville, the Mayor of that town proclaimed a public holiday, and on the landing of the aviator the local band played 'See the conquering hero come.' I understand that the Brander-Henderson agent there, sold over $900 worth of paint right in the aviation field, within a very few minutes, so impressed were the people by the firm's enterprise. I might say that in each town before making a landing to deliver his freight the aviator is instructed to circle about for a time, dropping bombs of propaganda for 'B.H. English' and 'Brander's B. B. Genuine White Lead.' It is a fine advertising stunt; the most effective that we have ever attempted."

"Perhaps Brander-Henderson will install an air delivery from Halifax," the "Merchant" suggested. "They might but for one thing," said Mr. Helliar. Halifax is without an air dome and until she gets one, there is no use to consider the matter. I must say that it made me quite jealous to see our Central Division getting so much splendid publicity, which we might have shared in if only Halifax had had an air dome. However, we may have our chance yet. An air dome for Halifax is a real necessity today."

"You think then," said the "Merchant" "that the aeroplane delivery is a sound commercial proposition." "That," said Mr. Helliar, "is the view of our President. He believes the aeroplane is bound to have an important place in the merchandising world just as soon as the country will take it seriously, and he hopes that the precedent he has established will be quickly followed by other Canadian manufacturers."

It should be gratifying to all Maritime Provinces people to hear that a firm born and nurtured in the provinces has been the first to install a goods delivery service by aeroplane in Canada. The only regret we suspect they will have will be that the lack of an air dome at both Halifax and St. John made it impossible for the initial effort to be undertaken from one of these places.—Maritime Merchant.

Clover is at its best for fodder purposes if cut when the heads are in full bloom. Timothy is at its maximum when the seed is fairly formed, which is very shortly after what is popularly known as "second bloom." In mixed growth, where the stand of clover is fairly good, the time of cutting should be gauged by the clover rather than the timothy.

THE DIGBY WEEKLY COURIER

When these columns bring their greeting
And their crisp contents we scan,
As the weeks like shadows fleeting Measure out life's brief span.
Many changing thoughts appearing Quickly come and quickly go,
Some like summer suns are cheering,
Some are cold as Winter's snow.
Strangely mingle joy and sadness,
Close linked are day and night;
Hand in hand walk grief and gladness
As they pass before our sight.
Births and deaths and joy and sorrow—
The battle bells and funeral pain:
All that is to be tomorrow,
Present joys and future gain.
Good advancing; ill retreating;
Or the scale as quickly turns,
Now our hearts with joy are beating,
Then our indignation burns.
Like a poem whose metre changes,
So these columns matter ranges.
From the gloomy to the gay,
Thus with light and shadow blended
Both the course of history run
Till the battle mists are ended
And the prize at length is won.
May each change of life and duty
All our grief and all our joy
Mould us into strength and beauty
And our selfishness destroy.
Thus shall thorns as well as roses
In true harmony combine,
And when here our journey closes
We shall "in His hands" resign.

I'M CONVINCED LIVELY DECLARES

Thought Nothing Could Help Him But Has Gained Eighteen Pounds
on Tanlac.

"To be quite frank, I didn't have much faith in Tanlac when I started on it, but now after giving it a fair trial, I don't know how to say enough in its favor," said Thomas I. Lively of Gaston Road, Dartmouth N. S., in a conversation with the Tanlac representative recently. "Ever since I was a boy I have had a weak stomach, and suffered from indigestion, and of late years it got much worse. My food always used to turn sour, bloat me up with gas so that I could hardly breathe, and caused me severe cramping pains in the pit of my stomach, so that I could hardly keep at my work. I was always badly constipated, had dull heavy headaches almost every day, and spells of dizziness. When I lay down at night the gas that formed on my stomach would see to press up into my throat and almost choke me; many a night I have had to walk the floor for hours in my effort to get relief, and sometimes would not get a wink of sleep all night. I went down in weight from a hundred and eighty-five pounds to a hundred and fifty-five and got so weak that I would actually stagger and almost fall down at times. Often I would step off from my work for a week or two at a time, and about two years ago I was so bad that I had to knock off for six months. For twenty four years I have been trying to find something to relieve the indigestion but nothing seemed to help me until I tried Tanlac."

"As I've said, I didn't have much faith in it when I started and even when I had finished the first bottle, I was thinking that it was no better than all the other medicine I had tried. But I kept on taking it, and I am mighty glad that I did for it has made a new man of me. I have a fine appetite, can eat anything and my digestion and stomach trouble seems entirely gone. All signs of sourness, gas or cramping pains have disappeared. I am no longer constipated and the headaches are a thing of the past. I sleep like a top now and in the morning get up feeling like a man refreshed. I have only been taking Tanlac for five weeks, but I have gained eighteen pounds in weight already, and haven't enjoyed such for duty every day now, and my work is a pleasure instead of a torture. I don't hesitate to recommend Tanlac as the best of all medicines for indigestion."

"Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and by the leading druggist in every town."

Clean and cool,—these are the two watchwords of the alert creamery patron these hot days. Cream should be reduced to a temperature below 55 degrees as quickly as possible after milking. This measure with frequent delivery, will save the management of the creamery from a host of troubles, will steady the cream test, and, with it, the income of the herd owner.

It is now none too soon to prepare for spraying the potato field for the prevention of rot. The first week in July is a good general date for Nova Scotia. Time and labor may be saved by combining the Bordeaux Mixture with the bug poison. If uncertain as to materials and method, drop a card to the College of Agriculture, Truro, and get full information.

If your cream test is showing irrigating ups and downs write to Dairy Division, College of Agriculture, Truro, for bulletins on "Care of Cream for Butter-making" and "Causes of Variation in Percentage of fat." Read, and follow directions. Your creamery manager may have these bulletins on hand.

The average farmer in Nova Scotia waits a week too long before beginning to cut his hay; late cut hay contains a large proportion of indigestible, fibrous material, of little or no value as a food. Besides, late hay contains more water after growth, which, whether thrown open to cattle as a supplement to the dry pasture of late summer, or allowed to die on the ground is a valuable asset.

THE COMING AMERICAN ELECTIONS

Interest in the November elections in the United States is naturally focused on the contest between Harding and Cox for the presidency, says the St. John Globe. The political leaders and political partisans are as keenly concerned about other features of the November election as they are about the choice of a President. Besides electing their President, the two parties are bent on giving him the support of a friendly Senate. At the present time the Republicans have a narrow margin in the Upper House, and as there are thirty-two Senate elections in November it is easy to understand that very determined fights will be made for seats which may be considered to offer reasonable prospects of success. Of the thirty-two Senate seats to become vacant in March next, seventeen are held by Democrats and fifteen by Republicans. The significance of these senatorial contests is clearly indicated by Senator Poindestre, Chairman of the Republican Senatorial Committee, who after expressing his view that the Republicans will elect their President, declares "But it would be a great embarrassment to a Republican administration if all of its official appointments of importance had to be submitted to a Democratic Senate for confirmation." Even more significant is Senator Poindestre's. The campaign for the presidency and for Congress is, of course, interwoven at many points, but there is special work to be done in various local circumstances and conditions for the election of candidates for the Senate. This campaign will be conducted entirely under the control of the Republican Senatorial Committee of the Senate. It will not in any way be amalgamated with the National Committee, although it will work in entire harmony and co-operation with that committee. This is one of many signs that the election contests of November will be among the most keenly contested and bitterly fought of recent years. The issue is American participation in the League of Nations. Views and opinions which may be expressed in the heat of the Campaign can hardly fail to arouse some resentment over seas, where America's failure to assume a share in the solution of the problem created by America's participation in the war is already the cause of keen disappointment.

A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Standing in the Post office one day recently scanning my Courier, I overheard a group of citizens discussing the personal columns of that paper as they also scanned theirs. One lady was highly indignant because there had been no mention of her week end visitors, while another declared that no matter how many pink tea's or garden parties she might give in the run of a week there was "no possible hope of the editor mentioning them." These two persons live in extreme opposite ends of the town and as I knew them both well. I ventured to ask if they had in either case sent the glad tidings, to the much blamed editor, either by telephone, post card or word of mouth and in both cases the reply was the same "why, of course, I never thought of that." Poor man! I suppose he is naturally gifted with a sixth sense and should know by instinct all little social doings in all parts of the town at once but—how can he do it? I know that's what newspapers are for and I know everybody loves to know when and where everybody else goes, and who comes to see him and who gives a party, and what everybody wore, etc., but the thought came over me that I was thankful I was not editor. As we stood talking, another person spoke up and said: "Well it beats me—I simply have to hide to keep out the paper, but I actually got away to New York and back and not a soul outside my own family knew it and they promised not to tell. Now wouldn't that jar you! I was hot all over and felt like telling them all what a lot of fools were still left in the world, and what a lot of donkeys they were—one kicking because his name wasn't in the paper and the other because it was. If the whole town was cut out of that scale and all the other towns followed suit the newspaper men would all go out of business and print posters exclusively, so shake yourself my friends, instead of sticking in a corner and waiting for the editor and "his host of reporters to seek you out when your daughter marries a millionaire or gives a party or has visitors over Sunday—ring up the editor and tell him about it or go to his office—which isn't far after all—and you will rejoice to see how his countenance will light up when he knows there is at least one interesting item he hasn't got to ride, shank's mare all over town to search out and then perhaps get hail columbia for publishing.

My attention was recently drawn to the case of a school boy who engaged to work for a certain man, in our town at a given wage during the school holidays. Shortly after making the agreement the boy was offered a similar job at $2 per week more, but having been brought up to keep his word, though sorely tempted, he stuck to the first agreement. Not so the man! After two weeks time another youth arrived on the scene who also wanted a job and who had a longer tongue, and although the employer found no fault with the first boy who had been strictly faithful, he allowed himself to be persuaded into laying him aside without wages for a week while he "gave the second chap a

SIR R. L. BORDEN'S ENTRY INTO POLITICS

His Preference for Books, Art, Music and Recreation.

R. L. Borden

We need not suppose that when Sir Robert Borden gave up the premiership that he cast a longing, lingering look behind. He has wrought in political service; not because he had a passion for that vocation, but because he seemed to be called to that task, and found himself able to work in it to some purpose. In war time it was the highest service open to him. But Sir Robert is not one of those who follow politics for the sake of the game. A majority of men who succeed in political life find their chief reward and satisfaction in the pursuit of it. It is a kind of warfare, and they like the struggle. It is part of a gamble and they enjoy the speculation. The competition, the strategy, the uncertainty of comradeship, even the animosities are worth more than the stake.

And where the path is dangerous, known, the danger is less. I do not believe, the game itself ever had much lure for Sir Robert Borden. Before he became a candidate he had little to do with politics and such interest as he had came to him incidentally, first as a youth from his relationship to Sir Fred Borden and later from his law partnership with Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper. When Sir Charles Tupper formed his administration in 1896 and appealed to the country, he asked Robert Borden to be the government candidate in Halifax, which was a close constituency. It may fairly be said that at this time, Mr. Borden's chief desire was to give such help as he could to a personal friend and the father of his associate. If he had personal ambitions they would probably look toward a seat on the bench. There is no reason to suppose that he intended to enter upon a political career, which would absorb his whole energies. He had as much expectation of party leadership as he had of becoming a cardinal.

But he had already one element of strength—personal popularity and public confidence. Though one candidate was elected from each party he led the poll by nearly two hundred votes. He had been eighteen years at the bar and was president of the Barristers' Society of the province and probably had the largest professional income of any lawyer in the Maritime Provinces.

It is quite possible that if the Tupper Government had been sustained, Sir Robert Borden would now have been chief justice of Nova Scotia and would have read a great deal more good literature in his own and other languages than he has been able to read. For twenty-five years ago he was not only earning two or three times the largest income that the country has ever paid him since, but finding three times as much leisure for books and art and music and recreation. Some years later when he was leader of the opposition he told a meeting of his friends about a banquet table that his chief reason for desiring to be released from the leadership was that he might again read Horace and Montaigne and Omar Khayyam and Shakespeare.

I am sure that when he ran his second election as well as his first he was more familiar with the odes of Horace and tragedies of Shakespeare and the romance poetry of England and France than he was with the party platforms and the history of the tariff. The constitutional history of England and the United States interested him more than the political record of John A. McDonald and George Brown, Dodsley and the Mermaid Inn had more charm for him than the caucus. He liked golf better than the word committee, and a summer political meeting would not decoy him from the book of verses to be read on the balcony overlooking the Northwest Arm. The loaf and jug and thou were not wanting.

His own view of politics after he had seen some eight years of it, I heard him express in a quotation from Schiller, which he gave in the original but I report in Lytton's translation. It is descriptive of the whirlpool in the poem of "The Dover" and it bubbles and seethes, and it hiezes and roars, and when there is with water commixed and contending, And the spray of its wrath to the welkin upgoes, And flood upon flood hurries on, never ending, And it never will end nor from travail be free, Like a sea that is laboring a birth of a sea.

It is a very good account of a campaign situation, but in my opinion not better than is implied in the words of Matthew Arnold, not more intended to apply to politics than the words of Schiller. And we are here upon a darkling plain, Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight, Where ignorant armies clash by night.

That was sixteen years ago, and many a clashing in the darkness has happened since.

GET RID OF THE MALE BIRDS

The presence of male birds in the flock during the summer months has a decidedly detrimental effect upon the quality of eggs and poultry producers lose many thousands of dollars annually through the presence of partially incubated and bad eggs in the produce they market. Reports are now being received from all parts of the country of the presence of partially incubated eggs appearing in current receipts. Producers do not realize that it is unnecessary for a fertile egg to be placed under a broody hen to cause the germ to grow; a temperature of seventy degrees is sufficient to start incubation. If the heat is constant the development of the chick will continue, but if it ceases or is intermittent, putrefaction at once sets in and the egg becomes bad. Such eggs have no place or value in shipments, and should they get to the consumer the consumptive demand immediately falls off.

The male bird is not essential in egg production, his usefulness is over when the supply of fertile eggs for the season has been secured. The hens will lay just as many eggs when the male bird has been removed and the eggs will be more suitable for consumption, packing or storing. Further, there is a distinct financial gain to the producer who markets infertile eggs, because the best trade in many cities offers a premium of from one to five cents a dozen for infertile eggs. Then there is the question of feed. It costs money to feed poultry, and with feed at its present value, the consumption of feed by males kept for no particular purpose is a serious economic waste. The reason for this is that the best prices for live and dressed fowl prevail in the spring and early summer. During the summer the price declines, and by the early fall when many producers decide to market their male birds, a lower price than prevailed in the spring has to be accepted. The producer thus losing the amount per pound the market has declined, plus the value of the feed consumed by the birds during the summer months. This financial loss takes on a more serious aspect when it is coupled with the amount charged back by the wholesaler for the bad and partially incubated eggs that have been marketed.

Farmers and others selling eggs for market should, therefore, need no urging to kill off, dispose of, or at least remove the male birds from the flock after the breeding season. More than 1000 officers and men are constantly employed in charting the coasts and seas of the British empire. The "sugar ash," which grows in Sicily, contains a sap which hardens into crude sugar. The natives use this without any refining. Slang originated from the gypsy tongue. It used to be a secret language of that race. It is by no means of modern date, being well known in the classic ages of Greece and Rome. A well-known justice on the London bench confesses that he has never seen a motion picture show, while a brother jurist declares he has never used a telephone nor ridden in a subway train.

DOMINION EXPERIMENTAL FARMS ANNOUNCEMENT

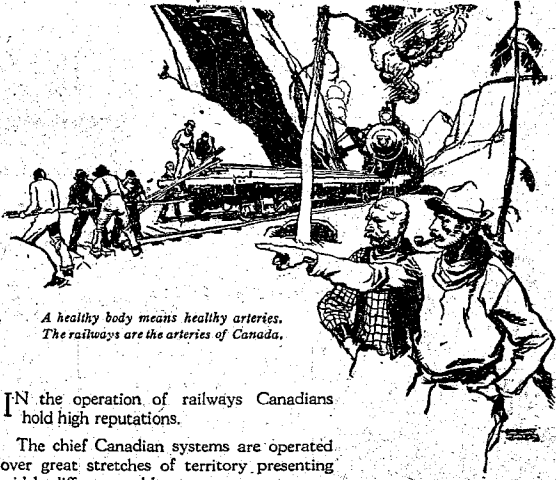

The Dominion Experimental Farm will conduct a second series of Egg Laying Contests beginning November 1, 1920, to continue for 52 consecutive weeks. The names and locations of the Contests will be as follows:

- CANADIAN CONTEST. Canadian Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont.
- PROVINCIAL CONTESTS. Prince Edward Island Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Station, Charlottetown, P. E. I.
- Nova Scotia Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Farm, Nappan, N. S.
- New Brunswick Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Station, Fredericton, N. B.
- Quebec Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Station, Cape Rouge, Que.
- Ontario Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont.
- Manitoba Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Farm, Brandon, Man.
- Saskatchewan Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Farm, Indian Head, Sask.
- Alberta Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Station, Lethbridge, Alta.
- British Columbia Egg Laying Contest, Experimental Farm, Agassiz, B. C.

Note: The "Canadian" is open to entries from anywhere, the "Provincial" is confined to entries within the Province in which it is situated. Fees: The entry fee for the Canadian Egg Laying Contest at Ottawa is $15.00. The entry fee for all Provincial Contests is $5.00. One-fifth of this entry fee must accompany the application which must be received before August 15th. The balance must be paid upon notification of acceptance of the entry which will be by September 30th. Should the entry not be accepted, the first payment will be refunded, but should the balance of the entry fee not be received by October 10th, the application will be cancelled and the first payment forfeited. Failure to forward the pen when instructed automatically forfeits the fee and the application is cancelled. All cheques or Money Orders must be made payable at par in Ottawa and made out to the "Accountant, for Egg Laying Contests."

Entries: Entry forms and Rules and Regulations will be supplied upon application to the Dominion Poultry Husbandman, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, or the Superintendent of the Experimental Farm upon which the Contest you wish to enter is conducted. (See names of Contests above.) Entries must be made direct to the Contest you wish to enter along with the first payment before August 15th, 1920.

An unusually strong list of speakers, a large attendance, fine reports of last year's activities, and a keen sense of the big things to be done, made this year's convention of Women's Institutes a very successful and heartening one. Fourteen new institutes have been organized since last October.

A healthy body means healthy arteries. The railways are the arteries of Canada.

IN the operation of railways Canadians hold high reputations.

The chief Canadian systems are operated over great stretches of territory presenting widely different problems.

Their traffic obligations fluctuate rapidly with the seasons.

Climatic conditions are sometimes difficult. Unusual foresight, skill and determination are called for.

Yet the only unflinching highways for the heavy traffic across the New World from China to France during the war—were Canadian railways.

Canada alone among the allied countries had no war-time transportation crisis. When foreign roads choked under their load, she relieved them of millions of tons. At a time when ships were the need of the hour no ship lost time in any Canadian port through failure of the railways to deliver cargoes at the docks.

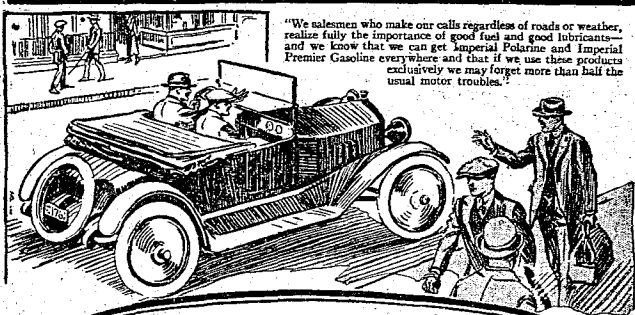

To-day the Canadian producer still commands the fastest, the most dependable and the cheapest railway service in the world.

But the foresight that made this record possible, could do nothing without MONEY! The skill that kept terminals un congested had to be backed with MONEY! The determination that drove crippled engines ahead in the face of 40-below gales and mounting snow would in the long run have been useless without MONEY!

Thus to-day the alarming fall in the net revenues of the railways is a menace to railway efficiency. It injures railway credit. It dissolves the reserves needful to meet the expanding needs of a growing country. It imperils national prosperity.

Increased freight rates are imperative therefore, not merely on behalf of railways but in the interests of Canada itself!

365 Days a Year Service

ALL motorists, especially those who use their cars for business purposes, must have steady service. They soon learn that correct lubrication is vitally important to uninterrupted service and that Imperial Polarine gives adequate thorough lubrication.

Imperial Polarine keeps the engine running smoothly and quietly by establishing and maintaining a perfect piston-cylinder seal, which holds all the power of the fuel charge behind the piston.

Imperial Polarine thoroughly lubricates and cushions every rubbing surface with a wear-resisting oil film. When used exclusively break-downs are infrequent, depreciation is low, fuel costs reduced.

One of the three grades described below is specially suited to your motor. Look for the Imperial Polarine Chart of Recommendations where you buy your oil and learn which grade to use.

Imperial Polarine is sold in one and four-gallon sealed cans, steel 12½-gallon kegs, steel 55-gallon barrels and barrels, by dealers everywhere.

Bertrand W. Sinclair

"As a diversion," he observed thoughtfully, "I don't mind it. These people are all very affable and pleasant, and they're rather gone out of their way to entertain us. But, after all, what the dickens does it amount to? They spend their whole life running in useless circles. I should think they'd get sick of it. You will."

"Hardly, Bill," he replied. "We're merely making up for two years of isolation. I think we must be remarkable people that we don't fight like cats and dogs. For eighteen months, you know, there wasn't a soul to talk to and not much to think about except what you could do if you were some place else."

"You're acquiring the atmosphere," he remarked - sardonically, she thought.

"No; just enjoying myself," she replied lightly.

"Well, if you really are," he answered slowly, "we may as well settle here for the winter - and get settled right away. I'm rather weary of being a guest in another man's house, to tell you the truth."

"Why, I'd love to stay here all winter," she said. "But I thought you intended to knock around more or less."

"But don't you see, you don't particularly care to," he pointed out; "and it would spoil the fun of going any place for me if you were not interested. And when it comes to a show-down, I'm not going to be a big game passage. One city is pretty much like another to me. We'll take a run over to New York. I want to get some books and things. Then we'll come back here and get a house or a flat. I tell you right now," he laughed not unpleasantly, "I'm not going to renege on this society game. You can play it as hard as you like, until spring, and there will be hell on wheels when it comes to a dance. And I'll go to a show - when a good play comes along. But I won't mix up with a lot of silly women and equally silly men, any more than I absolutely necessary."

"Why, Bill," she exclaimed again, "why don't you?" he defended himself. "There's Kitty Brooks - she has certainly got intelligence above the average. That Lorimer girl has brains, and she's got an artistic temperament, and she's used to advancing. Practically all the rest that I've met are intellectual nonentities - strong on looks and clothes and amusing themselves, and that lets them out. Shucks, there isn't a real man in the lot. Maybe I'll run across some people who don't take a two-by-four view of life if I stay around here long enough, but it hasn't happened to me yet. I must say that the habitual conversation of these people gives me a pain. That platitudinous extension of the play tonight, for instance."

"That was dull," Hazel chuckled at the recollection, and she recalled the weary look that had once or twice flitted over Bill's face during that after-theater supper.

why was it that money makes things pleasant?"

"If money meant that we would be compelled to lead the sort of existence most of these people do," he retorted, "I'd take measures to be broke as soon as possible."

"You're awful!" Hazel commented. Bill smiled again.

"Tomorrow, you advise our hosts that we're traveling," he instructed. "When we come back we'll make headquarters at a hotel until we locate a place of our own - if you are sure you want to winter here."

Her mind was quite made up to spend the winter there, and she frankly said so - provided he had no other choice. They had to winter some where.

"Oh, yes, I suppose so. All right; we'll winter here," Bill acquiesced. "That's settled."

And, as was his habit when he had come to a similar conclusion, he refused to talk further on that subject, but fell to speculating idly on New York. In which he was presently aided and abetted by Hazel, who had never loved Manhattan, not for that matter, any one of the big Atlantic cities.

New York, she was constrained to admit, rather overwhelmed her. She traversed Broadway and other world-known arteries, and felt a trifle dubious as she surveyed the glittering city.

Bill piloted her to famous cafes, and to equally famous theaters. She made sundry purchases in magnificent shops. The huge conglomeration of sights and sounds made an unforgettable impression upon her. She sensed keenly the colossal magnitude of it all. But she felt a distinct wave of relief when they were on the Grand Central station.

In a week they were settled comfortably in a domicile of their own - five rooms in an up-to-date apartment house. And since the social demands of Mrs. William Wagstaff's time grew apace, a capable maid and a cook were added to the Wagstaff establishment. Thus she was relieved of the onus of household. Her time was wholly her own, at her own disposal or Bill's, as she elected.

But by imperceptible degrees they came to take diverse roads in the swirl of life which had caught them up. There were so many little woman affairs where a man was superfluous. There were others which Bill natty refused to attend. "Fifty parties," he dubbed them. More and more he remained at home with his books.

Sometimes Hazel caught herself wondering if they were getting as much out of life as they should have gotten, as they had planned to get when they were struggling through that interminable winter. She was. But not Bill. If she ventured to give a tea, he'd be the house as if from the plague. He made acquaintances of his own, men from G.O. only knew where, individuals who occasionally allied the daily apartment with notorious bawdy houses, and who would cheerfully sit up all night discussing gaudily on any subject under the sun.

But so long as Bill found Grandville habitable she did not mind.

She wished fervently that Bill would take up some business that would keep him in touch with civilization. He had the capital, she considered, and there was no question of his ability. Her faith in his power to encompass whatever he set about was strong. Other men, less gifted, had acquired wealth, power, even a measure of fame, from a less auspicious beginning. Why not he?

But she could never quite bring herself to put it so many words to Bill.

The cycle of weeks brought them to January. They had dropped into something of a routine in their daily lives. Daily interest and participation in social affairs became negligible. When he was not absorbed in a book or magazine, he spent his time in some form of intellectual pursuit, having acquired membership in a club as a concession to their manner of life. Once he came home with flushed face and overbright eyes, radiating an odor of whisky. Hazel had never seen him like this to excess. She was correspondingly shocked, and took no pains to hide her feelings. But Bill was blandly undisturbed.

"You don't need to look so horrified," he drawled. "I'm going straight to bed, little person. Scold not, nor fret. William will be himself again ere yet the morrow's sun shall clear the horizon. Let us avoid recrimination. Good night."

A week or so later he became suddenly and unexpectedly active. He left the house as soon as his breakfast was eaten, and he did not come home to luncheon - a circumstance which irritated Hazel, since it was one of those rare days when she herself had been out. Late in the afternoon he telephoned briefly that he would dine downtown. And when he did return, at nine or thereabouts in the evening, he clumped in, eyes red, teeth set, and fell to work.

He was still sitting by the window when Hazel was ready to go to bed. She came back into the room in a trailing silk kimono, and, stealing

"What are you thinking about so hard, Billy-Boy?" she whispered.

"I was thinking about Jake Lauer, and wondering how he was making it go," Bill answered. "I was too busy trying to myself how some of these worthy citizens would mess things up if they had to follow in his steps. Hence, I don't know but he'd be better off if we were pegging away for a foothold somewhere, like old Jake."

"If we had to do that," she argued, "I suppose we would, and manage to get along. But since we don't have to ing a sheet of paper with interminable rows of figures.

"What's all the clerical work about?" she inquired. "Reckoning your assets and liabilities?"

Bill smiled and pushed aside the paper.

"I'm going to promote a mining company," he told her, quite casually. "It has been put up to me as a business proposition - and I've got to the stage where I have to do something, or I'll have to leave this place."

She overlooked the latter statement; it conveyed no special significance at the time. But his first statement opened up possibilities, such of late she had sincerely hoped would come to pass, and she was all interest.

"Promote a mining company?" she repeated. "That sounds extremely dangerous. How - when - where?"

"I don't know," he said. "I don't know. But since we don't have to

MAKING MAPLE SYRUP--IMPORTANT CANADIAN INDUSTRY

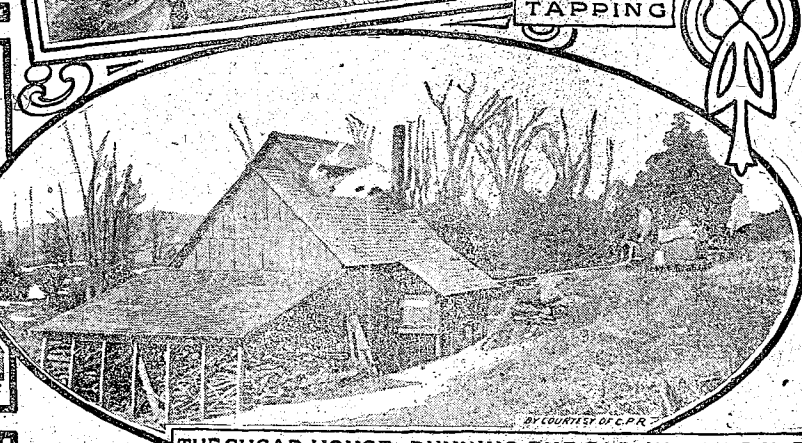

BY COURTESY OF C.P.R.
Waiting to Place

TAPPING

GATHERING THE SAP

THE SUGAR HOUSE--RUNNING THE SAP INTO THE VAT

SUGARING OFF

Bountiful Maples.
The making of maple sugar and syrup has become but a memory in the recollection of residents in many of the older parts of Canada. The industry is still, however, an important one over large areas in Quebec and to a less extent in Ontario and the provinces down by the sea. Sugar making from the maple, which is confined entirely to this continent, is a very early beginning. Before the advent of the white man the Indian had learned to extract and concentrate the sap of the maple tree. On the approach of spring the trees were caulked with the tomahawk, in a slanting direction and beneath the opening made was inserted a wooden chip or spout to direct the fluid drop by drop into the receptacle resting on the ground. The sap was caught in a birch bark dish and bottled in earthen kegs. The small quantity of dark, thick syrup thus made was the only sugar available to the Indians and is stated by early writers to have been highly prized. The early settlers from the Old Land learned from the Indians the art of sugar making and indeed followed for many years their crude methods of manufacture. Even yet primitive equipment and methods are stated to be used in back sections of the country that turn out their annual crop of inferior syrup and sugar.

For perhaps a century the white man followed very closely the primitive methods of the Indian save the substitution of iron or copper kettles for vessels of clay or bark. In the early days before the timber acquired much value the axe continued to be used for tapping the trees, the sap was caught in wooden troughs and conveyed in buckets on the shoulders with a sap pole to a central point to be boiled. No sugar bush was fully equipped without snowshoes which were frequently found necessary in gathering the sap. The boiling was done in large iron kettles suspended from a pole in the open woods in a sheltered location with no protection from sun, rain or snow or the ashes, falling leaves, moss and bits of bark that were driven about by the wind.

An early improvement was the substitution of the auger for the axe tapping, coppered buckets took the place of the birch bark "cane" or hewn sap trough, while the kettle gave way to the modern evaporating kettles made famous by the name of Grimm. During the past March and April along the lines of the Canadian Pacific in Quebec and Ontario farmers have been busy with the tapping of the maple trees and the year for the industry is growing in importance. It is estimated that the industry represents an annual valuation of nearly three million dollars and is carried on by 50,000 growers, but the increasing value of maple wood has led to the removal of many fine sugar orchards. With all the advances that have taken place in manipulation, sugar making has not lost its romantic side. "Sugaring off" at sugar camps in the woods is still looked forward to by young and old, who regard the event as a social feature affording rare enjoyment.

United States Golfers Praise St. Andrews-by-the-Sea

A quartette of sterling golfers toured eastern Canada for the Canadian Red Cross last June and were so pleased with the experience that they are desirous of repeating the trip and investigating the quality of Canadian golf in Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Vancouver, Victoria and other western cities of the Dominion. They were four of America's best, "Chick" Evans, former Amateur and Open Champion; Oswald Kirkby, Western Golf Champion; D. E. Sawyer, former Western Amateur Champion, and Gardiner White of Nassau. The photograph shows them addressing the ball at C.P.R. Links at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, N.B., on the shores of Passamaquoddy Bay. The four were particularly impressed with the quality of St. Andrews' golf and the beauty of the surroundings.

"Taking everything into consideration, hotel, country and the course itself, I cannot think of any finer spot than St. Andrews," said Oswald Kirkby. His team-mate, Gardiner White, declared that he intended to take his family to St. Andrews to see and enjoy its many attractions. "St. Andrews is a fine lot of the game and a golf de luxe," said "Chick" Evans.

"Golf on the picturesque links of St. Andrews compared one of the most interesting and delightful golf trips that could possibly be arranged," said D. E. Sawyer.

When St. Andrews-by-the-Sea in Canada was named in honor of St. Andrews, Scotland, the birthplace and original home of golf, no effort or expense was spared to make it worthy of its title. Like its Scotch namesake, Canada's St. Andrews is a beautiful seaside links and a splendid test of the royal and ancient game.

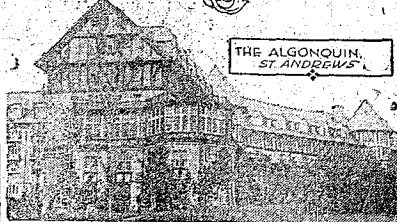

Every year large numbers of golfers from all parts of the world play at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea and many of them like the New Brunswick course as well as they do the links of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club in Scotland.

Golf is an invigorating game anywhere, but it is most delightful when played along the sea. At St. Andrews there are two courses, a nine-hole course 2,570 yards long and an eighteen-hole course 6,800 yards long. Both overlook the sea, and are clad in a firm sward of velvet green.

While reading on the course you can enjoy the view of the sea beneath, dotted with sailing vessels and motor boats, and little row boats that pick their way over the waves. From the golf links you may watch the fishermen catch millions of surfmen in their nets that are set a few hundred yards, or less, from the shore. And old men and old women may often be seen gathering shell fish on the beach. It is a delight to listen to the continuous pattering of the waves that expire on the red-topped lighthouse for the coast line is made of rocks and sand of rich deep red, and looking on it one might fancy that here in prehistoric times some great sea monster was killed and dried the place with his blood.

The late Sir William Van Horne, one of the presidents of the Canadian Pacific Railway, built a beautiful residence on an island in Passamaquoddy Bay, and his family still lives there in the summer season. Lord Beauchamp, the Chairman of the C. P. R. Board of Directors, makes his summer home at Port Tipperary, St. Andrews, and takes a special interest in the progress of the place.

At St. Andrews there is splendid sea fishing, and a lake near at hand furnishes some of the best bass fishing in Canada. And should the weather ever be rainy the Algonquin Hotel supplies bowling alleys, pool tables, English and French billiard tables, and a beautiful large casino for dancing. Those who make St. Andrews by the Sea their holiday resort once will do so a second time for when you go away from it there is an atmosphere about the place that brings you back again.

DEVELOPMENT OF LLOYDS REGISTRY

Was Once Secret Organization of Shipping Men.

A very interesting and instructive account of the origin, development and work of Lloyds' Register of shipping, which, like the great parent institution of Lloyds, had its inception in the coffee house of Edward Lloyd, in the reign of Charles II.—is contained in an article by Mr. Andrew Scott, secretary of Lloyds' Shipping, which appeared in Lloyds' Daily List recently.

It appears that in King Charles time, ships' lists, written by hand, were kept for the use of frequenters of the coffee house, and were the basis of offers of marine insurance. These lists were passed from hand to hand by the habitués and subsequently were put in type and circulated among the subscribers. The oldest copy of a Lloyds' Register of Shipping extant is contained in Lloyds' library, and is dated 1764. In addition to the names of vessels, those of the owners and captains, the trade routes followed, the number of crew, and the date and place of construction, the Register contained a classification based upon guns carried and the excellence or indifference of the hulls.

According to Mr. Scott, further particulars were added in the column headed "guns" in the shape of notations descriptive of the vessel, such as "Sd," "single deck," "Sd B," "single deck with a tier of beams," and "3 decks." The classes assigned to vessels were denoted by the letters A, B, C, and D, which referred to the vessel's hulls, while the letters G, M, and B, (good, middling and bad) referred to the equipment. For instance A. G. indicated a good ship and outfit, whereas U. B. would refer to a bad ship with poor equipment.

The Register came into being and was developed by the underwriters for their private use and was limited to the members of the society, practically the entire source of revenue being their subscriptions. Great secrecy was maintained at this time, and in 1719 each subscriber was obliged to deliver his old book before a new one could be issued, and if lost the owner was refused another. In 1797, owing to dissatisfaction among the members, two registers were issued, the Red Book, or Shipowners' Register, and the Green Book, or Underwriters' Register, subsequently amalgamated and organization and administration vested in representatives of merchants, underwriters and shipowners.

Lloyds' has now gathered together in its service a staff of ship surveyors, engineer surveyors, steel-testing surveyors, forging inspectors and electrical engineers, which numbers 532, of whom 282 are stationed in Great Britain and 250 abroad, there being over 100 surveyors in the United States, upward of 100 on the continent, thirty-one in India and the Far East, twelve in Australia, ten in South America, and seven in Africa.

During the last five years the society has surveyed and classified 10,000,000 tons of new shipping, in addition to surveys during the construction and examination of hulls, machinery and equipment of new vessels, periodical surveys required by the society's rules apply to approximately 9,000 vessels and 22,000,000 tons of shipping which are classified on the books of the Register.

I SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Paris, Ont.—"For five years I suffered from pains caused by displacement of my organs and in my back. All of this time I was unfit for work and was taking different medicines, but they did me no good. I saw the advertisement in the paper of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it faithfully. I am now in perfect health and do all my own work. I recommend it to others, and give you permission to publish this letter in your little book and in the newspapers, if you wish."

Why women will continue to suffer so long as more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For forty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc. If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lowell, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

SAYS HIS FAITH CAN'T BE SHAKEN

Halifax Man Believes Tanlac Will Rout Any Case of Rheumatism.

"Only those who have been racked with pain by rheumatism as I was, can fully appreciate the way I feel about Tanlac, the medicine that relieved me of all my pain and suffering, and made me a well man," said John T. Davis, who lives at 1-2-2 North Cliff Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"I was in a mighty bad way before I started on Tanlac," said Mr. Davis. "For three years I had suffered with rheumatism, and it seemed to be all over my body. But it troubled me most in the shoulders, they would go sore and stiff at times, that I couldn't raise my hands above my head, and when I moved my arms it was just as though someone was sticking a knife into them. I also had a dull, throbbing pain just like toothache in my arms and shoulders, that would keep me awake for hours, and sudden sharp pains in my legs and knees which would get so stiff that I could barely walk. I had little or no appetite fell off in weight and got so weak and run down it was just about all I could do to stay on the job and I tell you that some days I felt like life wasn't worth living."

"But now after taking seven bottles of Tanlac I am a well man and happy at the wonderful relief it has given me. I've got a fine appetite and can eat anything that is placed before me. I've already gained twelve pounds in weight and just feel full of energy and go all the time. But best of all, the rheumatism has left me entirely. My shoulders and legs are as supple as ever and I haven't had an ache or a pain of any sort in my body. Nothing will ever shake my faith in Tanlac after this for I've proved it myself, and have every confidence in recommending it to others."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and by the leading druggist in every town.

HE IS TIRED OF HIS JOB

(New York Sun-Header)

The American Farmer is sick and tired of the enormous tribe which reports for only a few hours a day on the job and which does mighty little work during those hours. The American farmer is mad, clean through over the fact that he puts in twelve and fourteen hours when organized skilled labor the country over puts in from 40 to 50 per cent less time and about 80 per cent fewer ticks. He has made up his mind that he will not work himself to a standstill to feed and clothe the millions of wage earners who spend a good portion of their time sticking for higher pay, and then when they get it will not earn it.

OHIO'S SEVENTH PRESIDENT

If either Senator Warren C. Harding or Governor Cox is elected next November he will be the seventh President Ohio has given the United States. Virginia heads the list with eight. All the Ohio Presidents so far have been Republicans.

Here are the Ohio Presidents: Ulysses S. Grant, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, William McKinley, William H. Taft.

From 1869 to 1881, twelve years, Ohio has the honor to being represented continuously by its sons in the White House. That was during the successive terms of Grant, Hayes and Garfield.

A recent invention is a vest pocket adding machine which is guaranteed to juggle with figures up to 50,000. The first Nova Scotia Egg-Laying Contest has proven an unqualified success. A second year has now been arranged for with an additional feature in the opportunity which owners of pens will have of mating their birds for hatches, under the best possible conditions.

In 1909, the average return per cow, in the best herd sending cream to the largest creamery in Nova Scotia, stood at $30.00. In 1919 it reached $208.43. In that period the value of butter fat a little more than doubled, while the production in this top rank of cows multiplied by three. Proportionate gain is possible to a multitude of herd owners in Nova Scotia.

A flood of enquiries poured into the office of the Secretary for Agriculture, following a short note recently issued through the press on potato spraying for prevention of rot. It is gratifying to have timely confirmation of the fact that potato growers are more than ever determined this year than ever before to save their crop.

trial. "Was that a fair deal? Shame on the man who would set such an example of unfairness to any boy, and then expect the boy to be square with him. The boy is well out of the employ of such a man."

What a joyful thing it is to be able to turn on our lights at any old time in the night. It makes one feel quite civilized when the baby has colic in the wee sma' hours of the morning to be able to reach him without stumbling across the room in the dark and stubbing one's toes on every intervening rocking chair or barking one's shins on the side of the crib. "Oh boy, ain't it a grand and glorious feeling" not to have to care if one's old flashlight battery is always burned out when most needed.

The only drawback perhaps lies in the fact that the young men do not feel in duty bound to leave the side of their true loves before the midnight hour, now as here-to-fore and consequently poor pa is compelled to pay the higher light bill. Winding the clock and putting the cat out doesn't any longer signify that the lights are about to go out and its time to go home. But won't it be fun to be able to dance until four a. m.!

Sometimes I fancy that our sidewalks and streets are not kept as scrupulously clean as those of some other towns of which I have occasion to get a bird's eye view. I wonder why? One citizen alone, even though a faithful officer, cannot keep the town clean any more than one man alone can gather all the news. Think it over and lend a hand.

There is one automobile law that ought to be enforced and I now refer to the headlight law. Several years ago, the legislature passed a law against glaring headlights and for a time the officers were hot on the trail of violators. For the past two years, its enforcement has gone by default and as a result one driving on the road at night encounters numberless machines with lights that for a time nearly blinds the operator driving in the opposite direction. Not only are such lights nuisances but are dangerous and every car owner ought to be made to equip his headlights with lenses that will comply with the law or else be prosecuted.

It rained on St. Swithins Day, as you no one doubt aware, and that was supposed to govern the weather for the next forty days. So it is supposed to be safe to reckon that the gardens and berry pastures will receive sufficient rain to bring forward the crops to maturity in proper shape, while the hours of clear weather gave hope to the vacationist that sufficient fair weather will be provided so that their pleasure will not be entirely spoiled.

St. Swithins was Bishop of Winchester, England, in 852 A.D. under the reign of King Egbert, tutor to the Prince Ethelwulf, heir to the throne, who when he succeeded made his tutor bishop as a reward for miracles of healing he had performed for the poor. The good bishop dying requested that his body be buried where people could walk over the turf of his grave and where the rain from the eaves could fall upon it. When the body was disinterred a century after his death, it is said that rain fell and delayed the cereals for 40 days. Hence the legend.

BEEKEEPING AND THE SUGAR SITUATION

(Experimental Farm Note.)

Save honey for winter stores.

With sugar over 20 cents a pound, and the outlook of a possibly higher price and uncertainty of supply, beekeepers will find it advisable to pay more attention than usual to the saving of wholesome honey for wintering their bees safely.

Each colony should have no less than 40 pounds of stores for winter. The honey gathered in June and July from alisk and white clover is perfectly wholesome and makes the finest winter stores. Most of the honey gathered from other abundant sources in June and July, are also wholesome, but honey gathered from mixed sources in August and September is, as a rule, less so, and is therefore liable to cause dysentery which will weaken or kill the colony before spring. Some kinds of fall honey are very injurious. However, buckwheat honey and the honey from certain species of goldenrod and aster that grow abundantly in dry situations, if it ripens before cold weather, are wholesome.

It would therefore be wise to save combs of above honey in order that several of them may be placed in the hive about the centre. These combs should be given early enough in the fall, that is to say, about the middle of September, to allow the bees time to empty a few cells to make a place for the winter cluster to occupy. Care should be taken that these combs of honey are taken from colonies that are entirely free from American foul-brood. It will be advisable also to save extra combs of honey sufficient to give each colony one more comb in spring, but the honey given in spring need not be of the best quality.

A strong colony of Italian bees containing a prolific young queen often has very little honey in the brood chamber when the supers are removed in the fall. A simple way to supply such a colony with suitable stores for the winter is to give or leave it a super full of clover honey.

When It All Started

When Adam met Eve he was bashful and shy,
And he stammered and blushed every time she came nigh.
Till at last he grew bold and began to pay court,
(You may put all your trust in this faithful report).
And he murmured to her on an evening serene—"Your the prettiest girl that I ever have seen!"
And that's how that started.

When Eve, with a beautiful blush on her face,
Yielded shyly and sweetly to Adam's embrace,
And put up her red lips for the true lover's pout
(You may set all this down as an absolute fact).
She inquired, while he breathed the fond names on his list:
"Have you said that to all the girls you have kissed?"
And that's how that started.

When Adam asked Eve if she would be his bride,
She looked up and looked down, and she sighed and she sighed.
And she let him take hold of her lily-white hand
(This is history now, as you must understand).
Then she said, in a voice that was dulcetly low:
"I must take time to think. 'Tis so sudden, you know."
And that's how that started.

When they had been married a few years or so,
Then Adam told Eve: "We're invited to go
To a dinner and dance with some friends down in Nod."
(This is truly authentic, although it sounds odd).
Eve replied with a sad and sorrowful air:
"I can't go. Don't you see I have nothing to wear?"
And that's how that started.

HOW WM. DENNIS CAME TO CANADA

His Newspaper Career

Great Success Attained—Not Conspicuous in the Senate

(Lucian in Vancouver Province)

Senator William Dennis, editor and proprietor of the Halifax Herald, leaves more friends than most men do when they die. Among business men he was known as a remarkable successful man of affairs, among newspapermen as an uncommonly alert and competent journalist, who disregarded conventions of his craft in all directions, and yet produced a paper which people who thought less of rivals. In politics he was independent, positive, frank and loyal; in disposition full of kindness and geniality; in friendship constant and helpful; everywhere honest and in all circumstances fearless.

The writer was associated with Senator Dennis on the same newspaper when both were young, and the newspaper too for that matter, and knew him ever after, though separated sometimes by the width of a province, sometimes by two or three provinces, sometimes by a continent, but never knew him to do anything mean or ungenerous. For at least fifteen years Senator Dennis was crippled with a painful malady, but there was no more energetic and vigorous worker in Canada, or one who thought less of a week's journey by rail or motor, or of thirty to forty hours constant work, or of defending a libel suit, or any other task or trouble which would worry many a young and well man. He made the Herald one of the finest Canadian newspaper properties, was able to stay away since the war began $100,000 or more for patriotic purposes and for university endowments.

This was accomplished practically during some twenty-five years in a comparatively small city, crowded with competitive newspapers, and in spite of two disasters by fire and such other troubles as come to publishers.

The newspaper interest and opportunity he hoped to leave to his son, who gave great promise of effectiveness. Cheerfully Senator Dennis parted with the lad when he went to the war, and after he fell the reply of the father to those who sent their poor message of sympathy was, "I would rather a thousand times he should be buried in France than be one of those who stayed at home."

When Mr. Dennis was called to the Senate, someone wrote of him that he had come as a boy from his English home on the advice of some American traveller and that he had found his way to Canada. As a matter of fact, this immigration was one of the fruits of a campaign of one of Dr. Edwin Clay, then a Canadian immigration officer, who was one of the remarkable orators of his time. That was fifty years ago, when immigration officers did their work on the platform instead of by literature sent out from offices.

Years after that I heard Dr. Clay speak in large city churches. I heard him talk on medicine to men in a lumber camp. I heard him preach in the sail loft of a shipyard, and can well understand how his account of Canada should impress the mind of young William Dennis, then doing some work deemed appropriate for boys, in his south of England city.

On the day after the lecture, the lad doing some errand for his employer, met the lecturer in the street and stopped him to find out when the first ship sailed for Canada. The ship sailed in a day or two and William Dennis on her. He did not go farther than the port of Halifax to find a job, and before long had something to do about the office of the Herald newspaper. It did not take him long to get on the reporting staff, which then probably included a grown man and this boy. He was young and very small for his age, and someone applied to him the definition of a flea—"Infinitesimal in stature but of diabolical activity."

His activity, in youth, maturity and advancing age, in sickness and health, in poverty and wealth, was

WHAT IS WRONG?

"In a little village in this country there are two churches," says the Lindsay, Ont. Post. "The total attendance on Sunday would not average one hundred people. Fifty years ago there were four churches in this village, and on Sunday every church was filled. Twenty years ago in Lindsay there was a far greater number of people attending church services than there are to day. What is wrong? When the war was at its worst stage, when the ships were being sunk by the dozen every day, when the British, French, Canadian and Belgian armies were being driven back towards Paris and the Channel ports, it was quite common to hear people remark that this would be a different world to live in after the war. What do we see? 'X's, but instead of getting better, it is gradually getting worse. Discontent, unrest, crime and vice are on the increase. Bolshevism, which is merely human nature asserting itself, is breaking out everywhere, and the end is not yet. The teachings of Christ are ignored. Prosperity and selfishness are dwarfing the soul. 'Ye would not come unto Me that ye might have life.'" diabolical in its intensity, though I am glad to say not in its character.

Once in his younger days he went with a large excursion to the end of steel on the prairie somewhere about Brandon. The rising city of Winnipeg pleased him, and he concluded that he would not return, but joined himself to a newspaper there. The love of the seaside, and the bursting of the first Winnipeg boom, caused him to change his design, and two years later he returned as head of the news department of the Herald.

He took an interest in city affairs became an alderman, bought land with the surplus, built two or three houses and sold them at a profit. A few years later he bought a half interest in the paper at an exceedingly reasonable price and took over the management.

On the death of his partner, Mr. J. Stewart, he bought the other half for about ten times as much. He was not satisfied until the Herald owned the whole, and occupied part of the largest and finest stone business building in the city.

It could not be said that he was a conspicuous member of the Senate. That was not his business. Rather he was a silent member. But sometimes he spoke to a considerable purpose. I think the speech which attracted most attention will not be found in the Senate Hansard. My recollection is that the Senate voted by a majority to expunge the record of his remarks concerning a former Chief Justice of Canada, to whom was paid $2,000 a year for attending the sittings of the judicial committee of the Privy Council. The money was taken for two years in which the chief did not attend the court. It was the claim of the chief justice that this allowance was in the nature of a salary and not dependent on his attending the sittings. The senator asserted it was simply the case of an officer taking an expense allowance without incurring the expense, and he used some plain terms in expressing his opinion. In the end the money was refunded, and the allowance was never taken again in such circumstances. But the case was one of those which permitted a difference of opinion.

Sensor Dennis would probably be regarded in his later days as the most eminent citizen of Halifax. It is safe to say that few have been followed to the grave by a larger number of sincere personal mourners. This estimate may be affected a little by the friendship of a lifetime, but it seems to me to be just.

An ordinary egg shell, on which is delicately painted a miniature copy of a well-known Watteau painting, was sold recently in Paris for $5000.

The sheriffs annually pay into the British treasury six horseshoes, with the proper number of nails, as sent for a piece of ground in the parish of St. Clement's.

The flute owes its name to the "fluta", a species of eel found in the Mediterranean, whose sides are marked with seven spots corresponding to the seven flute-holes.

The British Museum possesses the oldest work of fiction known to exist. It is the "Tale of Two Brothers," written over three thousand years ago by the librarian to King Merneptah, the supposed Pharaoh of the Exodus.

MILLION DOLLAR SUIT OVER WRECK OF CIRCUS TRAIN

The Hagenbeck-Wallace circus organization, which showed here recently, sustained an enormous loss two years ago when its train was wrecked on the Michigan City (Ind.) Railway, at Evansville (Ind.), 107 persons losing their lives, including the wife and two children of the circus postmaster, who led the parade through the St. John streets, riding a bicycle.

A large part of the circus was destroyed. The administrators of the estates of those who lost their lives have just instituted ninety suits against the railroad, aggregating more than $1,000,000 alleging that the accident was the fault of the railway.

When the employees of the circus sat in their dining tent on Prince Edward Island recently there was almost complete silence. It was the second anniversary of the horrible disaster. The head quarters is at Baden, Ind.

In many cities in Europe the owners of houses bearing No. 13 are allowed to change the figure upon a simple application to the proper authorities.

Ancient Greeks and Romans frequently mixed their wine with water, the latter being supposed to promote digestion and to keep the wine from "mounting upwards."

AUTO SPEEDERS MUCH IN EVIDENCE

Several Serious Accidents Averted of Late By Very Narrow Margins—Civic Authorities Should Round Up The Offenders and Make It Warm For Them.

The Courier has for years been calling attention to the gross violation in Digby of the automobile laws of the province.

By the law not being observed only a few serious accidents have up to date occurred in the county, but this can be attributed much more to good luck than good management. Autos are driven at altogether too high a rate of speed on our streets and it is an unusual thing to hear a driver sound the horn when approaching a cross street. Coming down Montague Row from Loug Lodge toward the railway crossing, all drivers of autos should toot horns when approaching Warwick street and the Myrtle House grounds. How many do so? Not one in a hundred.

Many serious accidents have been averted by very narrow margins, but close calls do not count. Some day, however, and there is no telling how soon, something is going to happen. Under existing conditions it is almost impossible to expect otherwise.

The corner of Mount Street and Water street is a dangerous spot where drivers of autos on approaching should exercise special precaution.

an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. This is a bad corner and somebody is going to get hurt there. The Church street and Sydney street corners are two more places where the speed maniac seems to think it perfectly safe to burn a little extra gas. These are tricky corners that should be watched very closely.

Unfortunately, in every community there are automobilists who have no regard for the rights of others. People of this calibre should not be allowed to run at large.

It is time the Town authorities took up the matter of auto speeding and the general observance of the auto laws and see that all offenders were rounded up.

Recently, at one of the towns on the Canadian border, a goat severely butted a hunchback, and a sharp-eyed customs official perceived that, succeeding the assault, the man's hump was out of place. Upon further examination it was found that the man was perfectly well formed, through diminutive, and that his "hump", when detached, was a two-quart receptacle filled with whiskey.

The flight of a train is like the throb of an enormous pulse in the arteries of the nation. To slow the beat is to slow the life of the country.

It can carry 2,000 tons of wheat.

In 1913 its engine could have been built for $34,700—to-day $81,000; its box cars for $1,138.85 each—to-day $3,797.50.

In other words the rolling stock alone in the movement of 2,000 tons of wheat has increased in cost from $85,948.25 to $251,887.50 or 193.1%!

The labor bill of the railways has risen in the same period from $115,000,000 to $231,000,000,—101%!

The cost of rails for a mile of track has gone up from $9,497 to $19,680,—107%!

No cost has been unaffected by the general rise.

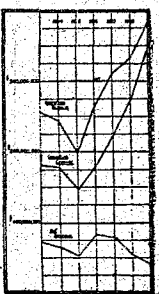

Operating expenses continue to rise more rapidly than Gross earnings. Net earnings are sinking at an alarming rate.

These are the facts that lie behind the application for increased freight rates for the railways.

"Now—here is Granville," he replied. "You see," he continued, warning a bit to the subject, "when I was prospecting that creek where we made the cleanup last summer, I ran across a well-defined quartz lead. I picked out a few samples in my pockets, and I happened to show them as well as one or two of the nuggets to some of these fellows at the club a while back. Lorimer took a piece of the quartz and had it assayed. It looks up as something pretty big. So he and Brooks and a couple of other fellows went me to go ahead and organize and locate a group of claims in there. Twenty or thirty thousand dollars capital might make 'em all rich. Of course, the place end of it will be the big thing while the lode is being developed. Getting the start is easy. These fellows I've talked to are dead anxious to get in."

"But—her knowledge of business methods suggested a difficulty—"You can't sell stock in a business that has no real foundation—yet. Don't you have to locate these claims first?" "Wise old fellow," you have the idea, all right," he smiled. "But this is not a stock-jobbing proposition. I wouldn't be in on it if it were, believe me. It's to be a corporation, where we spread six men will own all the stock that's issued. And so far as the claims are concerned, I've got Whitely Lewis located in Fort George, and I've been burning the wires and spending a bundle of real money getting him grub-staked. He has got four men besides himself all ready to hit the trail as soon as I give the word. 'You won't have to go!' she put in quickly.

"No," he murmured. "It isn't necessary at this particular stage of the game. But I wouldn't mind popping a whip over a good string of dogs just the same."

"Bar-r-r!" she shivered involuntarily. "Four hundred miles across that deep snow, through that steady, flesh-eating cold. I don't envy them the journey."

She came over and stood by him, playfully ruffling his brown hair with her fingers. "I'm glad you've found something to locate that put-up energy of yours on, Billy-boy," she said. "You'll make a success of it. I know. I don't see why you shouldn't make a success of your kind of business. But I didn't think you'd ever tackle business. You have such peculiar views about business and business practice."

"I despise the ordinary business ethics," she returned sharply. "But I can exploit the resources of nature. And that is my plan. If we make money it won't be flayed by a complex process from the other fellow's pockets. It won't be wealth created by shearing lambs in the market, by sweatshop labor, or adulterated food, or exorbitant rental of filthy dwellings. I'm not interested in getting into it with them. But I promise action of some sort—and I have to do something like spring."

In the spring! That brief phrase set Hazel to sober thinking. With April or May Bill would spread his wings for the North. There would be no more staying him than the flight of the wild geese to the ready meeting grounds could be stayed. Well, a summer in the North would not be so bad, she reflected. But she hated to think of the isolation, the grief here, the constant exchanging her beautifully furnished apartment for a log cabin in the woods.

Still she had hopes. If he plunged into business associations with him, she could go with him. She had seen that of that group, there was no telling what might happen. His interests might become permanently identified with Granville.

Bill informed her from time to time as to the progress of his venture. The company was duly incorporated, with an authorized capital of one hundred thousand dollars, five thousand dollars worth of stock being taken out by each on a cash basis—the remaining seventy-five thousand lying in the company treasury, to be held or sold for development purposes as the five saw fit when work began to show what the claims were capable of producing.

In early March came a telegram from Whitely Lewis saying that he had asked the claims both place and lode; that he was bound out by the Telegraph Trail to file at Hazelton. Bill showed her the message—wired from Station Six.

"I wish I could have been in on it—that was some trip," he said—and there was a trace of discontent in his tone. "I don't fancy anybody else for me. It was sure a man's job to cross the Klappan in the dead of winter."

The filing completed, there was ample work in the way of getting out and whipsawing timber to keep the five men busy till spring—the five who were on the ground. Lewis sent that thirty feet of snow lay in the gold-bearing brand. And the last they heard from him. He was a performer, Bill said, not a correspondent.

So in Granville the affairs of the Free Gold Mining company remained at a standstill until the spring frosts should peel off the winter blanket of the North.

Ultimately, spring overcame the eastern prairie. And when the snows of winter successfully gave way to muddy streets and then to clean pavements in the City of Granville, a new gift sign was lettered across the windows of the brokerage office in which Paul Lorimer was housed.

So it ran. Bill was commissioned in the army of business at last.

CHAPTER XV.

"A Business Journey." "I have to go to the Klappan," Bill apprised his wife one evening. "Want to come along?"

Hazel hesitated. Her first instinct was to refuse. She had no desire to retrace a net-working trail. But neither did she wish to be separated from him.

"I see you don't," he observed dryly. "I wish I could say that I blame you. It's a stiff trip."

"I'm sorry I can't feel any enthusiasm for such a journey," she remarked candidly. "I could go as far as the coast with you, and meet you there when you come out. How long do you expect to be in there?"

"I don't know exactly," he replied. "I'm not going to get out of it until I'm taking the Adirondack-Post George Trail. I have to take a pack train and more men and get grub started on a decent scale."

"But you won't have to say 'I'm all summer and oversee the work, will you?' she inquired anxiously. "I should," he said.

For a second or two he drummed on the table top. "But is there any real necessity for you to stay on the ground?" He pursued her own line of thought. "I should think an undertaking of this size would justify hiring an expert to take charge of the actual mining operations. Won't you have this end of it to look after?"

"Lorimer and Brooks are eminently capable of upholding the dignity and importance of this sign they've got smeared across the windows downtown," he observed curiously. "The chief labor of the office they've set up will be to divide the proceeds. The work will be done and the money made in the Klappan Range. You save that, don't you?"

"I'm not stupid," she pouted. "I'm going to improve," he said. "I think on the whole I'll be just as well if you don't go. Stay here and enjoy yourself. I'll transfer some more money to your account. I think I'll do that for the child."

She followed him out into the hall, and as he wriggled into his coat, she had an impulse to throw her arms around his neck and declare, in all sincerity, that she was a Klappan or to the north pole or any place on earth with him, if he wanted her. But by some peculiar feminine instinct, she was deterred, and she was content that if Bill were away from her in a few weeks he would be all the more glad to get back. That closed her mouth. It was not wise to be too resentful, nor uttered any words of wisdom she had garnered from the wives of her circle.

So she kissed Bill good-by at the station next door with perfect good humor and no parting emotion of any particular keenness. And if he were a trifle sorer he showed no sign of resentment, nor uttered any words of wisdom she had garnered from the wives of her circle.

Then he, his absence made less difference than Hazel had anticipated. She had secretly expected to be very lonely at first. And she was not. Even when in her hand she held a telegram dated at a point five hundred or a thousand miles or double that distance away she did not experience the feeling of complete isolation. She was near. Only at night, when there was no long arm to pillow her head, no good-night kiss as she dozed into slumber, she missed him, and she had to read and read.

Early in June came a brief wire from the Free Gold Mining company set up a mild ripple of excitement all over Granville. It was exhibiting in their office window a forty-pound heap of coarse gold; raw, yellow gold, just as it had come from the sluice. Every day a crowd of men stood gazing at the treasure. Bill had forwarded the first clean-up.

And close on the heels of this—ten days later, to be exact—came home. "You great bear," Hazel laughed, in the shelter of his encircling arms. "It's good to see you again."

She pushed herself back a little and surveyed him admiringly with a gratified sense of proprietorship. The cheeks of him were tanned to a healthy brown, his eyes clear and shining. The offending flesh had fallen away, and in its stead a firm, powerful jaw. He radiated boundless vitality, strength, alertness, that perfect co-ordination of mind and body that is bred of facing resources along rough ways. She thrilled at the touch of his hand, was content to lay her head on his shoulder and forget everything in the joy of his physical assurance.

They elected to spend the evening quietly at home, as they used to do. To Hazel it seemed quite like old times. Bill told her of the Klappan country, and their prospects at the mine.

"It's going to be a mighty big thing," he declared.

"I'm so glad," said Hazel. "We've got a heap of our claim. Whitely Lewis and the original stakemen hold an interest in their claim. I, acting as agent for these other fellows in the company, staked five more acres to the eight-acre claim. I believe me, things were booming when I left. And, say, I went in by the ranch. Old Jake has a fine garden. He's still passing away with the male and Gretchen, our cow. I offered him a chance to make a fat little stake at the mine, but he didn't want to leave the ranch. Great old fellow, Jake. Something of a philosopher in his way. Pretty wise old head. He'll make good, all right."

In the morning, Bill ate his breakfast and started downtown. "That's the dickens of being a business man," he complained to Hazel, in the hallway. "It rides a man, once it gets hold of him. Adios, little person. I'll get out for lunch, business or no business."

Eleven-thirty brought him home: preoccupied and frowning. And he carried his frown and his preoccupation to the table.

"Whatever is the matter, Bill?" Hazel anxiously inquired.

"Oh, I've got a nasty bunch that there's a nigger in the woodpile," he replied.

"What that was all he vouchsafed. He finished his luncheon and left the house. He was scarcely out of sight when Jimmie Brooks' rumpshot drew up to the door. He had a note late in his pocket. He was under the living room."

Healthy Mothers Healthy Babies

Every true mother realizes the fact that her baby's health depends upon her own, that the very vitality of her child is influenced by her own physical condition. How important it is, therefore, to guard against any derangement of the female organs, which induce general weakness, nervousness, constant fatigue and inability to properly care for her child. Please remember, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and strength to thousands of such mothers.

Mitchell, Ind.—"My wife, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me so much during the time I was looking forward to the coming of my little one that I am recommending it to other expectant mothers. Before taking it, I suffered with neuralgia so badly that I thought I could not live, but after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely relieved of neuralgia. I had gained in strength and lost weight 10 pounds and I feel better than I have for a long time. I never had any medicine do me so much good."—Mrs. Frank Mitchell, Ind.

Good health and after maternity is a most important factor to both mother and child, and many letters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., telling of health restored during this Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Banff and Its Canyons

One of the best ways for the tourist to see the wonders of the Rocky Mountains is to make his headquarters at Banff (which is approximately 50 miles from Calgary, on the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway) and from there take trips by automobile or carriage to the different canyons and lakes; he will thus be able to see the by-ways, as well as the highways, of this enchanting district.

One of the most delightful auto drives in the vicinity of Banff is that to Johnson's Canyon, and the tourist will be more than repaid if he includes this outing in his programme, as he will be privileged to see some of the grandest scenery in the Rocky Mountain Park.

What can be more exhilarating to the nerves than an auto drive through pure fresh mountain air? The road to Johnson's Canyon is an ideal one for motoring, skirting the base of the Vermilion range, following the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway along the right bank of the Bow River. Here nature is found in all her varying moods and most alluring charms, presenting a perfect panorama of dazzling snow-capped mountain peaks, with glimpses of valleys, pine-clad slopes, and towering torrents.

As we sweep round sharp corners mountains, goat, sheep and deer are surprised, look with startled eyes at intruders, then bound up to safety among the higher crannies of the mountains.

Further on the Sawback Ranges come into view, the peaks being jagged and rugged as the name implies, mountains like cathedrals with pointed spires standing out boldly against the deep blue of the western sky.

All along the road the eye is charmed by the vista of the beautiful Bow River. Looming straight ahead a wonderful snow-capped mountain, the Castle Mountain, 9,099 feet high. One might say this mountain stands out in isolated position, resembling a fortified castle of the middle ages. Its sides rise in galleries or tiers of solid rocky bastions, forming one of rugged castles on the Elbow or the Banff.

After a most delightful drive Johnson's Canyon is reached.

This wonderful work of Nature battles description. Between gigantic cliffs of rock a stormy turbulent mountain stream hurries past, each moment color, forces its way down the canyon, every turn of the rugged descent a fine cascade, over which rustic bridges have been thrown to enable visitors to view the canyon and take from different points of vantage. The whole scene compares favorably, overlooking rocks, huge trees, and waterfalls.

The thundering waters of the creek rush over the rocky bed to the mouth of the canyon. The beauty of such a scene is awe-inspiring.

The return journey to Banff is an enjoyable and the driving drive. The stillness of evening is enchanting, and the rays of the glowing sunset and the snow-capped peaks of the Vermilion Range, and reflect purple shadows in the depths of the Bow River. As the wind sweeps down towards Mount Banff the head in the dim distance, while the great mountain looms grand over the Bow River, Tunnel Mountain appearing like a more distant and rugged peak.

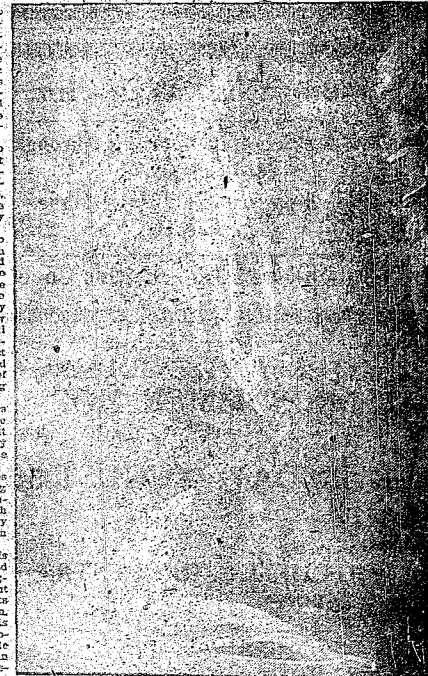

Banff is now reached and the tourist, if he has still time to have an evening stroll, or attend a musical evening at the C.P.R. Hotel and thus bring a delightful day to a close.

There are other places of interest in this wonderful district, and no visitor should leave Banff without taking a drive to see the "Sundance Canyon," immortalized in the story of the famous novel, "The Pilot of the Sundance Trail."

This canyon is within easy distance of the town, situated only five miles beyond Banff Bridge on the left bank of the Bow River.

While not as extensive or so vast as Johnson's Canyon yet it is well worth a visit, for it was here, upon the plateau of precipitous rocks above the falls, that the Red Men used to perform the barbaric "sun dance" in all their "warrior and dance" in days gone by.

Looking from the canyon across the Bow River a splendid view of Mt. Edith is obtained, outlined in bold relief, giving a much better idea of the height and rugged grandeur of this peak than is obtained from the right bank of the river.

Dartmouth Woman Gets Rid Of Indigestion and Gains Twenty Three Pounds.

The story of how a young wife, who for four years has been a martyr to indigestion and its attendant evils, has been restored to perfect health and strength again, is one of the most pleasing which it has been our privilege to publish.

The following statement was made by her husband, Mr. Edward Ford of 34 North Street, Dartmouth, N. S., who is employed by the Imperial Oil Co., in Halifax, a few days ago.

"This is the seventh battle of Tanlac that I have fought for my wife, and I am more than gratified with the result. It may seem hardly creditable, but nevertheless it is true that she has actually gained twenty-three pounds in weight and is in better health to-day than she has been for years."

"For four years now she has been a sufferer from indigestion and stomach trouble. She was never able to eat a meal without being in misery for hours afterwards. She had to force herself to eat in order to live but whatever she ate only caused her pain and distress. She was also subject to severe sick headaches, and her nerves were so bad that she could not sleep at night, but would wake up every few minutes and many a night would hardly close her eyes at all. I am safe in saying that she hasn't known what it was to be really well for a single day during the past two years, and for over a year now she has been in such a weakened-down condition that she couldn't do her housework and was only just about able to keep up and about. She had fallen off until she only weighed a hundred and one pounds and was almost a wreck."

"Many medicines prescribed for her ever seemed to meet her case, and at last in sheer desperation I decided to give Tanlac a trial. Its effect was immediate and indeed truly marvelous. The indigestion and stomach troubles were soon overcome and in the long she had a keen appetite and found that she could eat meats, fruit or vegetables without having to suffer from it afterwards. Her nerves have got steady and strong and she can now sleep fine. As I said before, she has gained twenty-three pounds in weight and is so much stronger that she can now do all her own housework. To-day she is the picture of health, and I have to thank Tanlac for it."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and by the leading druggist in every town.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS

When you use a lead pencil these days you may be holding in your fingers what was once a part of an old fence. Red cedar, from which pencils are made, is scarce and high. In the early days there was enough of it and in the West cedar trees were so abundant that the settlers cut them down and worked them into fence rails and now these rails and logs from old buildings are finding a ready sale at from $6 to $10 per thousand pounds—not feet. In some cases the rails used in fencing a tract of land are worth more than the market value of the land itself only a few years ago.

What did you say about this world owing you a living. Now stop and think just what you mean and just what are you giving to this old earth in full return for what she owes to you, for if she finds the charge correct, she'll surely pay what's due. But if you've bolstered up your bills you'll find she keeps account of all the credits due to you; she has the full amount and it's correct; there's no mistakes; her balance is always true, and you'll receive your just reward for everything you do. I've heard a lot of fellows a-kicking 'bout their luck, and yet they loaf about streets and never earn their cluck, but just find fault and grumble because someone else made good by minding his own business, and kept busy saving wood. You'll always find the kicker is the one that is contented is the man who always works; he just takes things as he can, and this old earth will surely find a living for that man. But she'll never pay a farthing to the one that wastes his time finding fault with everything, and never tries to climb above his poor existence by a little honest toil because he is afraid his fine appearance he might lose. He is just another parasite a-savering the life of others who are struggling in this busy world of strife. But this world owes them nothing, they are stealing what they get, but time will bring them troubles and old age will bring regrets, while the man who did his duty, kept plugging right along will surely reap his harvest as the sounding of the gong. Now, don't you be mistaken in what nature owes to you, for if you're producing nothing, why of course there's nothing due; she has plenty of the worker, but nothing for the loaf, so if she owes you a living, get right down and dig it out.

UNCLE JIM.

The good old lemon, which saged so high during the war owing to the few imports, has now come down to earth again and is being sold at a very moderate price. It is one of the few commodities that has gone back to pre-war prices. And it is surely helpful these warm days in making life the more worth living.

IS RELIGION LOSING ITS HOLD

All depends on the point of view. To the man or woman whose concept of religion is a mere formal observance of ritualistic worship or the harmonious and unchallenged grind of elaborate ecclesiastical machinery, there appears an alarming tendency toward disintegration and a threatening increase in independent thinking. If by "religion" is meant the practical working out in every-day life of the teachings of the world's greatest Redeemer and friend, both in the average individual life and in society in the aggregate, then there will be found an innumerable throng of optimists eager to claim that never, since the history of man began to be written, have brotherhood and humanity, love and unselfish sacrifice carried hope and cheer to so many and served in so practical a way as a basis of enduring faith.

There are pessimists, plenty of them, who prefer to believe that an Omnipotent God is failing in his effort to win the world to the righteous life. If their gloomy view be accepted, the power of evil seems to have all but triumphed over the power of good, and injustice is winning the victory over equity and truth.

Very much depends on the kind of goggles a man wears. All looks bluish to the man who peers at the world and his fellowman through the goggles of a yellowish brown hue. It changes the outlook amazingly to take off the yellowish-brown goggles. People who groan for the world do comparatively little to make it either brighter, better or more just. One who goes through life whistling does more for his fellowman than thousands who top themselves out in sackcloth to wait the crack of doom. If a man can't whistle, he can sing, or at least smile occasionally. He can gaze up at the floating clouds or the stars rather than peering through the manhole into the sewer.

This is a better world to live in than ever it was before. There is more justice in it, more humanity, more moral heroism, more spiritual hunger, more faith and more unselfish love. The things that are crumbling away in religion are the things that cannot endure the test of real service to humanity. Nothing is being lost that is worth transporting over into a new century. The Almighty is taking better care of humanity than it knows.

THE SCHOOL TEACHER AND THE LOCAL PAPER

In the university of Wisconsin Press Bulletin appears the following paragraph:

"More power to the real friends of the country press—now is the time to rally around your local paper and do everything possible to insure their weathering the present situation. The community without a newspaper is no place in which to live."

Commenting on this matter, the Belleville Intelligencer says: "There is a great truth in this counsel. The teacher's work is closely linked up with the work of the newspaper; one cannot fail to influence the other. In many cases the teacher takes a real interest in the local paper, and from time to time makes contributions of news and articles and suggestions to the editor. On the other hand the newspaper gives plenty of space to school news, and gladly chronicles anything of interest to the pupils and their homes. Sometimes the teacher assumes a supercilious attitude to the local paper of one of complete indifference, but this, surely, is not common. Teachers everywhere should study their responsibilities as citizens, and one avenue for their community spirit is the promotion of the welfare of the home paper, especially at this time when the struggle for existence on account of the scarcity and the price of paper is so intense."

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

After Years of Suffering with Dyspepsia, this Fruit Medicine Gave Relief

MILE ANTOINETTE BOUCHER

917 Dorion St., Montreal.

"I am writing to tell you that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' for this remedy relieved me when I had abandoned all hope of ever recovering my health."

I suffered terribly with Dyspepsia. I had it for years and all the medicines I took did not do me any good.

I read something about 'Fruit-a-tives' being good for all Stomach Troubles and Disorders of Digestion so I tried them. After finishing a few boxes, I was entirely relieved of the Dyspepsia and my general health was restored.

I thank the great fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', for this wonderful relief."

NOVA SCOTIA CROP CONDITIONS

The Secretary for Agriculture has received from correspondents in various parts of the province, reports up to July 10th. All correspondents refer to the inadequate rainfall to date, and state that the crop outlook is serious if the drought continues much longer. With a moderate rainfall during the next few weeks, however, present conditions are such as to warrant the expectation of at least a good average harvest of practically all farm crops.

Hay, which looked very unpromising three weeks ago is now averaged at 85 per cent of last year's bumper crop. Last year's hay crop, by the way, was about 25 per cent larger than that of the previous year. There are some local areas, such as North Inverness, where the rainfall has been unusually light, and the hay is consequently in a very poor condition. Even with the most favorable weather from this crop, little more than two-thirds of a crop can be expected in these areas. Oats and other cereals, potatoes and root crops are reported to be, in the main, well up to the average. With favorable weather conditions during the remainder of the season, these will yield bumper crops.

The apple prospect is variously estimated in different districts from 45 per cent to 90 per cent with a general average of 65 per cent as compared with 1919. It will be remembered that the apple crop of last year was about double that of any previous year for some time back. With respect to apples it may be well to point out that there is sure to be a heavy drop in yield, with smaller fruit, should there be long continued dry weather.

Pastures are reported slightly below last year's quality, averaging 90 per cent, with some districts giving a much lower estimate. Notwithstanding this, Creamery Managers report an increase of 40 per cent over last year's business. While some of this gain is due to an enlarged patronage, there is also a marked increase of output from former patrons.

Taking it all in all, present crop reports must be regarded as reasonably favorable, with a very great deal depending upon weather conditions during next month.

Baby-carriages are now propelled by electricity.

In Japan the wedding feast usually lasts eight days.

To Europeans in India the wild bee is more dangerous than the snake.

In Greece a girl's dowry consists of household furniture and linen rather than money.

Although the fly yields a delicate perfume, in toilet goods the odor is always limited.

In olden times in Europe a royal dish was prepared from thin slices of young deerstags, these having been previously fried.

Great Britain spends $240,000,000 a year on sports, the largest item being horseracing, which accounts for a quarter of the full amount.

CANADIAN FISHERIES GAIN

Fiscal Year Ended in March Shows Tremendous Increase Over 1917.

Canadian fisheries for the fiscal year ending March 1, produced in commercial revenue in excess of $60,000,000, according to an official announcement made to-day. This is an increase of $25,000,000 over the amount for the fiscal year ending March, 1917. The export trade in fish to the last fiscal year was worth $40,687,172, an increase of over 100 per cent. in value as compared with 1914. The increase over the preceding year was in excess of $4,000,000.

The export trade with the United Kingdom increased from $6,726,389 in 1914 to $9,815,979 in 1920. The trade with the United States jumped from $5,344,355 to $17,180,250 in the same time. The great increase in sales to the United States has been due to the sales of salmon which increased in value from $115,560 in 1914, to $12,067,319 in 1920. A span of six years has shown a jump of nearly 30 per cent. in the value of dry salted cod, ling, hake, and pollock shipped into the United States.

Trade authorities look with some disfavor upon the increased trade with the United States because a large quantity of salmon and other fish imported from Canada is exported again. Statistics indicate that the premium on American money is attracting Canadian trade to the exclusion of other markets.

THE ST. JOHN EXHIBITION-- EDUCATIONAL DEPT.

The St. John Exhibition Association are attempting this year a display in the Natural History Department, that will be more comprehensive and of greater educational value than anything that has been attempted for some years. This Exhibit, which will be under the able management of Dr. Wm. McIntosh, creator of the National History Society, will deal with the Minerals, Forests, and Animals, Bird and Insect life of the Province. It is planned to make the Exhibit not only educational, but also extremely practicable; e.g. in the matter of our forest wealth—exhibits will include a section of the tree in its natural state, the polished grain, a legend showing in what sections of North America the species is found, specimens of the manufactured products obtained from that particular tree, with a classification of the products, those manufactured here as distinguished from those made elsewhere. The object is to bring clearly home to the people of this province the extent to which the raw materials are being exported and the profits of the manufacture reaped by others; in short, the Exhibit is being planned with the definite object of showing the people of the Maritime Provinces the possibilities latent in these Provinces and the enormous wealth the Provincial Government is giving every co-operation it can to the project.

QUAINT PRAISES IN NOVA SCOTIA

Section of Country Which Seems to Have Language Of Its Own.

There are many quaint expressions peculiar to Nova Scotia, some of which are heard only in certain countries or in places where there has been perpetuated by former residents of the locality.

"Would you take off your things?" is a common invitation to the caller in this province, though in some parts of the country it would be unusual. When a housewife here changes her abode, she moves her "things" and when going on a journey, she packs her "things" in a grip.

In the country it frequently rains "pitchforks" and "barren shovels" and sometimes "cats and dogs." The most intensive expressions of the native, however, are that it is raining "like Sam Hall" or like "falling possessed."

Many primitive sayings are restricted wholly to the agricultural population and among these are utterances whose provincialism is not apparent to the speaker whose ear has become accustomed to them. "Get out" is commonly used to express incredulity and in remote districts "du tell" is still good form in the best circles.

Why in addition to other distinctive features the taint of insincerity should attach to the climate is not understood but it is quite comprehensible but "as crazy as a bed bug" implies the imperative need of an alienist, while "as crazy as a coot" is equally forcible.

"It's high time you did" means that it is a matter for regret if you don't and "how you talk" is indicative of surprise. "I don't know as I can" suggests caution, while "apple pie order" signifies neatness.

Thrifty habits of the rural deacon have resulted in the perversion of the noun and its use as a verb is well understood in some sections. To "deacon" a calf is to knock it in the head when born, hence, "deaconed" veal. To "deacon" stawberries, a custom more honored in the observance than in the breach, is to put the largest ones to extend one's favor to include a portion of the highway.

When a farmer is stiring from laborious work, he announces that he is "most dead beat" or "bushed" and asks some one to "spell" him—to relieve him by taking a turn at the work. When a peasant "sweats like a bull" and when he "talks turkey," he says things to please his auditors.

When angry he may be said to be "mad as a hatter" or a "beaver" although the application is not apparent to the philologist. To go into a passion is to "go into the handle" and his oath varies in intensity from "I swear, I am, I am, dog-gone, and 'Blame it, to 'Dadfectet."

Another colloquialism in frequent use not only in rural communities but in the province generally, is "at that." It is employed to express merit where none might be presumed, as, "he's lazy, but a decent chap at that."

"He's up and doing" is an expression familiar to everyone and its meaning is synonymous with the rustic "head up and tail over the dasher."

Deception is characterized by the idioms, "Skulduggery," "Shenanigans," and "hornswoggle." To attack an object forcibly is to go at it "full chisel" or "bell bent for election" and to be thrifty is to "fore-bake." If one is indisposed, it is possible that his liver may be "outer kilter" and one who is lazy is a "doitile-coot."

One marked characteristic of the Nova Scotian is his modesty when asking a favor. He never asks one to "give" him anything, no matter how trifling. If a match is required he always asks to "borrow" one. If it's a glass of water, he invariably asks for a little." If he desires to borrow a newspaper he merely wishes to "take a peek at it."

There are also many peculiarities of pronunciation, in which the legendary nasal twang is perceptible, in use in pastoral sections. The more common are the use of "airly" for early "deestrick for district, sass" for sauce, "sartin" for certain, "suthin" for something "wall" for well and "campfire for canphor."

The folklore of Nova Scotia, though, is not confined to rural communities, nor to the illiterate—not by any manner of means. And it's safe to say that the reader if a Nova Scotian will not protest the "any manner of means." Who does not know a "cat-nac" is a short doze or that a "whooper" is a big lie. "What are you driving at?" is as staple as baked beans on Sunday morning and "What are you going to 'tax me'?" is a daily inquiry.

The use of the word "why" as a preface to a reply to a question of information is quite common. "How do you get to Bear River from here?" inquires an autoist. "Why," you go out Warwick street and turn off" is the response.

If one is accustomed to finding fault with trivial matters, he's a "fuss-budget." If in good financial circumstances he's "well off"; if not he's down at the heel. An unusual occurrence is apt to call forth the expression, "I never saw the beat of it." As expressing inferiority, one is asked to "take a back seat," and a limitation of information is indicated by "for all that I know."

The elegant threat "I'll whale the life out of you," probably has its origin in the mispronunciation of wale—a mark of the eye. To "hang him up" or to "shut his rod" are vulgar references to obtaining credit and "not by a long chalk" is derived from the ancient custom of storekeepers of marking with chalk on the door of the establishment the amounts of the indebtedness of customers.

There are many words and expressions used exclusively by people of ancient days, now seldom, if ever heard. They have departed with the toddy-stick, the logghead, the spinnet and the village horse-block. One hears of the "smelling committee"—a committee of investigation—"sweetening" and a "sight" of money but it is only occasionally.

One old lady remembers when church congregations were inspected by a vigilant person, armed with a pole having a knob on one end and a suit of feathers on the other. With one he rapped the mens heads and with the other he brushed the women's faces when he caught them napping. Drums were used to summon people to "meeting."

Another elderly woman recalls when important letters were "beated" with the words "in haste" which, she states, had about the same effect upon the Postoffice Department as they would have today. The village gossip was the "bellcat," a woman expecting visitors "fixed herself up" and a perverse person was a "crooked stick."

She still speaks of the servant as the "help" and of "doing" the dishes and calls the garbage "swill" or "otts" but so do lots of other people.

After November 2 next there will be an Ohioan who will be Governor and President-elect or one who will be United States Senator and President elect. This recalls the fact that 40 years ago another distinct member of our family, James A. Garfield, was a Representative in Congress, a United States Senator-elect, and President-elect, all at the same time.

A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Upon returning home from a very enjoyable dance in the wee small hours of the morning last Saturday at least one mother was startled to find her house deserted, and the children sleeping in a neighbour's bed. During the evening some ruffians prowling about the house finding them enjoying a merry evening alone, cut up such capers that the children fled in terror to the refuge of a neighbor's house. Unfortunately the offenders were not caught and given their deserts, but it is pretty well known who they are.

What was all that "high falutin'" talk we heard in the winter and spring about having our school house put in repair and made a fine place in which to teach the young idea to shoot? If anything has been done it must have been while I was away, and well hidden away inside at that; for I can't see any changes that have been made nor can I find anyone to tell me of them. I'm mighty thankful I have not spoiled darlings to send to such a dark unwholesome school building but it grieves me sore to see the many young folk who do attend it wearing glasses. I know that the lighting is abominable and I also know of young children whose eyes were apparently in perfect condition upon entering school who are wearing glasses in less than a year after entering. I do not like to be a kicker, but the children of our community ought to be given fair play! The vacation is almost over—is anything to be done?

It is amusing to hear the curfew jingle so cheerily each night—but instead of calling the young fry off the street, it seems to say "Boys and girls come out and play, the moon is shining bright as day, leave your slumber and leave your peep—the jolly old clock will never peep"—and he sure doesn't, more's the pity.

I had occasion to ride over a portion of the neck road recently but rest assured I will not go that way again—soon for more pleasure. Every road that our friend "Strol" wrote a few weeks ago of its being a doubtful true road, is now one being travelled skyward but oh! the road! It was more like being in a radderless boat on a rough sea than riding in an honest to goodness Tin Lizzy, and I for one was thoroughly sea sick, if one could be on land, and made every possible endeavor to feed the fishes which weren't there after all.

Perhaps (?) now that the political beings have taken their medicine and got their stomachs settled again, as it were, perhaps, say so to the home in the evening light of summer's wine clad porch or the glow of winter's lamp.

I help to make this evening hour. I record the great and the small, the varied aspects of the days and weeks that go to make up life.

I am for and of the home; I follow those who leave humble beginnings; whether they go to greatness or to the gutter, I take to them the thrill of old days, with wholesome messages.

I speak the language of the common man; my words are fitted to his understanding. My congregation is larger than that of any church in my town; my readers are more than those in the school. Young and old alike find in me stimulation, instruction, entertainment, inspiration, solace, comfort. I am the chronicler of birth and love and death—the three great facts of man's existence.

I bring together buyer and seller, to the benefit of both; I am part of the market-place of the world. In to the home I carry word of the goods which feed, and clothe, and shelter, and which minister to comfort, ease, health, and happiness. I am the word of the week, the history of the year, the record of my community in the archives of state and nation.

I am the exponent of the lives of my readers. I am the Country Weekly.

PREPARING GRAIN FOR FALL FAIRS

(Experimental Farm Note)

It pays to advertise. There is no better advertisement than to be a prize winner at the Fall Fairs and no crop on the farm can be exhibited to better advantage than the cereal crop. To attain the best results, a special plot should be maintained and kept thoroughly clean, free from weeds and all impurities. Harvesting should be done by hand, keeping the sheaves as neat and straight as possible. First and foremost the grain in the sheaf must not be weathered, it must be perfectly dry and of good color. The best results are obtained by the use of slightly mature straw, as it will be found to be less brittle and easier to handle. The straw should be spread in thin layers in the sun to dry; the sun will bleach the straw as well as dry it. Use only straight, uniform straws to make the sheaf; two or three straws should be collected in the field to allow for waste.

The majority of persons have the idea that all the straws should be the same length and the heads all placed on the same level. This would give us the square head in which, when the sheaf is bound, the straws would break off below the head. The ideal sheaf has a rounded head with a gradual curve. This rounded head is procured by allowing the central straws to stand a little higher than the surrounding straws on each layer of heads that are added, to gradually slope away from the centre. The large sheaf may be conveniently formed by first making a number of small sheaves and then placing them together as though they were individual heads, gradually sloping them off in the same manner. To finish the sheaf a layer of individual heads should be placed around the whole, producing a finished exhibition sheaf. All the loose leaves should be plucked off the outside of the sheaf with a jack-knife leaving only the white shining straws, and all heads that do not conform to the symmetry of the head may be cut off, leaving a perfect sheaf. Coloured ribbon about 1-2 to 3-4 inches wide may be used with good effect to cover the binding strings.

The remainder of the plot should be threshed by hand. This will form the bulk sample for the Fair. If the plot was kept pure in the field there will be very little that will need to be done to the threshed sample. A good fanning mill will remove all the straw and small kernels, all chaff and dirt. The fanning mill must be clean, many an excellent sample has been ruined by a dirty fanning mill. Thoroughness is the secret of a good sample, the fanning mill should not be spared even if it means fanning away 50 per cent of the original sample.

The bulk sample may be doubled bagged for shipping to the Fair. The sheaf should be shipped in a box, 3-4 inches longer and 1-2 inches broader and deeper than the sheaf. The sheaf should be wrapped in paper and tied, fitted into the box and kept in position by supports.

With our present day standards always improving, great care must be taken in preparing the exhibits for our Fall Fairs. No prize will be won by the farmer who pumps up a rough sheaf or a poor threshed sample. The secret of success is thoroughness.

HEAVY CROP OF SPRUCE SEED THIS YEAR

The Commission of Conservation has received reports from a number of points in Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick indicating that this is an exceptionally heavy seed year for white spruce in eastern Canada. The promise is to be a good yield of white pine seed as well. Last year there was practically no spruce seed in eastern Canada. Heavy seed years for spruce and pine usually occur only every fourth year, therefore this year is a good time to collect the seeds should take advantage of the abundant crop this year.

White spruce seed ripens in September and the cones should be collected just before they open. If picked too early, the seeds will be immature, and if left till the cones open, the seeds will have dropped out.

The increasing attention being given to reforestation has developed a large home market for tree seeds. In addition to the various governmental and commercial nurseries, several of the pulp companies, including the Laurentide, Abitibi, Spanish River and Riondon, have nurseries. There are also good markets in the United States and Great Britain for Canadian tree seeds. Heretofore, the nurseries on this continent have had to depend largely on European seed, owing to the limited amount of native seed collected. The European seed has not been entirely satisfactory for our climate and hardy native stock is preferred when obtainable.

During the last few years the demand for tree seeds has always exceeded the supply and this spring $10.00 per lb. could be secured for white spruce seed. This, however, is exceptionally high, $5.00 being considered a reasonable price. The cost of collecting and preparing the seed for the market varies with the local conditions, but in a good seed year it should not exceed $2.00 per lb.

But Big Assistance to Biological Research Work.

Far-reaching results are anticipated from the innovation of the mackerel scouting service on the Atlantic coast this spring. While there is doubt as to actual results produced this year, the fishermen, for whose benefit the service was instituted, are enthusiastic, and the season they will no doubt be in a better position to take advantage of this novel service.

The patrol boat "Hochelaga," under Captain Barkhouse, set out early in May and first reported a mackerel school on May 11th. The "Arctis," assisted by the "Hochelaga," kept on the lookout throughout the whole season and made reports regarding the size of the schools, their location and apparent direction were wireless to Halifax and telegraphed from there to Yarmouth, Shelburne, Liverpool, Lunenburg, Lockport and Sherbrooke, and from these points the information was telephoned to all intermediate stations where fishermen were interested.

The service from all angles was a most complete one. Later, two other patrol boats, the "Arctis" and the "Arctis," assisted by the "Hochelaga," so that the scheme was given a thorough trial.

In addition to the value of mackerel scouting to the fishermen, the service promises to produce valuable data for biological research work. Captain Barkhouse of the "Hochelaga," has kept a chart of the movements of the mackerel throughout the whole season, and it is likely that this, along with a detailed report, will appear in print and will be made available to all interested.

DO YOU KNOW
That approximately one hundred thousand people are employed in the fishing industry in Canada?

That the revenue derived from the fisheries of this country in 1919 exceeded sixty millions of dollars?

That in no other country in the world with the exception of the United States is artificial propagation of fish conducted on such an extensive scale as in Canada and nowhere is there a better system employed?

That the Dominion of Canada is between two of the greatest fishing areas in the world—the banks of the Atlantic and those of the Pacific?

That Canada has 12,500 miles of indented coastline on the Atlantic and Pacific prolific with edible fish, and also 200,000 square miles of interior waters from which to draw fish supplies?

That Canada has the opportunity of placing herself in the very forefront as a fish-producing country? That we people of Canada last year consumed less than nineteen pounds of fish per capita, while the people of Great Britain used more than fifty-five pounds per head?

That we have not yet awakened to the wealth of our fisheries?

A SEASONABLE RECIPE.

The finnan haddie is one of the most delectable cured fish prepared in Canada and is growing constantly in popularity. A chief of world-wide repute is the author of this recipe—Cut finnan haddie in disc form. Boil ten minutes with chipped green peppers. And boiled potatoes cut in disc form. Mix all with cream. Salt and pepper to taste. Serve in hot deep dish or chafing dish.

"Bill in?" was his first query. "No, he left just a few minutes ago," Hazel told him.

Mr. Brooks, a short, heavy-set, neatly dressed gentleman, whose rather weak blue eyes loomed preternaturally large and protuberant behind place-mats that straddled an insignificant snub nose, took of his glasses and twiddled them in his white, well-kept fingers.

"Ah, too bad," he murmured. "Thought I'd catch him."

"By the way," he continued, after a pause, "speaking of Bill, I have reason to believe that you have a good deal of influence with your husband in business matters, Mrs. Wagstaff."

"Well, I don't know; perhaps I have. Why?"

"Well—ah—you see," he began rather lamely. "The fact is—I hope you'll regard this as strictly confidential, Mrs."

"Very Able Man, Your Husband, But Headstrong as the Deuce."

Wagstaff. I wouldn't want Bill to think I, or any of us, was trying to bring pressure on him. But the fact is, Bill's got a mistaken impression about the way we're conducting the financial end of this mining proposition. You understand? Very able man, your husband, but headstrong as the deuce. I'm afraid to speak frankly—he'll create a lot of unpleasantness. Might disrupt the company, in fact, if he sticks to the position he took this morning. Thought I'd run in and talk it over with him. Fellow's generally in a good humor, you know, when he's lunched comfortably at home."

"I'm quite in the dark," Hazel confessed. "Bill seemed a trifle put out about something. He didn't say what it was about."

"Still, I explain," Mr. Brooks suggested. "You'd understand—and you might be able to help. I don't as a rule believe in bringing business into the home, but this bothers me. I hate to see a good thing go wrong."

"Explain, by all means," Hazel promptly replied. "If I can help, I'll be glad to."

"Thank you," Mr. Brooks polished his glasses industriously for a second, and replaced them with painstaking exactitude. "Now—ah—this is the situation: When the company was formed, five of us, including your husband, took up enough stock to finance the preliminary work of the undertaking. The remaining stock, seventy-five thousand dollars in amount, was left in the treasury, to be held or put on the market as the situation warranted. With the first clean-up, Bill forwarded facts and figures to show that we had a property far beyond our greatest expectations. And, of course, we saw at once that the thing was silently undercapitalized."

"So we held a meeting and authorized the secretary to sell stock. Naturally, your husband wasn't cognizant of this move, for the simple reason that there was no way of reaching him—and his interests were thoroughly protected, anyway. The stock was listed on Change. A good bit was disposed of privately. We now have a large fund in the treasury. It's a cinch. We've got the property, and it's rich enough to pay dividends on the million. The decision of the stockholders is unanimously for enlargement of the capital stock. You understand? You follow me?"

"Certainly," Hazel answered. "But what is the difficulty, Bill?"

"Bill is opposed to the whole plan," he said, nudging up his lips with evident disapproval of Bill Wagstaff and all his works. "He seems to feel that we should not have taken this step. He states that no more stock will be sold; that there must be no enlargement of capital. In fact, that we must peg along in the little one-share company we started. And that would be a shame. We could make the Free Gold Mining company the biggest thing on the map, and put ourselves on Easy Street."

He spread his hands in a gesture of real regret.

"Bill's a fine fellow," he said, "and one of my best friends. But he's a hard man to do business with. He takes a very peculiar view of the matter. I'm afraid he'll queer the company if he sits up trouble over this. That's why I hope you'll use whatever influence you have, to induce him to withdraw his opposition."

"But," Hazel murmured, in some perplexity, "from what little I know of corporations, I don't see how he can set up any difficulty. How can he stop us from taking any line of action whatsoever?"

"Oh, not that at all," Brooks hastily assured. "Of course, we can outvote him, and put it through. But we want him with us, don't you see? We've a high opinion of his ability. He's a sort of man who gets results; practical, you know; knows mining to a T. Only he shies at our financial method. And if he began any toothy litigation, or silly rumors got started about trouble among the company officers, it's bound to hurt the stock. It's all right, I assure you. We're not foliating a wildcat on the market. We've got the goods. Bill admits that. It's the regular method, not only legitimate, but good finance. Every dollar's worth of stock sold has the value behind it. Distributes the risk a little more, that's all, and gives the company a fund to operate successfully."

But Hazel dropped the paper, mortified and wrathful. The city jail seemed the very fit itself to her. And the lurid publicity, the lifted eyebrows of her friends, saddened her in prospect. Plain street brawling, such as one might expect from a cabman or a taxi driver, not from a man like her husband. She involuntarily assigned the blame to him. Not for the cause—the cause was of no importance whatever to her—but for the act itself. The best friend! She could hardly realize it. Jimmie Brooks, jovial Jimmie, with a broken nose and sundry bruises! And Paul Lorimer, distinguished Paul.

was not the courtly bearing which was the despair of his fellows, and the manner of a dozen generations of culture wherewith to charm the women of his acquaintance. He wore a black eye and a split lip. So the paper stated. It was vulgar. Brutal! The act of a cave man.

She was on the verge of tears. And just as she was about to open the door, and in walked Bill.

CHAPTER XVI.

"The Note Discarded."

Bill had diverted himself of the crowd. He had seen a man who had solved some knotty problem to his entire satisfaction. Moreover, he bore no mark of conflict, none of the conventional signs of a rough-and-tumble fight. For a moment Hazel found herself believing the Herald story a pure canard. But as he walked across the room her searching gaze discovered that the knicker's opinion was based on facts. His hair was matted, his face was bruised and bloody, the skin broken. She picked up the paper.

"Is this true?" she asked tremulously, pointing to the offending headlines.

"Substantially correct," he answered coolly.

"Bill, how could you?" she cried. "It's simply disgraceful. Brawling in public like any saloon loafer, and getting in jail and all. Haven't you any consideration for me—any pride?"

"Yes," he said deliberately. "I have. Pride in my word as a man. A sort of pride that won't allow any bunch of ill-dressed crooks to make me a party to any dirty deal. I don't propose to get the worst of it in that way. I won't allow myself to be tarred with their stick."

"But they're trying to give you the worst of it," she burst out. "Vicious of utter humiliation, to be confronted and mugged here. You've insulted and abused me, and you intend to say nothing of giving us all the benefit of newspaper scandal. 'We'll be notorious!' 'Best friends?' 'God save the mark!' he snorted contemptuously. 'Our best friends, as you please to call them, are crooks, thieves and liars. They're rotters. They stink with their moral rotteness. And they have the gall to call it good business!'"

"Just because their business methods don't agree with your peculiar ideas is no reason why you should call names," she flared. "Mr. Brooks called just after you left the square, did he? Explained it all very plausibly. I suppose. Probably suggested that you're smoothing me down, too. It would be like you."

"So Brooks came around to talk it over with you, eh?" Bill sneered. "Told you it was all in the square, did he? Explained it all very plausibly. I suppose. Probably suggested that you're smoothing me down, too. It would be like you."

THERE IS ONLY ONE GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all.

Insist on genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross"—Aspirin prescribed by physicians for nineteen years and proved safe by millions for Headache, Toothache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Colds, Neuritis, and Pain generally. Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages. Made in Canada.

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monocristalline Salicylic Acid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company, Ltd., will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

BEHIND every industry in Canada—

- from the patient truck-gardener bowed over his lettuce—
- to the young manufacturer struggling to prove the worth of Canadian skill and Canadian material in some new enterprise—
- stand the railways—the intelligence, the power and the hopes of the railways of Canada.

Not, like the Exploiter, watching to take harsh advantage of hard-times or the follies of a boom—

Not seeking by a moment's shrewdness to "clean up a million and get out!"

Not interested in the price of real estate in just ONE town, or the prosperity of just ONE province—

But, instead, employing their widely-gathered intelligence in the interests of all Canada for all time to come!

For the railways of Canada cannot be lifted up and carried away to serve any other master than Canada!

Their services cannot find any buyer but Canada!

They injure themselves if by asking too high returns To-day they damage the prosperity of the citizens To-morrow.

The request for increased freight rates is made with these facts in view.

Canada will still have the cheapest, the fastest and the most reliable railways in the world!

CHAMPION ATHLETES AND LOVELY CANADIAN SCENES

Athletes Off to Antwerp

The Canadian Pacific Ocean Services liner Melita sailing from Montreal on Saturday, July 24th, had amongst her passengers the Canadian athletes who will represent this country in the Olympic Games, or world championship athletic events, to be held at Antwerp in Belgium this summer.

On Saturday, July 17th the final trials to decide the men who should represent the Dominion were brought off on the grounds of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association. Contests were brisk and the exhibitions given went warrant the prediction that it is not unlikely a few Olympic honors will be brought to Canada.

The chief performance of the day was furnished by Earl Thomson in the 110 metres hurdles. The big fellow clipped one and three-fifths seconds off the Canadian record and was just a fifth over the Olympic record. His time for the distance was 15 1/5 seconds and from the manner in which he performed it is evident that there will be a further reduction in the hurdle event when this native son again competes. The previous record, 16 4/5 seconds, was established by George Barber, May 23, 1908, during the Olympic trials at Toronto.

Thomson won from a good hurdler in K. L. Carruthers. In fact an observer would be tempted to declare that Carruthers was the stylist of the pair. Thomson also performed in the jump winning the high at 6 feet 10 inches, and the distance at 22 feet 7 1/4 inches.

The other feature event of the afternoon was the 5,000 metres run in which four competed. Walter Knox the Olympic coach very calmly predicted that Thomas Town, the Brandon man, would prove the winner. Indeed Knox had advised Tommy to come with his trunk, ready for a sea voyage, so confident was he that the Manitoba entry would size up to Olympic form. The Brandon runner slipped along with a good rhythmic movement and had lots in reserve when he finished with a smart spurt. Altogether it was as pretty a race as old timers confessed to have witnessed on the track.

In this event the first mile was done in 4 mins. 56 secs, the second in 5 mins. 23 secs, and the third in 5 mins. 10 secs, the three miles being completed in 15 mins. 29 secs. Some of those on the Canadian team at Antwerp will be:

Alex. Nanton, Brandon, 100 yds. C. A. Toronto, and Cecil Coffee, sprouts.

Heck Phillips, West End Y. M. C. A. Toronto, 400 and 800 metres.

E. Lawrence, C. P. R. A.A.A., Montreal, 1,500, 5,000 and 10,000 metres.

T. Town, Brandon, Manitoba, 1,500, 5,000 and 10,000 metres.

E. J. Thomson, Pelase Albert, Saskatchewan, 110 and 400 metres hurdles and jumps, and Pentathlon.

John Cameron, Vancouver, hammer throw, and shot put.

John Cameron, Vancouver, hammer throw, Decathlon and Pentathlon.

Viewing the Canadian Rockies

An easy trip from Banff, Alberta, is that to Lake Minnewanka, nine miles distant. There is a good road which passes the various animal reserves where yak, deer, moose, elk, goat and buffalo may be seen in almost natural environment. The mining town of Banffhead is beautifully situated in a pocket of the hills, a location to be envied, but decidedly looks a mining town. At the lake a comfortable chalet is found with good meals to be had and plenty of fishing. A small boat piles the waters and each afternoon sees cars of all kinds and descriptions arriving with their loads of sight-seers for the trip up the lake. The return trip to Banff may be made in two ways. There is an old Indian trail round the north shore of the lake, then the walker turns south, passes through a short draw, then down Carrot Creek till he reaches the main highway from Calgary and from there, there is a good highroad to Banff. This walk from the chalet to Banff counts up about 61 miles. To lessen the mileage, the motor-boat may be utilized and a request be made to the captain to be allowed to disembark at the above mentioned draw, then walking up the draw and down Carrot Creek to the motor road, our pedestrian (having phoned for a car before leaving the lake) stinks down into a seat of solid comfort and bows over a beautiful road back to his temporary home Banff Springs Hotel.

If the one on pleasure bent is a climber by love of the same, he has any amount of work cut out for him well within practical distance. Mount Athabasca at Lake Minnewanka is the highest peak (10,855 ft.). Mount Rundle with its lower wooded slopes and high, black, limestone walls just across the Spray River, comes next in height (9,630 ft.). This latter mountain extends in one long, straggling range for fifteen miles east, at which point Canmore has been built. Cascade Mountain, near the buffalo pasture, has an altitude of 9,800 ft. and has been climbed from its face but more frequently from its longer and easier slopes at the north. Mount Edith (8,240 ft.), to the north of Bow Valley, is seen to advantage from the Sun Dance Canyon road. To make the ascent the motor-road west is taken to about one hundred yards west of the third Vermilion Lake where the trail to its base is well marked. Mount Norquay (8,256 ft.) to the east of Mount Edith is said by climbers to be one of the best elevations for climbing. Banff is a rallying point for climbers.

Many have not the strength or desire for such a strenuous vacation as walking and climbing trips. Do not think you must sit still in Banff on that account. After one's own feet come those of the little four-footed friend of the trail—the mountain pony. He is not much to look at, he is generally uncouth and shabby; but live with him, try the trail to the top of Sulphur Mountain, give him his head, do not attempt to enter the business inside, and he will bring you back safely. His one motto is "hearty interest" and he has no intention of ending his days abruptly by falling over a precipice. What is more, he never does. At Banff all trails are perfectly safe; they are Government-made, wide and free of debris and any child who can sit on a pony is safe on them.

By far the most popular means of seeing Banff is by the motor-car. The Government road is every direction are constantly being improved and each year sees more mileage added to the already long list with improved condition of the older roads. Nothing gives a more comprehensive idea of the Bow River Valley than to ride to Calgary (80 miles) by train and return to Banff in a good touring car. If there have not been long rains the roads will be in fine shape and the run may be made in three or three and one-half hours. The incoming stranger travelling by automobile will get a better idea of the foothill country and the amphitheatres of the mountains ahead. The prairie flowers and a pleasant welcome as you pass, the little gophers watch with such human curiosity, a coyote may be seen snaking from one isolated nook to another. The mountains seem to come closer out of the blue haze and above them all the eye picks out one ugly frowning peak—the Devil's Head (9,176 ft.)—which starts suddenly down on those who dare to come within his precinct. As the car glides into the Indian reserve, that menacing head disappears behind the lower hills and does not come into view again. Across the reserve an occasional tipper is seen, the children playing about its base as they work, the

- (1) Party from Alpine Club Camp crossing an ice field in quiet Canadian Rockies.
- (2) Squaw of the Stony Indian Tribe on the Reservation near Banff.
- (3) Rocky Mountain ponies that carry the Banff tourists to the mountain peaks.
- (4) Cascade Mountain, at its base and sweeping westward, the animal carousers where once the Indians camped in their hunting season, and far, far toward the setting sun are, mountainous mountains whose numbers are almost uncountable.
- (5) Climbing down the long hill-slope, a horse-drawn stretch brings the tired hiker back to Banff Springs Hotel.
- (6) In the days to come the pictures of Banff will be in memory when the Banff car, away, wrapped in its own light, glides on its way.

MARUA TREE GROWS ALCOHOL

Blossom Produced. When Sun Dried, Contains 60 Per Cent of its Weight in Fermentable Sugar.

Alcohol in these days has attention from government in diverse ways. England has had a committee studying the possibilities of increasing the production of alcohol to be used in generating power.

The opportunities discussed by the committee are interesting. Of course, potatoes, artichokes and cereals came in for attention. But it seems there are less known sources of alcohol. For example, there is the flower of the marua tree, which flourishes in Hyderabad and the central part of India. This flower, when sun dried, contains 60 per cent of its weight in fermentable sugar, and apparently is to be gathered by the ton. Then there are the fertile gases of the coke ovens. They are so rich in impurities to the everyday man that it is not very startling to learn they contain ethylene, which by synthetic processes somewhat developed under the stress of war may be converted into ethyl alcohol.

With the coal beds about to produce alcohol, and the trees of India fairly blossoming with it, the man with a motorcar may quit the fears aroused by the scientist's figures which show that we are within sight of the end of petroleum and gasoline. There is nothing like being easy in one's mind.—The Nation's Business.

REMEDIES OF THE DAYS PAST

Plants, Berries, Weeds and Roots Among Ancient Remedies Used for Cures of Ailments.

Quaint, mainly remedies of the past, many of which led to wealth on the part of the inventors, were nearly all made of berry plants and many of common weeds. Pokeberries, years ago, were used to make plaster, for a cancer, and grapevine sap was prepared for hair tonics. To produce a sweat, tea was made from magnolia leaves and the berry of this plant was often mentioned as a cure for consumption.

For toothache, the veteran practitioner used the bayberry root. Berries of the cedar tree were supposed to stiffen the spine, and a purge was made of alder buds or of elderberries. The goldenrod, the mullein plant, the burdock, and common weeds were also held forth as cures for various ailments.

"Duscarora rice," invented by a Philadelphia woman, and held forth as a cure for tuberculosis, enabled the practitioner to secure a fortune for herself. It is said to have more than twenty times more than honey made from Indian corn.

To Extinguish Fires in Coal Mines.
The mud-jet seems to have been found especially adapted to extinguishing fires in coal mines, but it is liable to be inefficiently applied. A recent investigation shows that lime and clay should be included in the mud. The usual success of the mud-jet in controlling fire is largely due to the action of these cement materials in consolidating loose particles, and closing gas-emitting openings by forming a cake over them. The refuse dust from the burning of bituminous gas, held ash, sifter earth, and even combustible products like the refuse of coal-washing, may make up the bulk of the mud. A tank of mud with gravity discharge is suggested as the ordinary fire-extinguishing plant, through steam or compressed air may be used.

Advances of Japanese Women.

Japan is making remarkable progress in all lines of industry and in the development of modern ideas and thought, declared an officer of the Young Women's Christian association, who returned from the Flower Kingdom a short time ago.

Particularly interesting she said, is the changed attitude toward the Japanese woman who is now being admitted to the big universities in Japan and given a freedom to develop herself along educational lines that has heretofore been rigidly denied her.

"This new attitude toward the Japanese woman is the most revolutionary thing in the change of thought and serves to illustrate the progress that is being made."

Shoe Worth More Than Pig.

A shoe manufacturer, so this story is told, ribbed pigs on the side. He sold one the other day. He got $300 for it. The buyer paid him 22 cents a pound for it, and it weighed over 400 pounds. "A good price you got for that pig," remarked a friend.

"Not so very much so," replied the shoe manufacturer. "Well, $300 for one pig looks like a good price to me," answered the critic. "It is more than you get for shoes."

"That is not so," responded the manufacturer. "I sell my shoes at the rate of $5 a pound, and for 400 pounds of shoes, I would get $2,000. So, you see, shoes are worth a lot more than pigs."—Breckton Enterprise.

Canal Music Lures Seals.

Seal hunters of the Pacific are said to be using with great success through the use of the phonograph in luring seals to their death. A large instrument is employed and is set up near the rendezvous of the seals. They gather in the vicinity and remain with their heads out of the water listening to the music, thus giving the hunters opportunities to shoot them.—Fishing Gazette.

NEW IDEA IN TRANSPORTATION

Trains to Slide on Runners, Separated
From Track Merely by Thin Film of Water.

Looking toward the transportation facilities of the future, an American mechanical engineer believes that the chief means of travel will be trains without wheels, running on single tracks, and moving almost without friction because they will slide on runners separated from the track by a thin film of water. In short, the fact that one plate of glass will glide practically without friction over another if there is a thin layer of water between them will be applied and worked out in running a train. The idea of a train without wheels is sufficiently surprising, but, according to the writer, a Frenchman had invented such a train just before the Franco-Prussian war, and the project was not resumed afterward, although a later French inventor made some important improvements. The advantage over modern transportation, if such trains become practicable, is prophesied as noiselessness of operation, equal carrying capacity, and about twice as much speed. The idea looks visionary, but after all it is not wise to distrust possibilities for that reason.

TO BE NEW WORLD'S WONDER

Japanese at Work on Statue of St.
Nichiren, Cutting It From The Solid Rock.

On the Isle of Coru's Head, in that beautiful inland sea, which has been called the Mediterranean of Japan, and here a small army of Japanese workmen are busy at the first cuttings that will eventually carve out the largest statue in the world. The Colossus of Rhodes, at one time one of the seven wonders of the world, is said to have been 120 feet high—a small thing compared with the figure of Liberty that stands 151 feet above its pedestal in New York Harbor—but the Japanese statue will be of even greater magnitude.

Following the line of the natural rock it will be a reclining figure, 240 feet long, and therefore that much more impressive than the Buddha at Pegu, Burma, which from head to foot measures 182 feet. The Isle of the Cow's head is private property, and this Boddhisattva adoration is a work of private enterprise. The reclining figure will be that of St. Nichiren, who founded the sect of Buddhism that bears his name. In the wooden model the saint lies asleep, facing west, his head toward the sea, and his left arm extended along his side; a somewhat archaic figure, yet with considerable realism. For the enormous statue that is to be cut out of the solid rock from the model the trees and greenery of the Isle of the Cow's head will provide an excellent setting.

Rock Dust to Save Miners' Lives.

Perhaps the oddest, yet one of the most effective, means for preventing—or, at all events, minimizing—disasters in coal mines is the use of rock dust.

A lot of it is placed on boards hung by chains from the roofs of mine tunnels. Obviously in case of an explosion the dust will swing and the dust will be thrown off.

Following an explosion a roaring flame, let us say, is coming through the tunnel. The air is filled with coal dust (or perhaps with inflammable gas) to feed it. But it meets a curtain of non-inflammable rock dust (discharged from the board shelves) and is thereby stopped. Rock dust will not burn under any provocation. Suspended thickly in the air, it acts like an asbestos curtain. The flame cannot get through it.

Lost Arms Without Pain.

Our story of a man being blown away, unhurt, by the explosion of a bomb which he did not hear must seem incredible to many people. Here is something like an analogy.

King Edward once brought together at his dinner table Rastern Pasha, who had had half his right hand and part of his arm torn off by a bear, and Sir Edward Bradford, who had had his left arm up to the elbow munched away by a tiger.

The two men compared notes. Neither had felt the least twinge of pain at the time. They imagined that their intense desire to save their limbs dulled all other senses.—London Chronicle.

Bismarck's Wine Thrift.

In his choice of drinks Bismarck displayed a somewhat ungracious spirit. Talking to Mr. John Booth in 1875, Bismarck confessed that when stationed at St. Petersburg, he used to drink two bottles of champagne a day. He estimated that altogether he had drunk 5,000 bottles of champagne and smoked 100,000 cigars.

On another occasion Bismarck declared that beer "makes men stupid, and wine makes them stupid." It is possible that the democratic nonsense spouted over the tavern tables. A good dry whisky is very much better.

Chilean Nitrate Needed.

In spite of the prophesies of disaster, the war did not ruin the Chilean nitrate industry; instead, military needs created an unprecedented demand. Now that this has ceased, the Chilean position is once again proving ruinous. But El Industrial of Antofagasta says there will now be a greater demand than ever for fertilizer and that artificial nitrates have failed even to rival the natural product of Chile.

MERCHANT IS OUT WITH THE FACTS

Feels It His Duty to Tell
lac Made Him Feel.

"I feel that I am only doing my duty when I recommend Tanlac for it is the direct cause of my being in better health to-day than I have been for years," said Elijah N. Thomas, Lower Sackville, Halifax, N. S., who is well known in that locality, having been in the general merchandise business for the past eighteen years.

"For the past six years I had suffered from a bad form of stomach trouble, and although I had tried many different treatments and medicines I never found anything to help me until I started taking Tanlac. My appetite was so poor that many times I would get up from the table without touching a bite, and when I did eat a little something I would have a terrible distressing feeling in my stomach, gas would begin to form and press against my heart, causing it to palpitate dreadfully and I had great difficulty in breathing. I was constantly belching up sour undigested food, and every morning with a dull, mean headache which would stay with me all day. I felt tired and worn out all the time and often was in such misery and felt so badly I just had to leave the store and go home and lie down. I was losing weight all the time, gradually getting weaker, could not get but little sleep, and when I started taking Tanlac was in such a miserable, run down condition it is impossible for me to describe it."

"I saw so many statements from persons who had been benefited by Tanlac I decided to try it. I will have to say, however, I was rather disappointed with the results of the first bottle, and was on the verge of giving it up, but my wife persuaded me to try another bottle reminding me of the fact that my case was of long standing. I am now certainly glad I did for while I have only taken five bottles, my stomach is in good condition and I can eat just anything I want without having the slightest discomfort afterwards. I am never troubled with that distressed feeling in my stomach, gas or heartburn and am entirely rid of those terrible cramping pains. I sleep fine, never have a headache and that tired, worn out feeling is all gone. Yes, sir, I think Tanlac is a grand medicine, and I would advise anyone to give it a trial."

about where the sunshine finds its way over good openings, flowers occasionally, from all about a foot thick and over and always the gurgling of the river. Calling "easy" he crosses the bridge, pack on reaching an old lumber camp seven miles south of Banff. He cooks his frugal meal, dresses beside the flickering fire and as the night draws in, rolls himself in his blanket and sleeps. The following morning with breakfast eaten, the fire thoroughly extinguished, his pack adjusted, he crosses the bridge at the camp and takes up the trail toward White Man's Pass. Eight miles beyond the bridge is an open draw on the left (which must not be mistaken for the "easy" pass) through which he makes his way, and three miles more, down a rough slope, bring him into Canmore, a bustling town of considerable importance. The evening train of the C. P. R. will here pick him up and in a short time land him "bedded" among the solid comforts of the hotel. If time presses, the following day may be utilized by a climb to the top of Sulphur Mountain. This mountain is just back of the Banff Springs Hotel to the west. It has a good trail to the summit (about 8,000 ft.) and can be taken on foot or on horse-back. An excellent driving road leads to the Upper Hot Springs (about one-third way up the mountain) where a hot bath from the nature-heated waters may be had. On this road is passed the Alpine Club-house where the climbers of the world congregate at least once a year—a typical rendezvous for the mountain-enthusiasts. The summit of Sulphur Mountain well repays any exertion spent on making the climb as from that point of vantage a most comprehensive idea of a large area of the country is to be obtained. It is a specially interesting mark for the biologist. If our friend is still in walking humor, the next easiest trip is to Healey Creek. Obtaining a lunch which may be easily stowed away in his pocket, he takes the road to the village but instead of crossing the Bow River bridge he veers to the left and walks west on the "Cave-and-Basin Road" passing about a half mile beyond the bridge a handsome group of bath-houses erected by the Government. Continuing on the same road he sees: "This Road to Sundance Canyon." The canyon is two miles further on. Leave the canyon for a day and keep a sharp look-out for an insignificant board on the right which reads: "To Healey Creek." At first the appearance of a trail is rather discouraging but entering the bush a few yards it proves to be well marked and is easily followed. Crossing the entrance to the trail, a small open flat is seen, on which is built a game-warden's shack. It is a spot where fancy has a chance to run riot. All about are high encircling mountains while trails run in different directions. Where do they lead? One who knows the country would say: "Take that trail to the south by way of the Simpson Pass (8,254 ft.), down to Mount Asinabole, back by way of the Spray Lakes, then down Spray River to Banff, in all a distance of 76 miles." Or the Banff resident may say: "Reaching the Simpson Summit, cross to the Vermilion Summit, go north to Castle Mountain; cross the Bow River, turn east and come back by way of the Simpson Summit, if you prefer to stay on the south side of the river and walk into Banff by trail." A third proposition arises at Vermilion Summit: a trail runs instead of turning east a trail runs west to Boom Lake, then to Horseshoe Lake and thence to Moraine Lake from which point a good driving road takes the explorer directly to Lake Louise. The mother hen had been killed by Albert's wheelbarrow running over it and the little chick was orphan. My mother, in the passion of her heart, took the little one to her bosom and day by day you would see the dear little thing playing upon her lap. The days grew into weeks and the bird grew and became a hen, and still it sat on mother's lap. It matter not how much the other hens laughed at it, it was happy with mother and mother talked to it like to a child, and often said the dear thing knew what she was saying. Mother was a very plain hen, but oh, so good. She cared not for dress, not quite enough and do you know that she discovered that and it troubled the poor thing much, for she wanted mother to be dressed as well as anyone and she told her all these things. "Well, dear," said mother, "I have convictions about these things. I think it wrong to set your affection on these things." "Well, mother, you need not do that. Just put them on and think nothing more about them and then you will see that father will love you more and I will love you more and the world will be better. Yes it will. Say yes and I will go at once to Letteney's where these things are and get them for you."

ROSSWAY

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Raymond on the birth of a daughter. We are pleased to see the Misses Mary and Helen Cossaboon at home again this summer.

Miss Ida McKay returned from Bridgetown on the 7th. She was accompanied from Digby by her sister Miss McKay.

Mrs. Major Tunney, who had been at Marshalltown for a short time returned home on the 10th for a few days, having been ill. Mrs. Huxman very ill at Marshalltown.

Byron Robbitt has recently purchased a fine horse, having had the misfortune to lose one as the result of a cut in the throat by a barb on his pasture fence.

Mrs. Luke Dugan and daughters, Mary, Bertha, and Beatrice have been home for some time, they having returned to be with Mrs. Dugan's father during his last illness, as he has passed away since their arrival here.

On Tuesday of last week Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cossaboon drove to "Sea Wall" with a number of friends who were visiting at their home, to enjoy the pleasures of a clam bake on the shore. An oven was quickly constructed by Mr. Merritt of Pictou, and Seymour, Gilliland, Bear River. On not finding shell fish plentiful some strips of the small flinty fish were put on one of the fish houses and Mr. Merritt, who volunteered his services as cook, soon proved to the company that a red herring is never satisfactory as when roasted on hot stones on the beach. This, being followed by an appetizing clam chowder, made all realize the advantage of having a resourceful cook. Mrs. Ernest Gilliland of Waterford, who joined them at the Sea Wall, also took a place in the big farm wagon on their homeward trip. In the evening of the same day Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamilton accompanied by their daughter, "Georgie," of Seabrook motored from Digby, to spend a few pleasant hours with Mr. and Mrs. Cossaboon and their guests.

Stephen Marshall, of South Range, accompanied by Messrs. Duntar and Fultz, of Boston, Mass., called on friends in this place on Tuesday.

Mrs. Ernest Dakin, of Digby, visited her mother, Mrs. Ellen Cossitt, one day last week.

Dr. D. O. Saunders, of Bridgetown, called on friends here on Friday of last week.

W. Ambrose Cossitt and son, Lewis, are spending some weeks with Mrs. Ellen Cossitt.

Herman Cossitt, of St. John, is the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Cossitt.

Mrs. E. M. Berryman, and Master George Parker, of St. John, who have been spending some time here, returned to their home on Friday of last week.

Mrs. Sarah Cossaboon, of Smith's Cove, visited her mother Mrs. Ellen Cossitt, on Sunday.

Mrs. E. J. Cossitt who has been spending the past few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Wm. Gilliland, left Saturday for Bridgetown, from there she will go to the home of Mrs. Cossitt, where she has accepted the school for the coming year.

Miss Ruby Bent, of Digby, who has been visiting Miss Isabel Dukeshire has gone home.

The painting of Joggin Bridge has been completed under the direction of Mr. Watson.

Stanage Gull, of Victoria, called on friends here on Sunday.

SOME PEOPLE BELIEVE EARTH IS FLAT

It is just four centuries ago since Copernicus declared that the earth was round, and Magellan proved it by sailing round it, but there still existed at the beginning of the twentieth century a small and self-complacent company known as the Zetetic Society, who upheld valiantly the ancient creed that the earth is flat. They devised explanations (satisfactory to themselves) of all the usual phenomena cited to prove the roundness of the planet, and believed that they had a irrefutable proof of their theory in the Bedford Canal. There is a stretch of this canal, known as the Bedford Level, which is perfectly straight for a little over a mile. Said the Zeteticists: if the earth is round that stretch of water must show the curve so that one end will be hidden from the other, but in clear weather each end is visible from the other, right down to the water surface.

They took photographs and these did indeed prove that an object a few inches above the water was visible to a lens a few inches above the water at the other end, and of course the Zeteticists would not listen to remarks about the refraction of light.

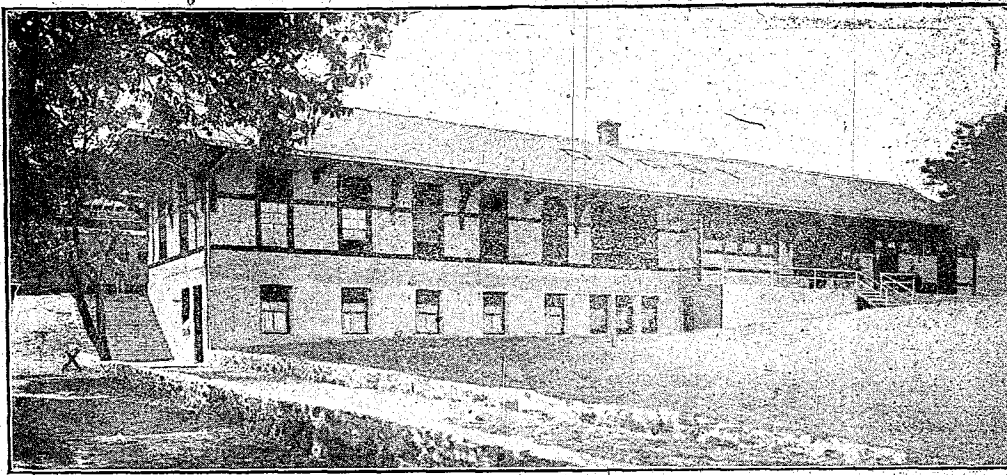

Another curious speculation about the shape of the earth was that of John Cleves Symmes, an American soldier and author, who died in 1829. He believed that the earth is a hollow shell and habitable on the inside, which is to be reached through openings at either pole, where, on an open sea, a ship might sail into the interior of the planet.

He wrote a book and lectured in support of his theory, and in advertisement which he published broadcast in 1818, he said: "I ask one hundred brave companions, well equipped, to start for Siberia in autumn with reindeer and sledges on the ice of the frozen sea. I engage to find a warm country, a rich land, stocked with thrifty vegetables, and animals if not men, on reaching about sixty-nine miles northwest of latitude 82 degrees. We will return in the succeeding spring."

Though long dead and forgotten, he created some stir in his time and a monument still stands in Hamilton, Ohio, where he died, showing the earth as he conceived it.

In the Pacific Coast States there were 239,000 motor vehicles and 2,000 tractors five years ago, whereas to-day there are 780,000 motor vehicles and 290,000 tractors.

The New Station at Digby

Digby's new station, which has been open for some weeks, is now completed except for a few minor furnishings. As will be seen from the picture it is a pretty building, and situated as it is, right in the centre of the town, it is a valuable addition. It is thoroughly modern in equipment and is away in advance of the stations usually found in towns many times the size of this. The building itself is 130 feet long by 30 feet wide but its wide overhanging eaves adds about twelve feet at either side or end. It is a standard C. P. R. divisional point station, constructed of stucco and cement, finished throughout in hard wood and Douglas fir.

Denton & Condon, of Digby, were the contractors, and through their efficient organization the work was rushed so rapidly, that a Yarmouth gentleman, who travels considerably, made the remark that stations in Digby are like mushrooms—they grow overnight.

Glancing at the picture again you will notice the door in the basement at the foot of the steps. This opens into the dining room (the only part of the building yet unfurnished). It is finished with concrete floors and walls wainscotted in hard wood. Heating is furnished by overhead radiators.

The next room to that is the kitchen equipped with a McClary hotel range and furnished with ample cabinets, closets and tables. Opening off the kitchen is the boiler room in which is installed a Royal furnace of large capacity—about 4,000 feet of radiation.

On the main floor, right over the dining room is the restaurant, equipped with hard wood lunch counters, built in the form of a very extended letter S, at which a hundred people can be waited on at one time.

Next to that (the section in the picture in which the triple window appears) is the ladies' waiting room. This is connected by a wide passage back of the ticket office with the gentlemen's waiting room.

Both rooms are large and light, with comfortable seats, and well heated. The lavatories in connection with them are equipped with the Standard Sanitary plumbing—the very latest obtainable.

The ticket office is of good size, comfortable and convenient for the agent and staff—and above all for the public.

The northern end of the building is taken up by the express and baggage rooms. These rooms have very large floors at both front and rear, concrete floors and exceptionally high wainscoting.

The building has a profusion of electric lights, both inside and out, in fact, in this respect very few city stations are ahead of it. It is built well back from the track, allowing for a concrete platform twenty feet wide in front of it. This platform which will be 600 feet long when completed, is twelve feet wide on the wings. It is built almost entirely around the building and will give approximately 10,000 square feet of space—the largest platform for a small town in Eastern Canada.

As stated before the interior finish is all hard wood and Douglas fir—natural finish. The floors are all of hard wood, except the baggage and express rooms which are of concrete. The roof is covered with asbestos shingles, in gray and red.

Denton & Condon were the contractors and the work was under the immediate charge of Levy Hille, of Stewiacke, who has been with the firm for a number of years. The sub-contractors were W. L. Holdsworth, of Digby, who installed the extensive heating plant with its large furnace and 26 radiators; the kitchen plant; water supply, terra cotta pipe, guttering, hand rails and ventilating system; Rhodes, Curry, Limited, Amherst, who supplied all the interior finish, settees, desks and tables; H. T. Warner, Digby, from whose mill the frame and lumber were obtained; Canada Cement Company, Montreal, cen-

The new freight shed will be completed this week. It is a building 70 x 20 feet, built in stucco to match the station. In the southern end is the freight clerk's office, and in the north end a bonding room and store room. A through siding is being put down which will be used by the freight trains exclusively. The shed is so situated that freight may be received or delivered on First Avenue.

Denton & Condon, the contractors, have built over fifty railway stations, but the Digby station is the largest and most expensive. They have also erected many public works, including fog alarm stations, life saving stations, public wharves, and now have a contract for the Annapolis Royal post office.

WAGES MAY BE INCREASED BY PRODUCTION

At first thought the workman is much elated when he receives $40 for a week's work, where he used to get $20. The four $10 bills are evidently a great advance in wages. But when he goes out to buy his Sunday dinner and finds that prices have more than doubled, he loses faith in his increased wages. The fact is, it makes no difference to the workman whether he gets $10 or $100 a week in paper money. His real wages depend on what the paper money will buy. Yet one of the first effects of increased wages during the war was reckless extravagance. Men and women rushed to the stores to spend their paper money. They often bought fur coats and got behind with the grocer's bill. They bought silk shirts and stockings and did not pay the landlord. For many of them, however, the buying power of their paper money was not increased in the slightest.

After all what a man is interested in is the real purchasing power of his wages. If $12 a week—as in the good old days past beyond recall—will buy clothing and food for an average family, the laborer is well off with $12 a week. If $20 or $40 a week will buy today only as much beef and clothing as $12 did long ago, the workman is not any better off. In truth he is worse off for he does not at once see that his $40 is really no more in real value than the $20 was once. The $40 confuses his judgment and makes him extravagant.

What we all want is greater real wages, that is shoes, stockings, corned beef and cabbage. And we will never get more of these real wages till we produce more. If laboring men would work nine hours they would get bigger wages, because they would produce more. When more food is produced there will be more to go around and real wages will advance. It is encouraging to note reports from industrial circles that the individual worker is recovering from war demoralization and actually is producing more than he did a year ago.

After being exposed to the sun and wind for 12 days in an open boat and subsisting upon rain water and seaweed, two fishermen, Thomas Constant and Raphael Coger, were picked up unconscious by the American steamship Mazatlan, from London, G. B., which brought them to New York.

If a girl uses enough paint she may resemble the picture of health.

A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Don't be a grouch. No matter if the weather is hot and prices are eternally going up and prohibition shutting down, being a grouch will never mend matters. In fact, it will make them worse. One of the greatest blessings of mankind is yours absolutely free of charge. You can smile. Maybe you think that smiling isn't any particular help. Maybe you are right. Nevertheless, smiling helps the other fellow. It helps him bear with you. It encourages him to extend a helping hand in time of need. You may feel sorry for a grouch, but you seldom sympathize with him. So, by smiling, no matter how badly things are going with you, you can win help and ready sympathy. A grouch engenders other grouches. Nobody can find so much to be unhappy about as a grouch. And unhappiness is the most fertile field for more of the same. So pick yourself out a nice, warm, friendly smile, one that is warranted rain and wind proof, tuck it carefully into your collar and declare endless war on the grouch—your own grouch first. Smile.

To fine an automobilist for running his car while in an intoxicated condition is an inadequate penalty. He should not be allowed to operate a car. We require of a man who runs a locomotive many years of training and experience, knowledge of machinery and absolute sobriety. The locomotive runs in a given track and cannot well diverge from that. The requirements of a man who runs an automobile, which goes anywhere, are small, but they should include sobriety. A drunken man has no right to be at the wheel of an automobile, whether the machine is running in the country or on the streets of a town or city. The automobile itself is a source of sufficient danger without its potentialities being increased by a mentally crazed man in charge. A man who does not realize his responsibilities enough to keep run out when he is driving an automobile does not deserve the right to run one. As a measure of protection, not alone to himself but to the sober users of our streets and highways he should be prevented from handling a machine. Therefore not only should he be punished for the given offence, but steps should also be taken to prevent him from becoming an offender a second time, and that would mean to not allow him to run a car. All of which remarks were inspired by four or five cars which came into town on Sunday from a nearby village, in which the occupants were pretty well "tanked up."

I find that I am not the only one who dislikes the paper tumbler or cup, which many soda fountains have adopted in place of the glass. Of course this much can be said in favor of the paper cup. It is sanitary, more convenient to the clerk and less expensive than glass ware. But somehow one doesn't seem to get the satisfaction drinking out of a paper tumbler as out of a glass. I asked my friend, a soda fountain clerk the other day, if he had any other "crank" customers in this respect and was surprised to learn that there were many others whom he served in the run of the day who were of the same mind.

I know of a wonderful antique clock with wooden works which runs just perfectly today as it did 100 years ago. It has a beautiful, hand-painted wooden face, but it has nothing over a few of the modern girls at that.

On account of the gasoline problem, motor vehicles of the future will be constructed to make from twenty to thirty miles on a gallon, instead of from seven to twelve as at the present time.

The approximate population of Canadian cities over 100,000 are: Montreal (including suburbs,) 70,000; Toronto, 510,464; Winnipeg, 200,000; Hamilton, 110,000; Quebec (directory estimate,) 103,452; Vancouver, 102,550.

Rev. Aloysius Luther, O. S. B., a descendant of Martin Luther, founder of Protestantism, has been appointed pastor of St. John the Baptist's Church at Longmont, Colo. In various parts of Pennsylvania there are many descendants of Luther. Like Father Aloysius, they are Catholics.

A Toronto despatch says: "More than twenty holders of the Victoria Cross are expected to attend the Canadian National Exhibition on Saturday, the opening day, and a great deal of disappointment, as well as surprise, is being expressed at the fact that not one of the wealthy residents of Toronto has offered the hospitality of his home to a V. C. veteran, notwithstanding hints from the press that this would be expected. Hotel accommodation is being arranged for the V. C.'s, now that private hospitality is not forthcoming."

The General Contractors

The construction of the new D. A. R. Station, Digby, was handled by us. It was so designed and had to be so constructed so as to allow for any future growth that might be required, and its construction therefore called for particular skill and attention. It was built, as is our policy, under our own supervision.

Other Specimens Of Our Work

Other specimens of contracts handled by us may be seen all over the Maritime Provinces. Over fifty railway stations, a number of public wharves, life saving stations, besides canning factories, warehouses and residences can be pointed out.

The Plumbing and Heating

The plumbing and heating of the new D. A. R. Station, Digby, was done by us. These are two of the most important factors in any building. The heating must be right to give the proper degrees of heat in every section of the building. And the plumbing work must be sanitary and properly installed. When you have heating and plumbing work, it will be to your advantage to consult us, because we have had years of experience and our staff are all experienced men.

Stoves and Ranges

We have on hand, and a. ring, the best Ranges and Heating Stoves to be found anywhere. The Enterprise Range is one of our principal lines because we can recommend it as the best all-round range on the market.

Never Married

Elizabeth Ford and Jack Cheviot were engaged to be married, they courted long and furiously; all preparations were made for the marriage, but it never came off. It is a sad, sad story. The mother of Lizzie had set her heart upon these two being wedded. She loved the boy, Jack, not so much because he was fair to look upon, physically perfect, not bow-legged, cross-eyed, or parrot-toed, but chiefly because he was the son of her dear girl friend, and she also knew that rich red blood ran in his veins. But Pa Henry was not so favorable. He often sneered at his love making and sometimes snubbed him, and often in the night, he would hear low talking in the parlor below and would attempt to go down and bid him depart, but Ma Ford seized him by the collar of his night shirt and choked him to peaceful submission and that was the beginning of that peace trip, you know. Well, time went on, the day was set for the wedding, all preparations had been made. They had gone to Digby, to Letteney's store and bought the fit out; a beautiful silk dress, a lovely suit, the Northway make, one of the most beautiful waists, the McMillan design, the most lovely of outer clothing. Why is it they, most always go to Letteney's? Because they keep the Northway garments; they are the best, you know. The Northway is the up way, it brings you into peace and happiness, joy and satisfaction. The other way, the South way, the down way, why it takes you to frizzle, that's it.

Forty-Eight Years in "Canada's Western Empire"

Colonel John S. Dennis, C.M.G., who rode the plains of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba 48 years ago, when Indians and buffalo were plentiful, knows more about "Canada's Western Empire" than any other man. He killed and ate the buffalo, narrowly escaped being scalped by Indians on at least one occasion, suggested and built in Alberta the largest irrigation system in North America, recruited thousands of British and Canadian in the United States during the recent war and not only volunteered for but saw service with the Canadian Expeditionary Force in Siberia.

Now the four western provinces of Canada have a population of 2,500,000, the buffalo are to be found only in parks in the Canadian Rockies and the Indians are on reservations. There are nearly 50,000 miles of railway in the four provinces, or one mile for each 125 persons and of 225,000,000 acres of good agricultural land, but 35,000,000 acres are at present occupied and cultivated. Of the balance, 150,000,000 acres, some 20,000,000 acres lie within fifteen miles of these railway lines waiting for settlers. "Think of it," says Col. Dennis, "and the world crying out for food." His view is that while Canada has won a standing among the nations by her work in the recent war so that today the name "Canadian" is recognized as distinguishing a citizen of a progressive and virile country, Canada's share in the great struggle has involved her in financial obli-

ANCIENT SHIPS.

Two Hulks Supposed to Have Paid First Visit to America.

It was nearly a thousand years ago that Lief Erikson, setting forth from Iceland to return to his native Norway, was driven off his course by terrible storms and came at length upon a new land, says H. K. Maderewell, Christiania, Norway. Strange monuments still attest his visits, or those of his followers, to Massachusetts. Erikson, who anticipated Columbus and his Santa Maria by nearly five centuries, is one of the legendary figures with whom every schoolboy is familiar.

But the legend can never be so vivid and marvelous as when one sees in Christiania two of the ships in which Erikson may have made his voyage of discovery. That these ships, preserved from early Viking times, actually carried Lief Erikson to America, there is, of course, no evidence. Indeed, the probabilities are against it, for the crafts apparently antedate Erikson's time. But it is certain that Erikson's Santa Maria was a ship of the same general proportions, size and construction as these which the twentieth century can see and touch. And, seeing and touching them, fresh from a luxurious voyage on a first-class, modern, American liner, the twentieth century finds the discovery of America more wonderful than ever.

Two ships, which have been completely preserved, one dug up near Oseburg and the other near Gokstad, are supposed to date from the ninth century A.D. Even for Norway, this is an ancient date. It is earlier than the great period of Norse discovery and conquest, earlier than the foundation of the United Norse kingdom, earlier than the raids which so troubled the Saxon Kings in England, earlier than the raid into Normandy which brought to the West the Norman Conqueror and the present British dynasty, and earlier by far than the times when the Norsemen sailed into Venice and Constantinople, fought with the English and French kings for the salvation of Jerusalem.

And it is to this fact that their preservation is due. For it was a pagan Norse custom that the warrior ship captain should be buried in the ship which had been his home. The conqueror who sailed into Vinland in the same craft which had carried him to Iceland, Denmark or Northumbria. With him were his body servants, killed for the occasion, as well as his dogs, his weapons and his armor. The ships were dragged up to the top of a hill overlooking the sea. Within the hull was built a sepulchral chamber, and within this was laid the heroic cargo for its last voyage. Then above the whole ship a mound was raised, with what solemn ritual we do not know.

It was because their mounds were sometimes of potter's clay that their contents have been preserved. Topped with such clay the sepulchre was virtually rendered impervious to air and water, and the preservation was as perfect as beneath the granite of the pyramids or the lava of Pompeii. The Oseburg ship was dug up in 1904. A new farmer had recently bought the mound, began to sputter about it with his shovel. He came upon strange pieces of black oak, almost as hard as stone. Convinced that he had discovered something unusual, he communicated his discovery to the University of Christiania, which undertook the excavation in scientific fashion.

The ship, it was discovered, had been almost completely preserved, although centuries ago a band of robbers had plundered the sepulchral chamber of its gold and silver. The movement of the subsoil, however, had broken it into a jumble of fragments. With greatest care the pieces (numbering more than two thousand) were taken out, numbered and shipped to Christiania. It took a long time, the whole vessel was reconstructed. Only a trivial amount of new wood was required. Two-thirds of the iron rivets are those which stood in the original ship. Although part of the ornamented prow had been lost or decayed, the rudder, the anchor, the mast and most of the oars had been preserved. So the Oseburg ship now stands in similar fashion to the hulks of the University of Christiania—symbols of the rude greatness of ancient Norway.

When one looks at the Oseburg ship the marvel grows that in such craft man could cross the ocean. Yet it is certain that in such craft, or craft very like it, man did. The ship is about seventy feet long over all.

HOLLAND'S NATIONAL FAIR.

Only Products of Dutch Manufacture Are Admitted.

The fourth annual industrial fair of the Netherlands is the first to be held in the permanent building especially erected for the purpose of holding these fairs in the future, as the three previous ones have been so successful as to leave no doubt that these fairs will be held from year to year.

The third industrial fair was held at Utrecht, from February 24 to March 8, 1919. There were 680 exhibitors in 1917; this number was increased to 1,269 in 1919, and almost every branch of the Dutch industry was represented.

The fair had a strictly national character; only products of Dutch manufacture were admitted. Strong measures were taken against the appearance of foreign articles. The factories of all participants were visited by a special committee of enquiry, and a register of complaints was kept. When a justified allegation was brought to their attention the delinquent was, in several cases, immediately removed.

The high quality of the products exhibited was obvious. The substitutes of the war industries, which had emerged as mushrooms during the war, had withstood the approach of peace, only those which were so perfected that they could withstand world competition were represented.

On account of the prevailing conditions of the times, the uncertainty of the general market and the expectation of a general drop in prices, the business done amounted to only $15,000,000, as against $12,000,000 the year before. The same thing occurred a few months later at the fair at Basle. The comparatively small number of visitors from abroad was estimated at 2,000, catalogues in different languages were especially prepared for them. Services in Dutch and English were officially represented by their commercial attaches, and show rooms were placed at their disposal, to be used as offices in the so-called "Rhubus des Nations." Among the countries represented were France, Switzerland, Sweden, Roumania, Norway, Brazil, Japan and China.

To build up closer foreign relations, a service bureau of information was opened at the second fair in 1918, which has answered thousands of enquiries, besides giving the official statistics of the fair.

Concerning all these circumstances the third annual fair was looked upon as very successful and satisfactory to its participants, and therefore great success and enthusiasm are expected for the fourth annual fair.

Compressed Air for Driving Trains. Will the day come when steam, coal, water power, and electricity will no longer be used on our railways? It is quite possible, if the invention of a young Italian proves successful.

By means of this invention, which has been patented throughout the world, it is claimed that it will be possible to drive trains by compressed air. Its secret lies in a new system of compressing air, by which big central tanks may store enormous power to be distributed to "fuel" stations—locomotives will stop to refill their own rolling tanks.

Existing locomotives can be used, with coal tenders converted into air tanks. It is pointed out that to electricity Italy's 4,000 miles of railways would cost $250,000,000. In the new scheme the main expenditure is the building of the big plants for compressing the air, and the laying of pipes—and this is said to be vastly cheaper than electrical installation.

We are not told where the power is to come from which will be needed for the process of compressing the air, but it is important to note that this new invention, even if successful on land, cannot be applied to ships, owing to the impossibility of vessels storing sufficient compressed air.—Tit-Bits.

More Beautiful Slippers. The most beautiful pair of bedroom slippers in the world are the pride and comfort of the Greek Premier, M. Venizelos. Of heavy handwoven bright blue silk, embroidered sumptuously by the champion needlewoman of Athens, they have just come into the statesman's possession by a strange coincidence.

After four years of absence from her home on the island of Sifnos, a young Greek girl, Rhonema, then working as a seamstress in Athens, conceived a plan for obtaining passage money to defray the expenses of the long trip to her native island. She designed and made with her own hands the slippers which now grace the feet of M. Venizelos, spending six months in executing the intricate and beautiful embroidery pattern.

She then asked an influential friend to ratify the slippers. Friends of the Premier bought a chance in the statesman's name and drew the winning number. When the Premier was presented with the slippers and told the story of their acquisition, he immediately sent the maker a present of $100, doubling the proceeds netted by the raffle.

Selfish. Patience—You're engaged to Fred, aren't you? Patrice—Yes; but I'm not happy. "What's wrong?" "I've got a new girl," "Why so?" "I've asked me for my hand, and I gave it to him." "Of course," "Well, it wasn't until I had given my hand to him that he put a diamond ring on my finger." "Of course not. But how does that show selfishness?" "Why, it was his hand, wasn't it?"

A Straight Eye and a Steady Nerve

Some time ago Miss Bertha McLeod, a St. John lady, was stricken with St. Vitus Dance. The doctor's medicine failed to relieve her, so she tried a bottle of which made wonderful improvement in her condition. She continued to take this tonic, with the result that very soon she was fully recovered. Now her nerves are steady, and give her no trouble, and she is able to do her household work as well as ever.

Hawker's Nerve and Stomach Tonic is a T.H.P. reliable remedy for nerve and stomach disorders. Try it. It will "set you up".

Are You Obtaining the Maximum Number of Eggs, from Your Flock?

Avail yourselves of the scientific feeding methods, which, after many years of experimenting by the foremost poultrymen of America have at last resulted in placing on the market, a balanced ration

Ful-o-Pep Laying Mash

Containing the proper egg making material, which enables the hen to shell out eggs in large numbers. This soft feed—the material adapted only for producing eggs—must be eaten as the chief feed of the day. This soft feed, however, must be supplemented an hour or so before roosting time, by a feed of

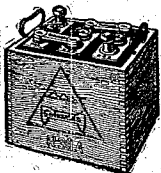

Scratch Grains

Which has been formulated to be fed in connection with laying mash, and is, we firmly believe, the highest quality scratch feed offered the poultryman today. We strongly urge that it be fed as the evening meal.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Home Again.

Twelve months works many a change on a changing frontier. Hazel found this so. When the time came to plan her route she found the G. T. P. bridge the last gap in a transcontinental system, its trains westbound already within striking distance of Port George. She could board a sleeping car at Granville and detain within a hundred miles of the ancient trading post—with a fast river boat to carry her the remaining distance.

Port George looked up a jumbled area of houses and tents, log buildings, frame structures yellow in their newness, strangers to paint as yet. On every hand about stood in varying stages of erection. Folks hurried about the sturdy beginning of a future greatness. And as she left the boat and followed a new-laid walk of planks toward a house, Jake Lauer stepped out of a store, squarely into her path.

you goes, you ought to see the four beautiful horses your husband let Jake have. You don't know how much Jake appreciates it, nor what a fine man he thinks your husband is. We needed horses so bad, and didn't have the money to buy. So Mr. Wagstaff didn't say a thing but got the team for us, and Jake's paying for them in clearing and plowing and making improvements on your land. Honest, they could pull twice the load we'll have. There's a good wagon road most of the way now. Quite a lot of settlers, too, as much as fifty or sixty miles out. And we've got the finest garden you ever saw. Vegetables enough to feed four families all winter. Oh, your old dices! I never want to live in one again. Never a day have the kiddies been sick. Suppose it is a bit out of the world? You're all the more pleased when somebody does happen along. Folks is so different in a new country like this. There's plenty for everybody—eat, everybody, helps, like neighbors ought to.

Lauer came up after a time, and Hazel found herself unequivocally in their hands. With the matter of transporting herself and supplies thus solved, she set out to find Felix Courvoisier—who would know how to get word to Bill. He might come back to the cabin in a month or so; he might not come back at all unless he heard from her. She was smitten with a great fear that he might give her up as lost to him, and plunge deeper into the wilderness in some mood of recklessness. And she wanted him, longed for him, if only so that she could make amends.

She easily found Courvoisier, a tall spare Frenchman, past middle age. Yes, he could deliver a message to Bill Wagstaff; that is, he could send a man. Bill Wagstaff was in the Klappan range.

"But if he should have left there?" Hazel suggested uneasily.

"E weel leave weeth Wittey Lewes word of we're 'e go," Courvoisier reassured her. "An' my man, which sees my brasseur, which I can meet 'eally true," he weel follow 'eem. So Bee's es arrange. 'E es say moor' particuler if madame es come or weeth for forward message, eet been to me quick. Oul. Long time Bee's es know me. I am for depend always."

Courvoisier kept a trader's stock of goods in a weather-beaten old log house which sprang a hundred feet back from the street. Thirty years, he told her, he had kept that store in Port George. She guessed that Bill had selected him because he was a settler.

She sat down at his counter and wrote her message. Just a few terse lines. And when she had delivered it to Courvoisier she went back to the boat. There was nothing new to do but wait. And with the message under way she found herself impatient to reach the cabin, to spend the waiting days where she had first found happiness. She could set her house in order against her man's coming. And if the days dragged, and the great, lone land seemed to close in and press heavily upon her, she would have to be patient, very patient.

Jake was held up, waiting for supplies. Port George suffered a sugar famine. Two days later the belated freight arrived. He loaded his wagon, a ton of goods for himself, a like weight of Hazel's supplies and belongings. A goodly load, but he drove out of Port George with four strapping boys arching their powerful necks, and championing on the bit.

"Four days we'll make it by der ranch," Jake chuckled. "Mit der mule and Gretchen, der cow-boy, 'on week it takes me, hit half der lot."

Four altogether pleasant and satisfying days they were to Hazel. The worst of the fly pests were vanquished. A crisp touch of frost sharpened the night winds. Indian summer hung its mellow haze over the land. The clean, pungent air that sifted through the forest seemed doubly sweet after the vitiated atmosphere of town. Fresh from a griffin of dusty streets and stone pavements, and at stepped, as one might say, from days of impatience in the narrow confines of a railway coach, she drank the winey air in hungry gulps, and joyed in the soft yielding of the turf beneath her feet, the fern and peavine carpet of the forest floor.

It was her pleasure at night to sleep as she and Bill had slept, with her face bared to the stars. She would draw her bed a little aside from the campfire and from the low seduction of a thick-lit watching the nimble flames at their merry dance, swelling lastly at the grotesque shadows cast by Jake and his train as they moved about the blaze. And she would wake in the morning clear-headed, alert, grateful for the pleasant woodland smells arising wholesomely from the forest bosom of the earth.

Lauer pulled up before his own cabin at mid-afternoon of the fourth day, unloaded his own stuff, and drove to his neighbor's with the rest.

"I'll walk back after a little," Hazel told him, when he had piled her goods in one corner of the kitchen.

The rattle of the wagon died away. She was alone—at home. Her eyes shone as she roved restlessly from kitchen to living-room and on into the bedroom at the end. Bill had unpacked. The rugs were down, the books stowed in familiar disarray upon their shelves, the bedding spread in semi-glittered where he had last slept and gone away without troubling to smooth it out in housewifely fashion.

She came back to the living-room and seated herself in the big chair. But she expected to be lonely, very lonely. But she was not. Perhaps the campfires. For the moment it seemed as if she had reached the end of something, as if she were very tired, and had gratefully come to a warm resting place. She turned her gaze out the open door where the forest fell away in vast undulations to a range of snow-capped mountains purple in the autumn haze, and a wavy ness and had once quoted came back to her:

"Oh, to feel the wind grow strong—
Where the trail leads down.
I could never learn the way
And wisdom of the town."

She blinked. The town—it seemed to have grown remote, a fantasy in which she had played a puppet part. But she was home again. If only the gladness of it endured strong enough to carry her through whatever black days might come to her there alone.

She would gladly have cooked her supper in the kitchen fireplace, and laid down to sleep under her own roof. It seemed the natural thing to do. But she had not expected to find the cabin so strangely arranged, and she had promised the Lauers to spend the night with them. So presently she closed the door and walked away through the woods.

September and October trooped past, and as they marched the willow thickets and poplar groves grew yellow and brown, and carpeted the floor of the forest with a soft, warm glow, and trees bared gaunt limbs to every autumn wind. Only the spruce and pine stood forth in their year-round habitations of green. The days shortened steadily. The nights grew longer and bitter with frost. Snow fell, blanketing softly the dead leaves. Old Winter cracked his whip masterfully over the North.

Day by day, between tasks, and often while she worked, Hazel's eyes would linger on the edges of the clearing. Often at night she would lift herself on elbow at some unexpected sound, her heart leaping wild with expectation. And always she would lie down again, and sometimes press her clenched hand to her lips to keep back the despairing cry. Always she attributed herself to be patient, to wait doggedly as Bill would have waited, to make due allowance for immensity of distance, for the manifold delays which might overtake a messenger faring across those silent miles or a man hurrying to his home. Many things might hold him back, but he would come. It was inconceivable that he might not come.

Meantime, with only a dim consciousness of the fact, she underwent a marvelous schooling in adaptation to a self-restraint. She had work of a sort, tasks such as every housewife finds self-imposed in her own home. She was seldom lonely. She marvelled at that. It was unique in her experience. All her old dread of the profound silence, the pathless forests which loomed like a prison wall, distances which seemed impossible to span, had vanished. In its place had fallen over her an abiding sense of peace, of security. The lusty storm winds whistling about the cabin sang a restful lullaby. When the waves lifted their weird, melancholy plaint to the cold, star-jeweled skies, she listened without the old shudder. These things, which she would have supposed, to send her imagination reeling along morbid ways, seemed but a natural aspect of life, of which she herself was a part.

Often, sitting before her glowing fireplace, watching a flame kindled with her own hands with wood she herself carried from the pile outside, she pondered this. It seemed her power of self-sufficiency. She could only accept it as a fact, and be glad. Granville and all that Granville stood for had withdrawn to a more or less remote background. She could look over the frost-sprangled forest and feel that she lacked nothing—nothing save her mate. There was no impression of transient sadness; no chafing to be elevated to do other things. It was home, she reflected; perhaps that was why.

KING COLE TEA

"YOU'LL LIKE THE FLAVOR"

Ten Years After

Ten years ago the first packages of KING COLE TEA were packed and put on the market. The time that has elapsed since then has been filled with hard work and with many difficult situations to be met and overcome. But withal, it has been a period of unquestionable, steady and persistent progress. KING COLE TEA has never looked back. Every year has brought its increase. Today its sale is ten times greater than the first year's business. This is the public's remarkable tribute to the worth of KING COLE TEA. It speaks for unusual service.

It's better to PAINT than REPAIR

BRANDAM'S Genuine B.B. White Lead is free from gritty particles—it falls from the stirring paddle in a stream of velvety smoothness. It breaks up so easily and mixes so readily with linseed oil that the labor preliminary to a painting job is greatly reduced when this splendid white lead is used.

Brandam's Genuine B-B White Lead

There is a right way and a wrong way of painting. Before you paint anything be sure you are using the right kind of paint and giving your surface the correct preparation.

When Home Seems Good

A BLIZZARD OUTDOORS—warmth and comfort within. There is nothing in the home so necessary as a good furnace. Stoves and base burners are unequal to the task—they choke the air with dust and only warm parts of the house.

And buying a furnace is a matter of knowing how. The warm air heating system is the least costly. It is the most effective and healthful too. The will keep every corner of your home delightfully comfortable in all kinds of weather. It draws in the pure fresh air from the big outdoors, warms and moistens it and sends it on its way to you. Stoves and radiators can only heat the same air over and over.

Every part of the Enterprise Blazer Furnace is made just a little bit better than is necessary—the grate bars a little stronger—the fire-pot a little heavier. These are the things that enable us to guarantee that the Blazer Furnace will give you entire satisfaction.

The government officials are offering captured German gun to the various towns through the valley. Why not a battery of these trophies for the water front in Barton and Brighton? Our general Mr. Warner is welcome to the suggestion.

Barton and Brighton will appear on the map of the Tourist Guide book for 1921. The picturesque beauty of the water front will be set forth in attractive outlines.

Mrs. Hensley will close her "Villa" in the late fall, and spend the winter in the far South. Mrs. Hensley has host of friends who will wish a Merry Christmas in the land of perpetual summer.

The climate at a tropical country with the orange groves and mocking birds has a charm for us all. We wish Mrs. Hensley "Bon Voyage" and a safe return in the spring of 1921.

Summer is fast leaving us, the days are growing shorter and the shadows that slant across the meadows are growing longer. The beautiful months of Sept. and Oct. are yet to be enjoyed, after that cometh the winter.

The fortunate observers were treated to a magnificent sight last Monday evening. The Northern skies were glowing with the shimmering dancing rays which we call the "Aurora Borealis". Scientists thus far fail to agree as to the cause of this astronomical phenomenon.

JOHN HARVARD, M. D.

H. A. Hensley, of New York, is making a short visit to Journey's End, Mrs. Hensley's summer home. This is the first time since the erection of the bungalow that Mrs. Hensley has been able to take time from his Wall St. business to go so far from New York his visit is quite an event. Mrs. Hensley feels justly proud of her little place which is looking particularly pretty this summer.

CHILDLESS WOMEN

Please Read This Letter And See What Normal Health Will Do For You.

Berwick, Ont.—"I had organic trouble, and after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Medicine all my troubles passed away. I was made strong and well and have been ever since. Now we have a fine baby six months old, and I know that I would not have this baby and would still be suffering if it had not been for my remedy. My husband and myself say that your remedies are worth their weight in gold, and I recommend them to my friends. One of my aunts is taking them now."

Mrs. NAPOLEON LAVIGNE, Berwick, Ontario, Canada.

Among the virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its ability to correct sterility in many cases. This fact is well established as evidenced by the above letter and hundreds of others we have published in these columns.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham, Medicine Co., Lowell, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

KARSDALE

One of the most delightful occasions of the season was a moonlight excursion to Annapolis on the Evangeline last Thursday night. The trip was arranged so that Capt. and Mrs. Oscar Parker and two daughters, of New York, who were visiting relatives here, could participate.

The weather was beautiful, calm, clear and warm. About forty were in the boat and after a delightful sail of about an hour docked at the Kings Wharf and spent a half hour about the town. Dr. J. U. Bogart invited the company to visit Copeland's ice cream parlor, where they treated to ice cream and after a ramble around town the party embarked for Annapolis at 11 o'clock all voting it to be the happiest event of the summer.

Deacon and Mrs. Edward Jones, of Port Wolfe, entertained a family party last week. The guests were Mrs. John R. Covert and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Covert and family, Karsdale; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clark and W. Sheahan Covert, of Boston, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. James Jones and family, Port Wolfe, and Miss Donald Gibson, of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel Morrison and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Arch Morrison and little granddaughter left on Saturday for their homes in Lynn and Salem respectively.

Miss Ella Shaffer has returned to her work in Boston after a pleasant vacation spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shaffer.

Capt. Oscar Parker, Mrs. Parker, Miss Josephine Parker, David Parker and Miss Helen Parker all of Brooklyn, N. Y., visited Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Covert, Jr., last week.

On Thursday evening last the Dr. Bogarts entertained their friends by giving a moonlight boat ride in their yacht Evangeline. The ride extended to Annapolis where the crowd was entertained at the ice cream parlor, returning home in the late hours. A very enjoyable time was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Covert were "At Home" to the Bogart party including Dr. and Mrs. Sturgis on Friday evening in honor of their guests Capt. and Mrs. Oscar Parker and family, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Clark and W. Sheahan Covert who have spent their vacation with their mother, Mrs. John R. Covert, returned to their home in East Boston on Wednesday last.

Congratulations to Miss Leona Covert on having successfully passed the Grade C provincial exams.

Miss Alden Winchester and little grandson, of Lynn, are visiting Mrs. Arthur Chisholm.

Safeguard that valuable home of yours

YOU can never afford to let your home deteriorate for lack of paint. Lately property values have risen so high that the cost of a few cans of paint is a trifling expense for the safeguarding of the home. With this knowledge there is a more complete understanding of paint economy, and a belief that it pays to use dependable paints, even if they cost a little more per can than the ordinary kind.

B-H ENGLISH PAINT

70% Pure White Lead
(Brandram's Genuine B.B.)
30% Pure White Zinc
100% Pure Paint

is guaranteed—every can of it—over the signature of the maker. There is also printed on it the basic formula, which ensures permanence and "covering capacity." In spite of the rise in cost of materials, Brandram's B.B. White Lead and other similar quality ingredients are used in the same liberal quantities as in the very earliest days of B-H manufacture. B-H "English" Paint will never be allowed to deviate from its original standard of quality no matter how conditions may influence other manufacturers. There's too much at stake in the wonderful B-H reputation to risk its prestige by even a slight departure from the famous formula which gives it such "body" brilliance, durability and all-round satisfaction.

G. R. CONDON

THE ONLY NATION TO DO IT

When Gladstone granted independence to the Transvaal after the defeat at Majuba Hill, the rulers of the Transvaal, who had been the British people called him very bad names. The Great Commonwealth, however, responded by saying that Britain was great enough to be generous even to an enemy. In 1906, when the Campbell-Bannerman Government granted full Dominion Home Rule to South Africa, then so recently our enemy, the entire Opposition condemned the act as suicidal and the beginning of the dismemberment of the Empire. The result was that when the World War broke out, the majority of the Boers were with us and fought splendidly under the Flag. And now comes another experiment in national generosity on a scale never paralleled in history before. Away back in the sixties and seventies of the last century, Britain, the great imperial ruler of Egypt, who squandered it most recklessly and called for more. Other nations loaned them money also, with the same results. When it looked as if the Suez Canal was going into bankruptcy, the British government, bought out the Egyptian holdings, which gave England the dominant ownership. Things went from bad to worse in Egypt. The common people were oppressed and the taxes became unbearable. At length a Nationalist movement started under Arabi Pasha, who organized an army and repudiated the national debt, the movement being marked by a terrible riot in Alexandria, which killed many Europeans. Just their lives. All the European nations but England held aloof, but the vast sum owing to her and the need of protecting the Canal forced her to act. Alexandria was bombarded and taken in 1882, Fisher being commander of the Inflexible, then the greatest ship in the Navy, whose guns did so much damage to the forts. An army of Egypt was taken over by Britain. With the coming of the British regime commenced a period of marvellous reforms. Law and order were established and the common people were liberated from the control of the nobility and given the right to their lands. Better methods of agriculture were introduced, the gigantic Assuan Dam was built across the Upper Nile and a vast acreage was added to the crop-producing area of the country. From the very abode of poverty Egypt became a place of wealth and industry, a goodly place in which to live. After all this has been done and this most ancient of nations been transformed into a modern and most prosperous country, the great Benefactor says: "Here is your organization, here is your peace and prosperity, here is your government. All are in your hand for you to work out your own destiny. The country has been made new and is now given its independence together with an agreement by which Egypt is to be protected from invaders by the might of Britain, in return for which Britain will be granted superior trade privileges and non-interference with the canal." Egypt, the most ancient of nations, the earliest of organized communities, after a loss of national independence from the conquest of the Persians, Carthaginians, the sixth century before Christ down to the present date—twenty-five centuries at a stretch—is now after this vast interval a free and independent Nation once more; the gift of a people whose earliest known ancestors were not even mentioned by historians until long after Egypt had arisen, flourished and disappeared from the roll of free Nations. The genuineness of the Democracy of England was never so clearly illustrated as this free-will granting of Independence to Nations to whom she had brought law, order and prosperity. She trained them for freedom and then gave them the priceless boon. Could selfishness go farther than this?

Burglars, equipped with a motor lorry, backed up to the office of the Italian Mosaic Company on King street west, Toronto, during Thursday night and got clean away with the office safe, with contents including $1,000 cash intended for wages next day.

John Schwartz, of Bridgeport, Ct. was a private chauffeur five years ago. To-day he is known as the "Honey King" of Connecticut, threatening to wipe out street car service in all leading cities of that State. Schwartz charges a straight 5-cent fare, while the Street Car Company has been on a zone schedule ranging from 6 cents upwards.

CARRIES TANLAC ACROSS ATLANTIC

Dreaded To Put To Sea With out Medicine That Relieved His Stomach Trouble.

Before starting on his last trip across to Gibraltar with a load of 8640 quintals of fish, Capt. Fred Hollett of Burn, called in at Connor's Drug Store in St. John's to get six bottles of Tanlac, as he expected to be away for some months.

"So long as I've got Tanlac with me I don't fear the trip," said Capt. Hollett, "but I've been such a sufferer from stomach trouble that I just dread putting to sea without it for Tanlac is the only thing that ever did me any good. Mine was a pretty bad case. I don't believe anyone ever suffered more than I did without going out of his mind. For eight years I never touched a meal without severe distress and stomach pain afterwards that fairly doubled me up. I never seemed to get any good out of food and always seemed played out and weak. I had such headaches that they made me light-headed and I often had bad dizzy spells. I never slept well of a night and would get up in the morning with a bad taste in my mouth and feeling so sick that I couldn't touch a bit of breakfast. I got advice both in European ports and here in Newfoundland, and was told that I had catarrh of the stomach. I took lots of medicine, but it was all money thrown away for all the good it ever did me."

"When I came in from my last voyage everyone seemed to be talking about Tanlac, and after reading of several people I knew who had got help from it, I decided it was just about what I needed. And sure enough Tanlac fixed me up all right. The cook can now eat anything he likes and I can eat anything I want and it never has any bad effects whatever. I enjoy breakfast, which is a thing I haven't done for years and I sleep just fine, every night. I am on deck for duty every day without fail, and to tell you the truth I feel a different man entirely."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

"DIGBY CHICKENS" UP TO DATE.

(By J. Chas. Walker.) They have wings as well as feathers. Silken hoes and golden tresses. And the mother bird stands watching. At the pier and at the station. As the young ones the hawks gather. Every summer at the water. Also be hawks quite some older. Who have lost their tufts on top-knaps. But are nice and plump and wholesome. Bolder far than many younger. Years have taught them many graces. That the chicks deem to be virtues. And the chicks just stand scratching. Till the mother birds chuck warning. And undo the "Pines" they wander. To the top of the sun's up. So it comes all through the summer. Till September's cooling breezes. Chase all to warmer climes. Thus it goes through years and years. "Digby Chickens" aren't they dears?

CANADIAN
PEOPLE

To the People of Canada

THERE are many things which you need not buy unless you choose. But footwear is not among them. You must have shoes. From the standpoint of your health, as well as for comfort and appearance, good shoes are a necessity. And that fact alone places upon the manufacturer of shoes a responsibility which he must at all times appreciate.

That responsibility to the Canadian public is shared by the 158 manufacturers of shoes in Canada, from whom you buy nearly $50,000,000 worth of footwear every year.

The fact that we have built up an industry of such magnitude is the best evidence that we do appreciate this responsibility. One may think that our responsibility ends when we have produced footwear of honest value and sincere workmanship, and have placed it on the shelf of the retail store where it is accessible to you. That is one essential service which our industry is called upon to render.

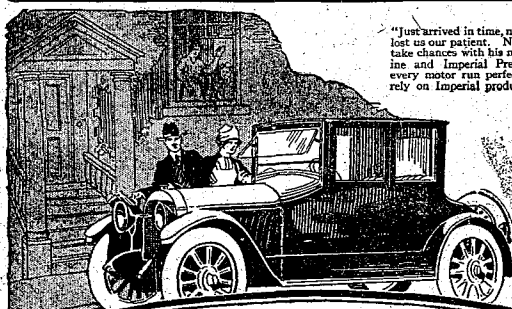

But we cannot dismiss our responsibility quite so easily. We believe that we should do more than that.

Good shoes are of such daily importance that we ought to make public certain facts and conditions which govern the quality of the product we make, and the value which you receive for your money. We ought to point out clearly, the part which you play, and the influence which your exercise, in establishing those conditions. We should urge upon you, your own responsibility in the matter, and show you just how you can help to maintain the quality of the footwear which we offer you.

This is the first advertisement of a series which will be devoted to that purpose.

Canada produces footwear of every desirable type, and of standard quality in all grades. When you buy Made in Canada Footwear you are assured, at fair prices always, of the utmost that modern skill can produce in Comfort, Service and Style.

IN MARS.

A Few Facts About Our Celestial Neighbors.

Sending wireless messages to Mars and Venus, and the possibility of projecting a rocket to those planets are subjects of recent speculation which have excited keener interest in our solar system.

"Mars always challenges interest," says William Joseph Showalter, an eminent scientist.

"Its day is about the same length as ours, but its year is nearly twice as long. Although astronomers generally take less interest than laymen in the surmise as to whether other planets and stars are inhabited, since they, more than laymen, realize that this is a problem that must in all human probability remain unsolved, the question is more often asked about Mars than any other planet."

"Venus was an unusually interesting object in the sky during July of last year. Not again until February, 1921, will it appear as bright and fair in the evening sky. It has phases like the moon, and these can be seen even through a good field glass. Its day is believed to be the same length as its year, which is 224 of our days."

"It is quite generally believed that Mars has ice-capped poles. The telescope reveals white spots at the poles that have every appearance of being like our ocean Polar regions. They advance toward the equator in winter and retreat in summer. In the summer of 1916 Pickering, who, with Lowell, has led the school of astronomers who believe they can see canals on Mars, said that he found the white caps stretching farther down toward the equator than he had ever seen them before."

"He said that if there was any connection between the weather of Mars and that of the earth, the winter of 1916-17 would be the coldest in many years. And it was. May it yet be possible to do long-range weather forecasting on the earth by studying the waxing and waning of the ice-caps of the South Pole of Mars?"

"Perhaps our most graphic picture of the solar system is given by Herschel. Imagine a circular field two and a half miles in diameter in the very centre, 82 feet away put a mustard seed. The globe will represent the sun and the mustard seed Mercury."

"At a distance of 142 feet place a pea, and another at 215 feet. These will represent Venus and the earth, both as to size and distance. A rather large pinhead at a distance of 327 feet will speak for Mars, and a fair-sized tangerine a quarter of a mile distant will stand for Jupiter. A small lemon at two-fifths of a mile will play the role of Saturn, a large cherry three-fourths of a mile distant will answer for Uranus, and a fair-sized plum at the very edge of the field will proclaim Neptune."

"Eighty moons would be required to make one earth. A player there could throw a ball six times as far as it can be thrown on a Canadian lacrosse field. A man weighing 150 pounds there would weigh 900 on the earth. The earth receives as much light and heat from the sun in 15 seconds as it gets from the moon in a whole year."

Ludendorff as Xerxes.
Theodore Wolff, writing in the Tagessblatt, compares Gen. Ludendorff, formerly chief of the German general staff, with Xerxes, "who, after the destruction of his fleet, ordered the sea to be whipped."

"It does not indicate much strength of soul," he continues, "when Ludendorff repeatedly seeks to make the people responsible for the revolution, which was occasioned only by military failures. He is considerably more unjust than Xerxes."

"The Americans whom he had ridiculed came, and the tanks that he had made fun of arrived also. On June 6 the announcement was made to the German people that the 'proud manoeuvre army of the Entente as such exists no longer,' and five days later came the dissolution and complete destruction of the Foch manoeuvre army."

"Yet all of a sudden, as four years before, the German army had ventured too far—the manoeuvre army was there. The German troops had to give, and in the reception which followed so many lying claims, in the bitterness at the murderous mistakes, and in the recognition that with the calculated entry of America Germany's fate was sealed, a four-year-old courage collapsed."

We Should Drink at Meals.
At a recent examination of the University of the State of New York, the question was asked: "Is it beneficial or harmful to drink water with meals?" The following is the official answer:

"It was formerly taught that water should not be drunk with meals, because (it was urged) such a procedure resulted in diluting the gastric juice and that digestion would be delayed or inhibited. But it has now been proved that the drinking of water with meals stimulates the secretion of gastric juice, also that it causes inhibition of the growth of intestinal bacteria, that it produces an improved liver function, that it decreases intestinal putrefaction, and that it enables the food to be utilized more economically. Further, the saliva acts more efficiently as an amylolytic agent when diluted with water. For all these reasons we may infer that it is beneficial to drink water with meals."

A Large Wine Cellar.
The most capacious wine cellar in the world is owned by the Rumanian Government. A railway tunnel 2,600 feet long could not be used for the purpose for which it was intended because of inferior construction, so it was leased to a wine dealer, who turned it into a storehouse for wine.

Civilized Blacks.
The Wakamba, the leading Bantu tribe in the mountains are the most highly civilized black race in America. They had a decimal system of calculation when first discovered by white men.

PRICES IN GERMANY.

Strange Contradictions Found In Conditions There.

Continued shortage of raw material, increased cost of coal and wages, and being reflected in a general increase in prices throughout Germany, according to the German newspapers.

A Hamburg rubber goods company has announced a 30 per cent. increase in the cost of all goods. Leather goods have gone up in price enormously. Some dealers say the price has reached a stage that they believe it will be virtually impossible to do business in the leather line if the price takes another jump. Trade papers have recommended that leather goods be permitted to be imported free of duty.

German newspapers are contemplating an increase both in the rate of subscription and of advertising.

Despite the wall of high prices, German newspapers published long accounts recently to the effect that many foreigners, especially Russians, had been flocking to Germany to take advantage of the low cost of living due to the low value of the mark. One newspaper says: "The cost of living for a foreigner in Germany today is probably one-fourth of that abroad. Naturally, foreigners, attracted by the cheapness of living conditions, are flocking to various parts of Germany. Many in the Russian emigrants who escaped from Stockholm or Copenhagen with money enough to last them a year or so, but who, by coming to Germany, find themselves provided with enough money to last them five or six years."

War Booms Bronze Business.
As a result of the war the making of large bronze statues has become as memorial in the cities and towns of the many combatant nations promises to be a booming business for a while at least, according to an exchange. The statues are by no means so easy to make as most people imagine.

"First of all a plaster model has to be made of the actual statue, and this model is completely covered with small blocks of a special kind of oil, sometimes as many as 2,000 pieces being required. This special sand is put on in a wet state and, after the blocks are dry, they are taken off one at a time and carefully put together in the form of a mould."

The latter is then filled with clay, so that a facsimile is obtained of the plaster model. This clay model—or core, as it is called—then has a quarter of an inch taken off its entire surface, which is, needless to say, a very difficult and tricky job."

The clay core is then put into the mould of sand blocks and kept in a central position by means of iron rods, so that there is left a quarter of an inch space between the core and the mould. The molten bronze is then poured in from the top until it completely fills the space between the core and the mould."

After it has cooled the latter is again removed, the clay interior taken out, and the statue, except for a little polishing, is ready to be put in position."

Pollux Hoaxed Germans.

An audacious hoax has been perpetrated at Aix-la-Chapelle by a French soldier on the German police.

Wearing the uniform of a Belgian major, a demobilized police named Jules Etienne called at the police headquarters and demanded the services of three policemen to effect the search of a bank in the name of the Belgian military occupation authorities.

He was provided with an escort and proceeded to the bank, where he assembled the directors, to whom he announced his mission. He then ordered the doors to be closed, locked the employees in a room with the directors, and emptied the safe of about $125,000, which he deposited in a suit case and confided to a soldier whom he had brought with him to be taken to the Belgian headquarters.

He then released the employees and stalked out of the bank, followed however, by one policeman who had become suspicious. On being arrested Etienne admitted the hoax, and was turned over to the French military authorities.

Points on Planets.
Neptune, the outermost of the planets, is nearly thirty times as far away from the sun as we are.

Mercury, on the other hand, is not much more than one-third as far away from the sun as we are. It gets from the solar orb thirteen times as much light and heat as we get. A hot little planet, Mercury. About three times the size of our moon, it is a more solid body than the earth, weighing as much as a sphere of lead of equal bulk.

Venus, slightly smaller than earth and nearer to the sun, is enveloped by a cloudy canopy such as that which covered our own world during the coal-forming period. If that planet is inhabited there must be great demand for umbrellas.

Probably Venus has such rains and some such rank vegetation as the earth had in those ages when the plants flourished which furnished material for the coal beds.

An Arabian Parable.
An arabic version of the biblical story of the Pharisee and the tax collector is contained in a book of Arabian legends, most of them extracted from the Koran, which has just been published.

The Christian said: I thank God for creating me a Christian and not a Jew.

The Jew said: I thank God for creating me a Jew and not a pagan. The pagan said: Thanks be to the Trinity, I am a pagan and not an atheist.

The atheist said: I am happy that I am an atheist and not a dog.

The dog said: Thanks to God that I am a dog and not a pig. The pig said: Praises to the Most High! I am a pig and am not ungrateful to my most merciful Father.

Bertrand W. Sinclair

A simple routine served to fill her day. She kept her home shining, she cooked her food, carried in her fuel. Except on days of fortnight stints she put on her own shoes, and with a little rifle in the crook of her arm prowled at random through the woods—partly because it gave her pleasure to range sturdily afield, partly for the physical brace of exertion in the crisp air. Otherwise she curled comfortably before the fireplace and sewed, or read something out of Bill's catholic assortment of books.

It was given her, also, to learn the true meaning of loneliness, that loneliness of spirit which is stifled by stress in the crowded places, and stimulated by like stress amid surroundings where life is noncomplex, direct, where cause and effect tread on each other's heels. Every day, if she failed to drop into her cabin, came one of her neighbors to see if all were well with her.

Quite as a matter of course Jake kept steadily replenished for her a great pile of firewood. Or they would come, babies and all, bundled in furs of Jake's trapping, singling up of an evening behind the frisky bays. And while the bays munched hay in Roaring Bill Wagstaff's stable, they would cluster about the open hearth, popping corn for the children, talking, always with cheerful optimism.

Behind Lauer's mild blue eyes lurked a mind that borrowed incessantly to the roots of things. He had lived and worked and read, and pondering it all, he had summed up a few of the virtues.

"Life, it is given us, and we must off it make der best we can," he said once to Hazel, fondling a few books he had borrowed to read at home. "Life is good, just der lifting of life. If galy we go not outtry after der voolish dings—and if der self-preservation struggle years us not out so dot vo cannot enjoy being alive. So many us struggle and slave under terrible conditions. Und it is largely because off ignorance. Ve know not vot ve can do—and ve shrink from der unknown. Here us acres by der dousand free to der man vot can it make use, und dousands vot life and dies and neffer has a home. Here us goot, clean air—and in der smoke and smoke and dirty streets is a ravage of tuberculosis. Der balance is not true. Und der own way der rich is full off drible—drunk mit excitement, very much blagues. Ach, der woods and megaluns and streams, biesty off food, and a kindly neighbor—is not dot enough? Only der abnormal wants more as dot. Und I dank der drible is largely dot der modern high-pressure civilization makes for der abnormal, vedder a man is a million-aire or works in der brewery, contentment is a state off der mind—and in der mind words mit legic it vil content find in der simple dings."

It sounded like a pronouncement of Bill's. But Lauer did not often grow serious. Mostly he was jovially cheerful, and his wife likewise. The North had emancipated them, and they were loyal to the source of their deliverance. And Hazel understood, because the herself had found the wild land a benefactor, kindly in its silence, restful in its forested peace, a cure for sickness of soul. Twice now it had rescued her from herself.

November and December went their appointed way—and still no word of Bill. If now and then her pillow was wet she struggled mightily against depression. She was not lonely in the dire significance of the word—but she longed passionately for him. And she held fast to her faith that he would come.

The last of the old year she went little abroad, ventured seldom beyond the clearing. And on New Year's eve Jake Lauer's wife came to the cabin to stay.

Hazel sat up, wide awake, on the instant. There was not the slightest sound. She had heard deep in sleep. Nevertheless she felt, rather than knew, that some one was in the living-room. Perhaps the sound of the door opening had filtered through her window. She hesitated an instant, not through fear, because in the months of living alone fear had utterly forsaken her; but hope had leaped so often, only to fall sickeningly, that she was half persuaded it must be a dream. Still the impression strengthened. She slipped out of bed. The door of the bedroom stood slightly ajar.

Bill stood before the fireplace, his shaggy fur cap pushed back on his head, his gauntlets swinging from the cord about his neck. He had left a great bed of coals on the hearth, and the glow shone redly on his frost-scathed face. But the marks of bitter trail bucking, the marks of frostbite, the stubby beard, the tiny icicles that clustered on his eyebrows; while these traces of hardship tugged at her heart they were forgotten when she saw the expression that creased his forehead. Wonder and unbelief and longing were all mirrored there. She took a shy step forward to see what stirred his gaze. And as she drew the choosing sensation in her throat she smiled—for she had taken off her little, beaded goggles, and she was, and he was staring down at them like a man fresh-wakened from a dream, unbelieving and bewildered.

With that she opened the door and ran to him. He started, as if she had been a ghost. Then he opened his arms and drew her close to him.

"Bill, Bill, what made you so long?" she whispered. "I guess it served me right, but it seemed a never-ending time."

"What made me so long?" he echoed, bending his rough cheek down against the warm smoothness of hers. "I don't know you wanted me. I ain't no telegraphist, now. You never peeped one little word since I left. How long you been here?"

"Since last September," she smiled up at him. "Didn't Courvoisier's man deliver a message from me to the mine? Didn't you come in answer to my note?"

"Great Caesar's ghost—since September—alone! You poor little girl!" he murmured. "No, if you sent word to me through Courvoisier I never got it. Maybe something happened his man. I left the Klumpen with the first snow. Went poking aimlessly around the Pinlay river with a couple of trappers. Couldn't settle down. Never heard a word from you. I'd given you up. I just went in this way."

"I let the Klumpen with the first snow. Went poking aimlessly around the Pinlay river with a couple of trappers. Couldn't settle down. Never heard a word from you. I'd given you up. I just went in this way."

"Sure!" she laughed happily. "But I sent you word, even if you never got it. Oh, well, it doesn't matter. Nothing matters now. You're here, and I'm here, and—Oh, Billy-boy, I was an awful pig-headed idiot. Do you think you can take another chance with me?"

"Sure!" he held her off at arm's length admiringly—"do you want to know how strong I am for taking a chance with you? Well, I was on my way out to flag the next train East, just to see—just to see if you still cared two pins; to see if you still thought your game was better than mine."

"Well, you don't have to take any eastbound train to find that out," she cried gaily. "I'm here to tell you I care a lot more than any number of pins. Oh, I've learned a lot in the last six months. Bill, I had to hurt myself, and you, too. I had to get a job to jar me out of my self-centered little orbit. I got it, and it did me good. And it's funny. I came back here because I thought I ought to, because it was our home, but rather dreading it. And I've been quite contented and happy—only hungry, oh, so dreadfully hungry, for you."

Bill kissed her.

"I didn't make any mistake in you, after all," he said. "You're a real partner. You're the right stuff. I love you more than ever. If you made a mistake you paid for it, like a dead-game sport. What's a few months? We've all our life before us, and it's plain sailing now we've got our bearings again."

"Amen!" she whispered. "I—bet, say, man of mine, you've been on the trail, and I know what the trail is. You must be hungry. I've got all kinds of goodies cooked in the kitchen. Take off your clothes, and I'll get you something to eat."

"I'll go you," he said. "I am hungry. Made a long rush to get here for the night. I got six huskies running loose outside, so if you hear 'em coming around you'll know it's not the walrus. Say, it was some welcome surprise to find a fire when I came in. Thought three snowshoes traveling through and put in. Then I saw those slippers lying there. That was sure making me take notice when you stepped out."

He chuckled at the recollection. Hazel lit the lamp, and stirred up the fire, plying it with wood. Then she slipped a heavy bathrobe over her nightgown and went into the chilly kitchen, emerging therefrom presently with a tray of food and a kettle of water to make coffee. This she set on the fire. Whenever she moved Bill's eyes followed her with a gleam of joy. His face, tanned and weathered, was lit up with smiling incredulity. When the kettle was safely bestowed on the coals, he drew her on his knee. There for a minute she perched in rich content. Then she rose.

"Come very quietly with me, Bill," she whispered, with a fine air of mystery. "I want to show you something."

"Sure! What is it?" he asked.

"Come and see," she smiled, and took up the lamp. Bill followed obediently.

Closed up beside her bed stood a small, square crib. Hazel set the lamp on a table and, turning to the bundle of blankets which filled this new piece of furniture, drew back one corner, revealing a round, puckered-up infant face.

"For the love of Mike!" Bill muttered. "Is it—is it—"

"It's our son," she whispered proudly. "Born the tenth of January, three weeks ago today. Don't, don't you great bear—youda waik him!"

For Bill was bending down to peer at the tiny marred lump, with a strange, shamed smile on his face. His big, clumsy fingers touching the soft

The Path to Health

For many thousands of women the Path to Health has certainly been through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When this great remedy was first introduced, and for many years after, skeptics frowned upon its curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by it has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands—doubt and skepticism have been swept away as by a mighty tidal wave, until today this purely vegetable medicine is recognized as the greatest remedy for woman's special ills in the world. This is because it is a wonderful tonic and retractor which acts directly and favorably upon the feminine organization, and is a specific for that purpose.

An Established Reputation

The quality of KING COLE ORANGE PEKOE TEA needs no explanation. Its four years of service to the public has earned for it a reputation of which we are justly proud. From the first we claimed it to be "the extra in choice tea."

Users repeatedly tell us it is all that and more. We shall see to it that it is never any less.

"Us two and the kid," he said whimsically. "It should be the hardest combination in the world to bust. Are you happy, little person?"

She nodded, clinging to him, wordlessly happy. And presently she covered the baby's face, and they went back to sit before the great fireplace, where the kettle bubbled cheerfully and the crackling blaze sent forth its challenges to the bevy of forest sprites that held high revel outside.

And, after a time, the blaze died to a heap of glowing embers, and the forerunning wind of a northeast storm howled and whistled about a house deep wrapped in coloured slumber, a house no longer divided against itself.

You will like Lantic fine!

For BAKING. For pound, tea and sponge cakes, coffee cakes, angel cakes, layer cakes, fruit cakes, coconut cakes, pork cakes, nut cakes, short cakes, macaroons and biscuits, crullers, rolls, buns—ALL cakes—Lantic creams quicker with the butter—because it's FINE.

For BEVERAGES. For tea, coffee, lemonade, root beer, orangeade, lemon pop and fruit punch—in fact for all home-made beverages—use LANTIC. There will then be no wasted spoonful left at the bottom of the cup or glass—because it's FINE.

FINE in granulation—finer than all other sweeteners in actual use—finest in results obtained. "Fine" has many meanings to the Lantic user! In snowy glistening crystals of pure cane sugar—all sugar and nothing else—Lantic brings you concentrated sweetening. And because each crystal is fine, and even, Lantic dissolves at once—it instantly delivers its great sweetening power without hesitation. Of course it goes farther. Of course it costs less. Of course you will like it fine.

In PRESERVING late fruits, such as pears, plums and peaches, it eliminates the danger of over-cooking, which robs fruit of its natural color and shape, and some of its flavor.

In BAKING, Lantic creams quickly with the butter—which makes the cake light and dainty. Creaming need not be tedious.

In CANDY-MAKING fine granulation gives candy a soft velvety quality. Most of the highest grade chocolates and finer candies are made with Lantic. The exquisite "velours" of the best chocolate creams comes from Lantic fineness.

In TEA-OR COFFEE, in fact in all beverages (hot or cold), every Lantic crystal dissolves at once, yielding readily the full sweetening of the purest cane.

MRS. FRED SMITH SUFFERED 10 YEARS

Says the Good Tanlac Did Her Is so Wonderful As to Be Almost Unbelievable—

When the Tanlac representative called on Mrs. Fred Smith, of Powells Court, Old Falls, St. John, N. B., he got a most hearty reception from both her husband and herself.

"We are so glad to see you," said Mrs. Smith, who is a bright little Yorkshire woman "anyone on Tanlac business is welcome here for if it hadn't been for that marvelous medicine I shouldn't be up and about the house today."

Then was related a story which did the representative's heart good to listen to. "You see I have suffered from dyspepsia and a disordered stomach for quite ten years. No one knows what I have gone through during all that time. I could never enjoy a meal and even fish used to upset me. I had fits of dizziness and often I would jump up from the table with a feeling that I was going to faint. Some times my heart would palpitate so terribly I feared I had heart trouble, but I know now that it was only caused by the action of the gas which used to form on my stomach. I got so weak at last that I could scarcely get around, and it was quite a task to climb a flight of stairs. For the last two years my condition has been almost chronic, for in addition to my other troubles I have suffered terribly from rheumatism. The muscles at the back of my knees would knot up into great lumps causing me intense agony and the joints of my fingers used to swell up so that I could scarcely use my hands. For two months last winter I was in bed and my daughter had to stay at home and help nurse me. I was a pitiable sight I can tell you."

"It seems almost unbelievable but it was Tanlac which rescued me from this deplorable condition. My husband had read in the papers the statements of other people who had greatly benefited by its use, and it was he who bought the first bottle. That first bottle did me so much good that I continued the treatment and it wasn't long before my rheumatism left me entirely and I have never returned. I got such an appetite and to my surprise found that my food agreed with me and was doing me good. I quickly got stronger and to-day I am so well that I can do my own housework and think nothing of a two-mile walk. Everybody who suffers as I did ought to know about Tanlac as it is for that reason that I give you this statement."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

PROSPECTS OF THE NEW NATION ARE GREAT.

Country In Central Europe Has Wealth That Has So Far Been Almost Undeveloped—People Have Shown Themselves Very Jealous of Their New-Won Liberties, Which Accounts for Arguments With Italy.

It is not remarkable that a people beaten down and exploited through the ages should see in every encroachment on their new-won liberties a threat toward a renewal of all those conditions of dependence from which they have just escaped, writes Hamilton Fish Armstrong in the New York Evening Post. The nearest neighbor of Jugoslavia is Italy, who, through the war, was the warm ally of her King-George King. But from across the Adriatic have come few signs of friendliness or co-operation; before the armistice, yes—so long as the outcome of the struggle with Austria-Hungary was in the balance the Italian Government found many ways, official and private, of extending sympathy and aid to the Jugoslav cause, which was busy undermining the enemy empire. And at the Council of Rome, in 1918, Orlando proclaimed a policy of the most brotherly friendship for Trumbitch and his associates. There were no references, in Council by Parliament or press, to "the hegemony of the Near East," "the Adriatic an Italian lake," "domination of the Balkans," or "the most Italian ports, Trieste and Fiume," or the other now familiar Italian watchwords.

Jugoslavia, with the potential resources of a country of something under 100,000 square miles, mostly undeveloped, and something over 11,000,000 inhabitants, the vast majority of them unskilled in modern arts of agriculture or commerce, presents an enticing field for foreign exploitation. The barest outline of the resources of the new state will be instructive to those who think of the Balkan countries as the abode solely of fies, short-skirted brigands and chocolate soldier heroes. Let mention a few. The provinces of Banat and Banat, for example, developed during the war into the main granary of the Central Powers and now form the richest wheat-producing district per acre in Europe. In Northern Serbia alone the Austro-Hungarian armies by means of the "Ernteverwaltungs Zentrale" (Central Food Control) after the harvest of 1917 extracted for their use a total of 7,600 tons dried fruits and 9,000 tons of fruit jam, besides 228,980 litres of wine and 958,500 litres of pure alcohol. The same food commission rebuilt a ruined sugar factory at Belgrade and turned out during the summer of 1918 a total of 4,500 tons of sugar and 5,500 tons of molasses. The machinery of this plant, like that of practically all the other factories of Serbia, was afterwards carried off or destroyed.

With the introduction of modern methods of live stock breeding, Serbia is also destined to take an important commercial place as the foremost European source of pork and bacon, an industry which in the past proved highly profitable even under the most adverse and unsettled conditions. The country was wiped bare of live stock by the Austrian armies, but large indemnity importations have been made and Jugoslavia has an uncommon right to see the Danubian ferries filled with the choice pigs and sheep, as presented by the Croats and Slovenes to restock the hillside pastures of their less fortunate Serbian kinsmen. A dealer named Mr. Armstrong in Belgrade only a few months ago whether there were any American firms which would care to contract for 100,000 cured hams yearly and whether he would and a sale over here for camels, the glue made from goat's milk, which is used so largely in constructing airplane wings.

Scattered all over the country are vast copper, copper and gold deposits, the majority of them wholly unworked, some of them unworked since the Middle Ages, when the mineral wealth of the Balkan countries was a matter of popular fable. It has been seriously computed that the annual rental of 300,000 ducats paid in the fourteenth century for three of the gold mines in Serbia amounted to half the total revenue of Queen Elizabeth of England 200 years later. The production of copper at the large mine of Bor in 1906 was 500 tons, in 1912 it was 7,575 tons, and during the war, under efficient German management, it reached 12,000 tons. The main copper deposits are still inaccessible on account of the lack of railways, as are the important deposits of lead, zinc and chromium, and 900,000,000 pounds of the Bosnian iron and salt. But hydraulic power awaits the miner in almost unlimited quantities, as the mineral fields are in the mountains where waterfalls abound. Timber covers one-third of Serbia, Bosnia, Montenegro, and this will become available for export, ship-building, etc., as soon as the roads and railroads are improved. There is opening for capital and energy along almost every conceivable line. Are the Jugoslavs themselves going to be given the chance to develop the field, for once freely and unhindered, aided by the experience and resources and co-operation of friendly nations? This question once asked, the world Fiume demands a foremost place in the discussion. You will look at a map, see a dozen or so little islands dotted along the Dalmatian coast, and ask why the Jugoslavs have lit up Fiume as their sine qua non and why they hold Europe on the precipice of another war rather than compromise their right to use this particular port free from foreign domination.

SUSPECTS TORTURED

Japanese Have Trouble In Subduing Korea.

"The efforts of the new Japanese Administration of Korea to recover the confidence of the Korean people are largely nullified by official maltreatment of Koreans," says the Tokyo correspondent of the London Express.

"While the use of paddles and flogging is publicly abolished by the Government, police officials regularly use torture upon the suspects."

The following particulars of the methods employed are furnished by Dr. Frank Schofield, of the Severance Mission Hospital, Seoul:

"Case 1.—An educated young man, punished with 90 blows of the paddle for complicity in the independence movement, and released after six weeks' imprisonment, was re-arrested and questioned with regard to the bomb that was thrown at Admiral Saito. During the police examination he was seven times suspended from the ceiling by a cord tied around his wrists; on five occasions his head was forced back and tied to his forehead, which had been fastened behind his back; water was poured down his nostrils off and on during a period of four days, and for a further period of three days soap and water were substituted for the water."

"As a last expedient in this line, pepper tea was used; the reaction was so severe that the young man became unconscious. All these methods having failed, the police ordered his toe nails to be extracted. The Korean torturer, instead, pulled out a piece of flesh from the inside of the small toe, which caused profuse bleeding and satisfied the police."

"Case 2.—A young man charged with printing the 'Independence' newspaper, refused to give the names of his accomplices. He was beaten unconscious three times in six days and once by hot irons. When seen by the doctors he was a physical wreck."

"Case 3.—A Korean young woman, also educated, was beaten so violently over the head that an abscess formed in one ear, and her knee and hip joints were twisted to the verge of dislocation. She was 'thoroughly spat upon.'"

"One result of such methods is naturally the production of false evidence and the prosecution of innocent people. Another is the creation of a conviction in the Korean mind that promises of reform are for foreign consumption only, and that there is no hope of their condition being ameliorated under Japanese rule. Such are the evil results of ten years of military rule."

"Paper Silk" of Japan.
Millions of yards of a new kind of paper fabric are being manufactured in Japan. It is a composition of paper and silk and is called "paper silk," suitable for making blouses, dresses and other dress material.

It looks like mercerized cotton at its best, and can be used for all sorts of wearing apparel. It is estimated that the stuff can be put upon the English market at only 12 cents per length.

A London merchant who has had twenty years' experience of Japanese imports declared that Japan's manufacturers are laying themselves out with the greatest success to beat the cheap goods of the continent.

Tons of celluloid goods now come to Europe from Japan, which at one time flooded Great Britain from Germany. The secret of this is that Japanese have the greatest available supplies of camphor, which is so essential since great quantities of celluloid material.

Many other goods which were formerly unobtainable are now forthcoming since great quantities of engineering plant and machinery have been laid down.

Discounts.

There are some singular discounts allowed in the book trade. They were briefly illustrated on one occasion by Mark Twain. One day, while the humorist was connected with a publishing house, he went to a bookstore, and picking up a volume asked the price. He then suggested that, as a publisher, he was entitled to 50 per cent. discount. To this the clerk assented.

"As I am also the author of the book," said Mark Twain, "it would appear that I am again entitled to 50 per cent. discount." And the clerk bowed. "And as I am a personal friend of the proprietor," he modestly continued, "I presume you will allow me the usual 25 per cent. discount?" "Well," drawled the unblinking humorist, "under these conditions I think I may well take the book." "What's the tax?" The clerk took out his pencil and figured industriously. "What he said," with great obsequiousness, "as near as I can calculate we owe you the book and about 37 1/2 cents."

Kava-In New Way.

The national beverage of the Samoan Islanders is "kava," obtained from the dried fruit of a plant known to the botanist as Piper methysticum. The classic method of its preparation was by chewing, this work being done by maidens; then water was added, and, after straining, the stuff was ready to drink.

Missionaries convinced the natives that this method did not accord with the best social customs, and so nowadays they grind the kava root in a stone mortar with a stone pestle.

To any unaccustomed person kava tastes rather like soapuds, though some say it has a flavor of vanilla. Many Americans, however, having acquired a liking for it, drink it by the gallon. But the natives, by proving it is too slow for them, and they prefer to use a meat-grinder.

Harder to Sing.

Delicate scientific measurements have proved that contralto, baritone and bass singers use far more force than soprano and tenor singers need.

The women of Spain are generally credited with being the best dancers of any women in the world.

NOVA SCOTIA FISHERIES

Six Months' Catch on Two Coasts Worth $10,564,146

Canadian fisheries both in amount of product and values, made a good record for the first six months of the year ending June 30th. Sea fish landed on both coasts amounted 2,837,724 cwt., valued at $10,564,146. For the same period last year the catch totalled 2,546,773 cwt., valued at $3,393,495, or $1,170,651 less than for the first six months of the present year.

Of the total catch of the six months, 1,974,362 cwt., valued at $7,247,459, were taken from the Atlantic, and 862,962 cwt., valued at $3,269,687, from the Pacific. In the preceding year for the same period 2,048,148 cwt., valued at $2,437,780, was taken from the Pacific.

The catch of cod for the six months dropped by 64,000 cwt., despite the fact that Nova Scotia catch increased by 30,000 cwt. The other provinces were responsible for the decrease. The lobster catch increased by 50,000 cwt., while herring gave an increase of 23,454 cwt. This was due mainly to the landing of much greater catches in British Columbia during January and February. Notwithstanding interruption of shipping service by a reason of a shortage of refrigerator cars, the British Columbia halibut catch exceeded that of the same period last year by 2,500 cwt.

There was also an increase of 27,000 cwt. in the catch of all kinds of salmon owing to larger takings in British Columbia waters. The Atlantic salmon catch fell below that for the preceding year, very much below that for 1918.

The British fuel re-search committee, appointed to seek a satisfactory substitute for petrol, has reported that the production of power alcohol from food-stuffs is not economically possible in England and that production in other parts of the Empire on an adequate scale is not yet practicable.

COAL SITUATION IS VERY SERIOUS

Two hundred tons of coal in the month of September is all that has been allotted to Digby instead of 1,000 or 1,500 tons usually supplied. At this rate there will be a coal famine in Digby the coming winter. It behooves all interested to get together and see that we receive our full share of coal.

This town cannot be supplied by leaving off shipments until December. Already many homes have been hard up to keep the pot boiling and householders have been swapping scuttle loads back and forth. We should try and find out where the trouble is and seek a remedy.

The sales agent of one of the Nova Scotia coal mines recently wrote a dealer as follows: "We have been unable to ship as much coal as we would have liked owing to the weather and other troubles interfering with our production. From not on conditions should be getting better and more coal will probably be available."

This may sound encouraging, but if we are going to get our share of coal we will have to keep a watchful eye on the situation. Coal is going to be dear as well as scarce this winter, and we will need all the efforts that can be put forward to obtain our quota.

The Town Council, the Retail Merchants Association, Board of Trade and other representative bodies should get together and take for their slogan, "Let us get after coal."

Hard coal is bound to be very high in price, and the dealers claim they are not making as much profit as when the same brand of coal was selling some years ago at $9.00 per ton.

A few days ago the United States Attorney General issued instructions to the district attorneys to put an end to all profiteering in bituminous coal. Now it is explained that the order was the outcome of the last monthly report of the Federal Trade Commission. According to this report coal is or was bought at the mines in West Virginia for $3.40 a ton plus transportation. Complaints by Admiral Benson, Chairman of the Federal Shipping Board, that they were forced to pay from $20 to $22 a ton for bunker coal, lead to further investigations, showing that about two dollars represented the transportation. This coal, for which the Shipping Board is being charged from $20 to $22 a ton, is delivered at the seaboard for $5.40. Unfortunately, the Federal Trade Commission did not follow the subject by investigating other handling charges so as to establish the cost to the consumer, but the drop in coal at Baltimore, first to $12.75, then $9.75 and finally $8.75 a ton, immediately followed publication of the report, carries its own proof that profiteering on a tremendous scale has been the order in the distribution of bituminous coal in the United States. What would a similar investigation in Canada disclose?

HOMAGE TO THE HADDOCK

Under the caption, "Hail to the Haddock," the Boston Herald says editorially:

Uncle Sam pays homage to the haddock. A tribute to this denizen of the deep is contained in a circular prepared by Deputy Commissioner H. F. Moore of the Bureau of Fisheries. The reader learns that it was well to get better acquainted with the fish because members of the haddock family are leaving their ocean homes in increasing numbers to aid the American people in the struggle with the high cost of living. Mr. Moore is authority for the statement that the take of haddock in 1919, was 30 per cent. greater than in 1915, and the quantity landed in March of this year was 60 per cent. in excess of the quantity landed in March five years ago. During this period, there has been an increase in the price of haddock at the side of the vessel amounting to only 27 per cent. Unlike the lobster, which now becomes associated only with persons of established wealth, or with plugging profiteers, the haddock is still the poor man's friend.

There is, therefore, place in the knowledge that the haddock will still maintain this friendly relation with humankind into periods so remote that the bursting of the Poonzi bubble will have been forgotten, and 10-cent sugar may again be taken as a matter of course. The haddock lives on the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean in such vast numbers that the experts say the day will never come when the supply will not prove ample to meet the demand. In fact, we have it on the authority of the Government that in recent months the catch has exceeded the demand, but it is thought that conditions will again be equalized when the people outside of New England and the Middle States are introduced to the haddock. It seems that there are many unfortunate in our country to whom the haddock is unknown. They have in prospect, therefore, a great pleasure when the haddock comes to brighten the corners where they are, and where they eat.

Because he is so numerous a family and is democratic in his associations after reaching land, it is not to be inferred that the haddock is of mean and lowly degree among the fishes. The haddock wears badges of distinction. He has a dark spot above each pectoral fin, associated in legend with the marks of St. Peter's finger, and thumb—the haddock, according to the tradition, being the fish from which the Saint took the tribute money. The haddock is first cousin to the cod, but is, if anything, slightly more nutritious and is preferred by many experienced cooks, and by many of those who eat the meals they prepare. And it was a haddock which a canny Scot of Fingdom once upon a time hung in the smoke of a peat fire, with the result that finnan haddie has become famous the world over.

Uncle Sam does well to sing the praises of the haddock. In these days, there is need of campaigning to make known the value of the foods to be found in the sea, and in this case, the public is not asked to take too much on trust. The haddock is already known. It is merely necessary to make him better known. The task of the Government experts should be much pleasanter than their endeavors to turn the American people to a diet of whale, shark and dog-fish.

FOUNDER OF THE CUNARD LINE

Samuel Cunard, Who Had Interests in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

(Lecture in Vancouver Province)

It may be claimed that when the Cunard Company establishes its Pacific steamship service based on the port of Vancouver, and associated with Canadian Government Railways, Canada will be welcoming a wanderer, home. For the Cunard line was established by a Nova Scotian, who remained a citizen of Halifax a good many years after the company was organized with himself at its head. Moreover, its first service was a Halifax service and was promoted by the initiative of public men of Nova Scotia, with some support from New Brunswick.

One day in the year 1838 the British ten-ton brig Tyrian, on her way to Liverpool from Halifax, carrying Her Majesty's mail, lay becalmed in mid-Atlantic. On board were Joseph Howe and intelligent passengers. One was Charles Fairbanks, vice admiral judge and master of the rolls in Nova Scotia, a fine scholar and linguist, who had been a prominent member of the Legislature. Another was Thomas Halliburton, at that time chief justice of the inferior court of common pleas. He had been one of the most eloquent members of the Legislature and written a history of his province. Also he had already written the first and second series of his Sam Slick papers. Joseph Howe's paper, but he had not acknowledged the authorship. This may have been his first journey to England.

It was certainly the first transatlantic trip of the third and youngest of the three, Joseph Howe, then at the age of 34 editor and proprietor of the Nova Scotian, and a private member of the House of Assembly, to which he had been first elected two years before.

The ten-ton brig on which they sailed was one of the ships which carried the mails between Nova Scotia and Great Britain, making the trip sometimes in six weeks, sometimes in twelve.

As they longed for wind, the paddle boat Sirius, bound eastward from Boston came in sight. The captain of the Tyrian hailed this swift ship and transferred the mails, with which the Sirius steamed rapidly away, leaving the brig waiting for wind. The three intelligent passengers were impressed with this exhibition of speed. It may be said that the Sirius was able to make the passage from Boston to Bristol in eight and a half days. There was then one other steamship on the Atlantic route. She was the Great Western, and could cross in fourteen and a half days.

When Halliburton and Howe reached England, they went to Bristol, where the owners of the two ocean steamships lived. After a conference they went to London, where they met William Cram and Harry Bliss, of New Brunswick, and all of them, with Fairbanks, took up the case with the Colonial office. Howe urged that steam communication with British America should be established at once. The Colonial office did not deny it.

It is stated in Sabine's Loyalists that one Robert Cunard of Philadelphia

HELP RAISE FUNDS FOR BRASS BAND

What about a brass band for Digby?

Is it not a crying shame to say the least, that our town, to be in almost everything else that other places of our size have, should be without a band?

Those who have heard the Annapolis Royal Band during the last two years could not fail to be impressed and greatly pleased with programmes rendered under the leadership of Paul Yates.

This is the kind of material that is needed to build up a first class musical organization in our town. In the limits of the town of Digby reside just as good musicians as can be found in the Annapolis Royal, and while not obtainable in such large numbers, there should be no difficulty whatever in getting 25 or 30 bright lads together and with the assistance of the old band members that are left, form a band that delphia, a Loyalist, had his property confiscated, and migrated penniless to New Brunswick. His son, Abraham, settled in Halifax, where, as I learn from another record, he worked as a mechanic in a lumber yard. He saved enough to start a small grocery. When his son, Samuel, born four years after the arrival of Abraham in Halifax, grew up he assisted in the development of the business into a West India trade. The firm bought or built sailing vessels, and also engaged in the vanning of fish with great success. Samuel operated our mines in Pictou and lumber mills in Miramichi, New Brunswick. When Howe met him in Halifax after the London visit, Cunard was just 50, and quite opulent.

After the interview with the colonials, the British Government conferred with the Great Western Company and received an offer which was not accepted. But Howe and his friends had in the meantime interested Samuel Cunard. Before the end of the year Cunard was in Great Britain, where he sought out the owners of the two best lines of coasting steamers. He persuaded them both to join him in the project of a transatlantic line. Then he drew a bargain with the admiralty which would have won the admiration of any modern promoter. Think of a subsidy of $700,000 a year, afterward raised to $1,000,000 for a service, at first fortnightly and then weekly, between Liverpool and Halifax. The line was extended to New York, beginning with four ships of 1200 tons, making the trip from Liverpool to Halifax in eleven days. There was millions in it.

Mr. Cunard became a favorite son of Halifax. Boston gave him within three days 1800 invitations to dinner, many of which he was compelled to decline. But Cunard of Halifax, active in Liverpool, Buenos Aires, Glasgow, and their builder, Robert Napier, did not waste time over dinners. The waste was made in 1839 and their Britannia left Liverpool on July 4, 1840, with Cunard on board for her first voyage, carrying the first mails ever brought to British America by steam.

It is related that more than twenty years afterward some dispute arose over the failure of a ship of some other company to fulfill a mail contract, and the withdrawal of her subsidy. Some indignant member asked in Parliament for a return showing the number and dates of breaches of contract of the Cunard company during the early years of its engagement. After investigation, Mr. Peel, for the treasury, replied that the Cunard company had never broken contract, had incurred no penalties, had never asked any indulgence, but had carried the mails with undeviating regularity for twenty-one years.

Mr. Cunard lived in Halifax a good many years as head of the Cunard line, before he moved to England, where he died in 1865. There are still people in Liverpool who remember him as a resident. A citizen named Starr once informed me that during all Cunard's life in Halifax he never wore a great coat. This invited the guileless question whether he went without because he was so rich or because he wished to save the price. Where upon Mr. Starr explained: "The reason Sir Samuel Cunard never wore a great coat in Halifax was that he was a very small man and a great coat would not fit him."

SAYS THE GULF IS UNBRIDGABLE

Von Tirpitz's Hatred of England.

(Naval and Military Record)

The following is an extract from an article by Admiral von Tirpitz on German foreign policy published in "The Times" on Monday:

"It seems to me beyond doubt that when the door of the Atlantic has been closed to us for a considerable time we shall have to seek a solid economic understanding with our European neighbours, whose interests, as I see them, lie in the same direction. It is possible, but by no means certain, that the English would tolerate a revival of Germany to a certain extent—that is to say so long as they believe they can make use of us as paid slaves. Our course is therefore clear. If we are obliged to work for a long time as paid slaves for other nations we must take the utmost care that it is not for England. The Gulf of antagonism between us and England remains, therefore, to my mind as unbridgeable as ever. In this matter I allow myself to be guided by the optimistic belief that our nation when the bourgeoisie has once been moved from its eyes, will regain its self-confidence, and together with it the will to recover. This can only do in opposition to England and with a programme of solidarity between the continental nations of Europe. It will not lead into antagonism with the Transatlantic nations, not even with America, in spite of her participation in the war against us. The United States and the other overseas nations have no interest in allowing England again to become the European distributing centre for their raw materials."

"It seems to me that the main principals of our foreign policy has not been altered by the outcome of the war. The realization of this principal is therefore of very pressing importance to us Germans, because in spite of all our experiences during the war, the most able men among us are always ready to allow the English to lead them round by the nose as soon as they approach us with soft words, or little acts of kindness. They do not see that England fears our hatred for France in every sphere while she herself with her benevolent Puritan mask remains in the background, just as she did in Greece during the war. The cunning with which the Versailles Peace Treaty was inspired by England in its own interest has not opened our eyes. It is my firm conviction that we and the continent of Europe, which has gone down with us, can only recover if we recognize England's cold, egotistical psychology, and act accordingly."

TALKING TRUNK

A man came into Letteney's store and asked, "Have you trunks?" "What kind?" asked the clerk. "What kind?" responded the man, "how many kinds are there?" "Many," said the clerk. "There is the elephant, the tree and the human trunk, which do you want?" "I want one to travel in," said the man. "A trunk to travel in, why you must want a flying machine or an automobile. I never knew you could travel in a trunk." Just then a voice came from upstairs where the trunks are kept, and said, "Stop your fooling down there and come up here Mr. and see us." The clerk's eyes opened like moons, he turned as white as a sheet. "I did not know that anyone was up there," said he, "it must be the devil!" "Well, come along and let see," said the man. "I will introduce you to him." When they arrived there a voice came from the inside "let me out, I'm smothering". Well you should have seen that clerk run. Then the man opened the window, let the trunk down by a cord and got out himself. They called the Chief of Police to go after him; they chased him down the mud flats and when he got to low water mark he threw the trunk into the water and jumped on it and paddled away with this feet. What was the chief to do, his pants, locus smothered and boots covered with mud? He ran and took an old scow and a board from H. T. Warner's lumber pile to propel the craft, and took chase. Do you believe the story? Well you can believe we have trunks for sale.

WALKED THE FLOOR FIGHT- ING FOR AIR

Roy Steeves suffered After Every Meal Like Old Self Since Taking Tanlac.

"I can swing a hammer as good as ever, for I feel like I have been made over into a new man since I commenced taking Tanlac," was the statement made the other day by Roy Steeves, a well-known blacksmith living at Dover, West County, New Brunswick. "For four years I suffered from stomach trouble," he explained, "and during the past year I was so bad off I could hardly hold up under the strain. I could not eat a meal without feeling nauseated afterwards, and I bloated up with gas and felt so stuffy and tight across my chest I thought I would suffocate. Often I had to get up in the middle of the night and walk the floor fighting for air. My sleep was restless, and as my work required a lot of stooping, I got so weak and run down I could hardly get about the shop. I spent lots of money on many different medicines, but none of them did me any good."

"One day I went to a drug store at Hillsborough and asked the druggist if he could recommend anything for stomach trouble, and he said, try Tanlac. So I took his advice, got a bottle, and commenced to feel better in just a day or so after starting on it, and now all signs of indigestion have left me and I am in better health than I have been in years. My appetite is fine and everything I eat agrees with me without a bit of trouble. I sleep sound at night, am feeling like my old self again and can recommend Tanlac in the very highest terms."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River at the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

TO WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

You How To Pass The Crisis Safely.

Lacelles, P. Q.—"During the Change of Life I felt so weak and run down I could hardly do my work. The perspiration would pour over my face so that I couldn't see what I was doing. We live on a farm, so there is lots to do, but many who felt as I did would have been in bed. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did me a world of good. I tried other remedies but I put Vegetable Compound ahead of them all, and I tell every one I know how much good it has done me."

Such warning symptoms as sense of faintness, hot flashes, headaches, dizziness, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ear, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness should be heeded by middle-aged women, and for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carry them safely through this crisis as it did Mrs. Brown.

You are invited to write for free advice. No other medicine has been so successful in relieving women's sufferings, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Dutch Farmers Will Till Alberta Prairies

SOUND FOR ALBERTA

DUTCH FARMERS REACHING CANADA

GOING TO SEE THE FARMS

Sixty-five husky Hollanders with their families recently arrived in Canada. They were bound for Alberta, where they will farm the 200,000 they brought from their homeland and proceed to work their prairie farms in the thorough manner that has made Holland such a rich agricultural country.

The tide of immigration from Europe to Canada that was interrupted by the war has set in again, and every vessel from Europe brings its quota of men and women eager to start life anew in the Last Great West. The newcomers are of a very high class, many coming from the British Isles and north-western Europe. This is an encouraging feature, as these are the stocks that have to Canada their first sturdy settlers.

Holland is noted for its dikes and its tulips. To many it means but a land quaint and picturesque. It is true, but it is also a rich garden land. Every inch of the land that has been reclaimed from the sea is cultivated intensely. Wheat, oats, barley and rye are staple crops; flax, sugar beets, tobacco, and hemp are also grown; vegetables are cultivated to near-perfection, while Dutch dairy products are world famous.

Dutch farmers are trained to get the maximum from their holdings. Each bit of ground must grow its two crops. When the wheat is cut the stubble is turned under and planted to young cabbages or some other vegetable. Days are spent in tying up the heads of onions. These farmers bring to their larger holdings on the rich Alberta prairies the determination and skill to get the last available bushel of wheat from their acres, and the last pound of butter from their dairy stock. They are planning the fine homes they mean to build with their wheat fortunes, and looking forward to putting their children in the Canadian schools, where all children are social equals, and to taking part in the administration of the land of their adoption.

THE MIDDLE CLASSES.

Some considerable correspondence has been published recently by the London Mail on the question "Who are the Middle Class?" Among the scores of contributions an amusing item was submitted by Charles J. Norris, chairman of the Chiswick Educational Committee, who began by saying that the most startling fact brought out by the enquete was that hardly two correspondents agreed on the definition of the subject. Mr. Norris then proceeded:

"Salaries, banking accounts, professions, trades, social standing, gentility, are words that figure largely in the correspondence, but, so far, no one seems bold enough to describe the Middle Class as 'A Class of Snobs.' And it is because of the difficulty of finding lines of strict demarcation between the so-called working classes and the Upper Classes at the other that the Middle Classes have evolved into a Class of Snobs."

"Consider the case of a head clerk at £1,000 a year and a clerk at £250 per annum, both in the same firm, living in the same district, in parallel roads. One pays a rental of £80, the other £20; but it is not so generous to suppose that these two men, with their livelihood a common object, would find pleasure in social intercourse at the end of the day."

"Not so, however, a Mr. Morning, Smith, is all the junior receives when they board the same train or travel in the same car. Only when an election is approaching does Smith realize how important he is, for then his superior condescends to call on him and says, 'We, Smith—you and I of the Middle Classes—are in danger; we must sink or swim together.' This is merely snobbery, symptomatic of the Middle Classes."

"Education also has its snobbery in the Middle Classes. A mother said to me recently: 'I hope Freddie won't win a scholarship to a secondary school. My eldest boy, since he has been to school, looks down on his parents and will not associate with his former companions. He is a perfect snob.'"

"Not long since the name of a famous biologist was mentioned in conversation and a young secondary teacher who held a pass degree remarked, 'Oh! he can't be any good; he is only a F.R.S. and hasn't taken a degree.'"

"Politics apart, it is refreshing to notice labor's robust antagonism to snobbery."

"We don't care," says Labor, 'who your father is; we don't care who your relations are, or what your banking account is. What we do care about is: What are you doing to help on the progress of the world?' And so long as Labor adopts this attitude it is making the work of educationists easier."

"The Middle Classes, made up of dozens of sub-classes, are really so many centres of irresponsible forces, the resultant of which it is difficult to determine. Not until these classes are merged into one homogeneous whole, from which all trace of snobbery has been selected, can the Middle Class—the yeomen of old—become once again the backbone of England."

Keeping House in England.

In what we now regard as the happy days before the war the domestic life of the middle and upper middle class English people was built upon a foundation of cheap fuel, cheap food, and cheap labor, says Mrs. C. S. Peel, in the North American Review. In families of moderate means it was usual to pay cooks from $120 to $170, house-parlormaid $9 to $140, parlormaid $120 to $150, housemaids $90 to $140, "between-servants"—that is, young girls helping cook and house-parlormaid—$50 to $90 per annum. People in such circumstances employed one, two, or three or even four servants who lived in and were content with an outing every other Sunday and once a week. The sum spent on food in such households varied from about $2.50 to $3.50 per head per week, $3 being an average figure. There was a plethora of charwomen who asked 60 cents a day and their food. Job servants were plentiful at wages varying from $2.50 to $3.50 a week living in, and in the case of cook $3.25 to $5 per week. Milk then cost eight cents instead of 22 cents per quart, bread 10 cents as against 18 cents per quarter, butter 32 to 41 cents instead of 60 cents per lb., sugar 6 cents against 14 cents per lb., white meat from 16 cents to 28 cents per lb. then is now from 28 to 62 cents per lb.

Have Always Made Bread.

The word bread is derived from the Anglo-Saxon "bræon," to bruise, to pound, which is expressive of the ancient mode of preparing the grain, says an exchange.

Bread was not introduced into Rome until five hundred and fifty years after its foundation. Pliny informs us that the Romans learned this, with many other improvements, during the war with Perseus, King of Macedonia. The armies on their return brought Greek bakers with them into Italy, who were called "pistores," from their ancient practice of bruising grain in mortars. The Greeks ascribe the invention of bread-making to Pan; but the Chaldeans and Egyptians were acquainted with it a still more remote period. In the paintings discovered in the tombs of Egypt the various processes used by them in bread-making are distinctly represented. Bread from wheat was first made in China in 2000 B.C.

Antiques.

A visitor going through a rug factory stopped beside an Armenian who was busy plying his shuttle. "You make antique rugs, too?" he inquired presently. "Oh, yes," was the grinning reply. "This rug when he finished is two hundred years old."

A Promise that has made good

When KING COLE TEA was in its infancy we associated with it the slogan—"You'll like the flavor." It was a modest statement, yet when you come to think of it, it covers all that you are looking for in the tea of your choice. How well KING COLE has lived up to its promise is proved by the many thousands of users today.

MONCTON MAN HAD TO QUIT HIS WORK

Never Thought He Would Regain His Health But Tanlac Put Him Back on The Job.

Almost everybody in Moncton, N. B., knows Evariste L. D. LeBlanc, of 207 Robinson St., who is book keeper at his brother's fashionable establishment on Main street. He is one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of Moncton.

He was ill for about two years, so ill indeed that I had to give up work for a whole year, and never thought I should ever start again," said Mr. LeBlanc to the Tanlac representative who had heard of his remarkable recovery and called to see him at his place of business.

Suffered from indigestion, stomach trouble I can never tell you all that I went through and suffered. If ever I ate anything like a decent meal I was seized with pains in the abdomen. For hours afterwards I would be greatly distressed and also have peculiar dizzy feelings. I had but a very feeble appetite and came at last to hate the sight or smell of food. I got very weak and thin and must have lost a great deal in weight. I also suffered a lot from rheumatic pains in my legs and knee joints. As all my friends know I was in a deplorable condition and really despaired of ever getting my health back again.

"I had read in the papers of so many people who had gotten relief from stomach trouble similar to my own case by taking Tanlac that I went along to my friend and bought a bottle. It certainly did wonders for me. My rheumatism disappeared entirely and I haven't had pains in my legs or knee joints since. But what surprised me even more was the way it settled my stomach trouble. I began to assimilate my food properly and could eat quite a hearty meal without any distressing after effects. My appetite rapidly increased and I quickly got stronger until now I have actually gained fifteen pounds in weight and am back at my business."

"My friends all say to me why how well you look; you are getting quite fat and I must say that I am feeling better to-day than I have for years past. Tanlac has been a real boon to me and I take great pleasure in giving you this endorsement." Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River at the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION AT HILL GROVE

Strong Addresses by Denominational Leaders—Profitable Sessions Enjoyed by Delegates Present.

The annual sessions of the Digby County Sunday School Association, were held in the Baptist Church at Hillgrove on Monday afternoon and evening of this week.

The sessions, though not very largely attended, were full of interest for Sunday School teachers and workers.

Rev. W. C. Machin, Secretary of Sunday School and Young People's work for the Maritime Baptist Convention, and Rev. Mr. Milligan, filling the same office for the Presbyterian Church in Eastern Canada, were the specialists presented, and both showed themselves well informed in their respective fields of work.

The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. W. C. Machin, of Little River. John A. Nichols, of Hillgrove, presided over the session, and Rev. W. J. Wright filled the office of Secretary.

Reports from the schools were called for and the distressing fact was brought out that only nine schools of twenty-eight connected with the Association had reported, although all had been called upon to do so.

The County was placed in a very unenviable position by the fact that the Provincial Association, the Maritime Association, the Maritime Standard of Education, and the Maritime Standard of Religion, were all present.

The earnest hope was expressed that next year a very much larger percentage of the schools would live up to their privileges and obligations in this connection. Two schools have been suspended and two new ones have been organized.

Rev. W. C. Machin gave a very interesting address, "The Problems of the Sunday School," and Rev. Mr. Milligan explained and urged upon the delegates.

The books in the Teacher Training course were introduced, and some of the helpful literature and efficiency charts were distributed.

The evening session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. D. Hatt. On the report and recommendation of the Nominating Committee the following officers and heads of departments were elected for the ensuing year:

President—John A. Nichols (Reappointed); Secretary—Rev. Geo. C. Durkee, of Little River.

Secretary-Treasurer—Rev. W. J. Wright, of Bear River; Head of Young People's Department—Mrs. C. H. Carty, Digby; Children's Department—Mrs. Joseph Langley, Bear River.

Department—Miss F. Austin Smith & Cove.

Administration Department—Rev. R. S. Grant, Bear River; Education and Temperance Department—Vernon Snow, Smith's Cove.

Rev. Mr. Machin made a powerful address on "The Problem of Leadership." The training of leadership is characterized as the highest and most important enterprise in the Maritime Provinces. He dwelt on Training Camps for boys and for girls as phases of training promoted by the Maritime Sunday School Association, illuminating and enforcing his remarks with many telling incidents and events from his own experience.

Rev. Mr. Milligan, who is an old Digby boy, made all his old friends and many new ones proud of their friendship by his mastery and tender address on Religious Education. He intimated that the name of the Maritime Sunday School Association might soon be changed to The Maritime Religious Education Council.

He emphasized the importance of training the boys and girls to know God, to feel called and to serve God. He made the startling statement that of three children born into Canadian homes only one becomes the church member. He brought out in a telling way the thought that this was not the will of the Heavenly Father but the fault of His Church on earth, and urged the remedying of conditions that made such a state of things possible.

Rev. Mr. Milligan's first appearance as a Sunday School worker in Digby County was well received, and he will be warmly welcomed by a much larger audience, we predict, when he next attends a Convention in this vicinity.

A hearty expression of appreciation of the leaders of the Convention and of the organization which they represent was passed, as was also a resolution of thanks to the entertaining host of Hillgrove.

After remarks by several of the delegates, expressive of their delight in the Convention and the benefit received, sessions were closed with the benediction by Rev. Mr. Machin.

The schools which were not represented at this splendid inspirational meeting are poorer and those whose workers were present have been enriched. A long and genuine revival of interest in Sunday School work is needed throughout the County.

PEOPLE

Canada—Why?

Is it really worth while to develop institutions and industries which are distinctively Canadian, and which promote the welfare and prosperity of the Canadian people? Of course it is!

Are we wasting our time and energy in training Canadian ability and encouraging Canadian enterprise? Of course not!

CANADA is more than an accident of geography.

The magnificent record of effort made by Canadians in the great European struggle bears witness that the peaceful and unhindered development of the Canadian ideal should be maintained.

The future of Canada depends upon the sincere and earnest self-expression of Canada's millions of workers—at the plough, the loom, the forge—in the factory, the office and the home. And loyalty to Canada is best expressed, not in bursts of patriotic emotion on state occasions, but in supporting and sustaining Canadian enterprise and Canadian industry.

A New Character

When, four years ago, KING COLE ORANGE PEKOE TEA first appeared, something more than a new tea had been produced—a new character in tea had been created. Only after most searching experiments in flavor-blending were we at last able to develop that peculiarly mellow richness of flavor so delightful to the taste, which has won for KING COLE ORANGE PEKOE the high place it holds. The total annual sale of KING COLE ORANGE PEKOE has doubled twice in the last two years.

We are confident that you will say that it is different to any tea you ever tasted.

Curious Marriage Ends War Romance

ONE of the strangest of war romances was ended, or perhaps just advanced another stage, on Sunday, February 5, when in a little Massachusetts town, Miss Emily Knowles, of England, became the wife of Guy S. Spiker, of Baltimore. One of the witnesses to the ceremony was Miss Knowles' little baby, whose father is the brother of the groom. Thereby hangs the tale which has excited interest on two continents. It has made famous one of the most remarkable women who ever have figured in these eternal triangles, as they are called by the movie authors and the sex strategists. She is Mrs. Perley Spiker. For an author to have introduced her as a character of fiction would seem to insult the intelligence of readers. They would have said, as Heddin Gable's husband said at the moment his wife counted suicide. "People don't do those things." Wives may forgive husbands who have been unfaithful, but they don't offer to adopt the illegitimate fruits of such conduct. They do not stand boldly forth as the one unflinching friend of the other woman. They refuse to do a fact, but Mrs. Spiker does. It is her action that has attracted such general interest to the romance.

The villain in the piece is Perley Spiker, of Baltimore, a lieutenant in the American overseas force. How great a villain he was we may judge but at least the sum total of virtue of himself and his wife ought to make them out a good deal better than their neighbors. When Lieut. Spiker was in England he met Emily Knowles, then a girl of eighteen or nineteen years. Whether he fell in love with her or whether he merely amused himself with her is a matter of doubt. Apparently the girl was always aware that he had been in the United States. Nevertheless, she permitted herself to fall in love with him and take a rueful step of his solicitation. Their brief honeymoon was interrupted when he returned to the United States. Time passed and Miss Knowles had a baby, Alfred Ray Spiker, one of the best known of contemporary babies, and according to his mother, easily the most delightful. She communicated with the baby's father, who either then or afterwards told his wife of the sin he had committed in England. Mrs. Spiker is a woman to whom it would be a pleasure to confess sins. What she said to her husband has not been revealed, but it was not her husband, she perceived, whose affairs were of the first importance.

She thought of the girl in England and of the baby. So she wrote to Miss Knowles and sent her money with which to buy passage to the United States. Yes, to the United States, not to Gehenna. Miss Knowles arrived, a pretty, white-faced girl, with this wonderful baby. Mrs. Spiker's intention was to take the two of them to her home, for, as she argued with womanly logic, "that's what the baby's father is." Had she been able to carry out this plan the world would never have heard and marveled at the Spikers. But the immigration authorities took a hand. Something innocent or unguarded must have been let fall. In a moment the officials beheld in Emily Knowles a woman, who, like Hester Prynne, ought to have had a capital "A" set upon her gown, or, perhaps, an initial like Milady were branded upon her breast. They would not let Miss Knowles land. She notified Mrs. Spiker of her trouble and again that heroine came to the rescue. She might have devised a number of ways to pay Miss Knowles a sum of money and seen her shipped back to England as an undesirable. But it happened that she did not. She went right to the front and soon the telegraph wires had flashed to all parts of the United States and back again to England the greatest "human interest story" they had carried for a long time. Mrs. Perley Spiker announced her intention of adopting the baby. She declared herself able and willing to be responsible for Miss Knowles. She would take the baby and Miss Knowles to her own home in Baltimore. At this her pastor raised horrified hands. He admitted that she showed wonderful Christian charity, but very little Christian common sense. To bring Miss Knowles and Lieut. Spiker together again would be to court calamity, to invite disaster.

At this point another heroic figure enters. This is Mr. Guy Spiker, brother of the groom. He offered to marry Miss Knowles. He admits that at first he took this chivalrous step in order to help his brother, and in order that the baby should bear the name of Spiker which appears to have been a considerable object, and while the name Spiker may not seem at first glance the most desirable, remember a couple of people who bear it. Miss Knowles pondered the offer and finally accepted. She confesses that in the past couple of weeks she has become very fond of Guy Spiker, and Guy says that while at first he wanted to marry Emily for Perley's sake, latterly he wanted her for his own sake. This was the marriage that was celebrated at Fall River. At the end of the ceremony, the groom remarked to a newspaper reporter who was one of the witnesses:

"I think I could write the last line of your story for you, to-day."

"Please do," said the reporter.

"And they lived happily ever after," said Guy Spiker.

It is to be hoped they do, and are permitted to sink into comfortable obscurity. As for Mrs. Perley Spiker, she says she never had the slightest intention of divorcing her husband.

Man is the only animal whose nostrils open downward.

Peru Is Rich With Food

PERU'S coastal waters are teeming with enough fish to feed the world, and her islands are all veritable bird sanctuaries, according to Robert Cushman Murphy, who has just returned from six months' exploration in South America with 500 photographs and 10,000 feet of motion picture film. Mr. Murphy said that on one island he found "the most abundant seabird life on earth," as many as 1,000,000 feathered creatures of a single species. The fisheries of Peru, he said, are unexploited and, although fish are plentiful, including such edible varieties as bonito, anchoveta, pejerrey or smelt, the conchil (somewhat like cod), the flounder and curruca (comparable to the American salmon), Peruvians literally "go hungry" because of their scarcity and high price inland due to the problems of icing and transportation.

A few miles off the coast, the renowned explorer said he let down a net and drew it out of the sea filled with four varieties of the most delicious cod-like fish. The cruise, he said, would furnish the basis for a big canning industry both for home and foreign consumption, vast quantities of such seafood now being annually imported by the United States from Japan.

The wonderful fish and bird life of Peru, Mr. Murphy attributed to the Humboldt Current, a body of oceanic water which flows along 1,800 miles of the coast. He made many observations of this current, he said, following those of Alexander Agassiz and John C. Merriam. In the course of such work, although Peru's proximity to the equator, he said, would cause one to suppose that it might have a temperature like that of Florida, its actual temperature was more like that of Boston. Mr. Murphy brought with him many cases and crates, in many of which are specimens of curious marine and feathered creatures.

Mr. Murphy called attention to the guano or fertilizer deposits of Peru, which, he said, may be doubted by the conservative methods devised by Francisco Ballen, a Peruvian, who he described as "one of the most far-sighted and able economists in the world." In furtherance of Mr. Ballen's plans, the explorer said, he advocated increasing the breeding area of the guano producing birds, present confined to fifteen islands, the largest of which are the Chinchi or Lobo, where deposits of fertilizer 150 feet in thickness have been found.

The value of the guano deposits, he said, was also due to the action of the Humboldt Current, the cold winds from which, blowing over the sea, have preserved the most fertile qualities of the bird lime. Mr. Murphy, whose work was aided by the Peruvian Government, said the islands might be enlarged by dynamiting the cliffs into the sea. He also urged the stoppage of guano gathering during the "courtship" of the birds. The guano, he said, is dug by natives in the interior of the islands and carried in small railway cars to the coast where it is put aboard ships. Exportation of the fertilizer, he said, was being held up on account of high ocean freight rates.

The guano birds were enumerated by Mr. Murphy as the white-breasted cormorant (commonly worth $15 a pair in Lima); the pelican and two species of gannet. By actual computation of the nests of some of these birds, he estimated that more than 1,000,000 of that one species inhabit the islands. The Peruvian Incas of Peru highly prized the guano birds and penalized with death anyone who killed one. Many of the motion picture films he brought back, he said, showed the life history of the seabirds as well as the native fisheries and the guano industry.

In the period from 1840 to 1908, Mr. Murphy said, many of the birds were killed off and it is only in recent years that efforts have been made to conserve this important resource of Peru. President Leguia, and other prominent men, he said, have encouraged foreign scientists to visit Peru for the purpose of obtaining the best conservation methods. A steam trawler and two launches were placed at Mr. Murphy's disposal upon his arrival at Lima, and from these he conducted his researches and experiments. Guano, he said, is the best fertilizer known for sugar, and before the war vast quantities of it were shipped to the United States. Peru herself, he said, is now utilizing the fertilizer not only for growing sugar but for rice and cotton.

Ocean freight rates, Mr. Murphy said, might be affected by the competition which has sprung up since the close of the war. Within the last six months, he said, eight or nine steamship lines—Dutch, Italian, British and American—are now stopping at Peruvian ports. As an instance of recent freight cuts, Mr. Murphy cited the case of a Curtiss airplane occupying a crate not much larger than would be required for an automobile and upon which the charges were $300.

Mr. Murphy, who is 34 years old and a graduate of Brown University, is a director of the Explorers' Club. His expedition to Peru was aided financially by the American Museum of Natural History and the American Geographical Society.

G. W. V. A. OF NOVA SCOTIA MEETS IN CONVENTION

Dominion Secretary-Treasurer Urges Renewed Effort For High Ideals—Resolutions Adopted by Provincial Command.

"The time is now for the returned unit to cease quibbling about details and stride forward for high ideals," said G. W. V. A. at Tuesday's session of the annual Nova Scotia G. W. V. A. convention held here. The association, Mr. McNeil declared, had always been sane and reasonable in its views toward the common weal. Further aid for the returned man was necessary. Thousands of men were still unfit and the situation was rendered more acute by the government demobilizing its re-establishment bureau. The returned men were thinking on "same lines and the public should not be misled. They stood for a clean government and a square deal for all."

Referring to the future of the association, said the Dominion secretary, "there are a few calamity howlers, but it would be better to tolerate them than to admit inability. There is absolutely no evidence of stagnation. The association has a past of successful achievement. It possesses a great organization, has men of brain power and it holds the good will of the people. What more is necessary?"

The great thing before us is to make Canada a better place to live in."

Colonel J. J. Creelman, of Montreal, and Comrade Stewart, secretary, of the Prince Edward Island branch, also addressed the delegates.

The provincial committee of the Nova Scotia command recommended adoption of a number of resolutions, chief of which was the following:

"That more general recognition be given to the fundamental principle which underlies the G. W. V. A. movement, namely that the obligation devolves upon the nation to make the greatest possible effort to restore the discharged soldier to a status in the community life which he would have enjoyed but for war service."

Other resolutions recommended greater and more frequent emphasis of the purpose of the organization and of the which the association exists; and that authority be conferred on the provincial committee to initiate and carry out measures of efficiency in the conduct of affairs of local branches.

On Wednesday morning the election of officers took place. The Dominion Secretary-Treasurer, General Thacker, G. O. C. No. 6, Halifax.

President—C. E. Best, Halifax. Vice President—H. T. Nicholson, Sydney Mines.

EXECUTIVE. Zone 1—B. W. Russell, Halifax. Zone 2—J. J. McDonald, Bridge water.

Zone 3—To be named by executive. Zone 4—R. M. Murray, Springfield.

Zone 5—M. S. Buel, Arichat. Zone 6—J. Welford, Grand Pictou.

Zone 7—B. W. Ross, Kentville. Zone 8—H. T. McKenna, Bridgetown.

Zone 9—To be named by executive. Zone 10—Morrison, Glace Bay.

On Monday evening the local branch entertained the delegates at a dance at the Pines. Besides the visitors those invited were the local branch members and the co-adjutors of the V. W. P. A. the Patriotic Committee, the Red Cross, the Field Comforts and the Pines and the local branch wished to extend their sincere thanks to the management of the Pines, the Pines Orchestra, the Y. W. P. A. the car owners and all others who helped make the convention such a success socially.

On Wednesday afternoon the members were taken on a auto drive to Weymouth.

The convention was certainly favored with pleasant weather and the members were impressed with beautiful Digby, so much so, that several have expressed their intention of returning next summer to spend their vacation.

NO. PETTY-GRAFT

British Law Regarding Bribery in Business.

Any employee who receives a gift from another person as an inducement or reward for showing "some special favor in connection with his master's business," is liable to a heavy fine and imprisonment, says London Tit-Bits.

Equally severe punishment is meted out to any person who tries to influence an employee with gifts.

The number of convictions under the Prevention of Corruption Act is growing. One out of every ten employees has been prosecuted the past year, but that he did not see any harm in accepting a gift from a customer of his.

Furthermore, it should be distinctly understood that a small bribe does not necessarily mean small punishment. In one instance a man offered £1, and was fined £100.

The maximum penalty for conviction is seven years' penal servitude and a fine of £500, where government or other public affairs are concerned. In other cases, two years' imprisonment with hard labor and a fine of £500. In the police courts a magistrate may order four months' hard labor and a fine of £50.

The present Lord Chief Justice was not much impressed with the case, and other people against giving presents. "If a customer of a firm wishes to give a present, let him give it to the manager, and let the manager give it to the employee who he proposes to do."

And the employee should ask if he may accept the gift.

In his interesting booklet on this subject, Mr. R. M. Leonard points out that there are many forms of business bribery.

"An offer of employment has been the bait in some cases," he says, "and more often the offer of a profit or a commission on business, including in one instance the offer of 10 per cent. to the honorary secretary of a miniature rifle club on all applications of a certain kind brought by the members."

"Of the bids has taken the form of a brace of pheasants offered to an official employed by a local authority, a box of cigars and a case of cutlery to military representatives, a blouse dangled to a Government inspector's wife; a joint of meat to a cook."

On several occasions, a commission has been promised, or a looked-for salary, and very frequently a share of any profits to be made on the strength of a letter of introduction.

The acceptance of a suit of clothes from a tailor brought about the downfall of a public official.

There is no doubt that many tradesmen, although well aware that if discovered they will be ruined, continue to trade in bribery because of the well-founded fear that if they do not do so, less scrupulous traders will ruin them.

They are given unwittingly, too, by persons who know that those who demand illegal gifts can bring about a boycott.

The butcher or the manager of a motor works, for instance, knows that a disgruntled customer or chauffeur has opportunities of telling other cooks or chauffeurs, that so-and-so is stingy, and the tradesman is ruined.

"A selfish cook," continues Mr. Leonard, "is a danger to his employer, to think that the meat is poor and tough, or by being wasteful he can run up such a heavy bill that another butcher is tried for economy's sake."

"Similarly, the gardener who is not bribed can see to it that his bulbs and seeds are of the best. Or a cleaner can easily be soiled in his passage from the laundry to the chest of drawers."

"An Airplane on the Nile."

A despatch from Cairo says that the Times airplane landed 425 miles up the Nile, 60 miles from the mouth of the river, and 60 days of travel.

What a change from Antony's days, when every provision came from horses and mules and gleaming helmets and blank verse! No Cleopatra's barge with burnished brass and pomp of beards and robes. No silver vases or cups or such like conceits, but a good strong airplane that spins along in the air, and is not so easily upset.

He carried the reflection to his own room and, locking the door, sat down to eat, while, even as he ate, the spell that was upon him deepened in intensity.

"Oh, eyes!" he whispered softly in that cool privacy and shelter from the world. "Oh, eyes of blue!"
The mirror of a dressing table sent him the reflection of his own eyes, which also were blue, and he gazed upon them and upon the rest of his image the while he ate his bread and butter and apple sauce and sugar.
Finally he rose and approached the dressing table to study himself at greater advantage.

Beyond doubt he was acting a little scene of indifference. Of his own eyes dramas followed, though an invisible observer might have been puzzled for a key to some of them. One, however, would have proved easily intelligible.
His expression having altered to a look of pity and contrition, he turned from the mirror and, walking slowly to a chair across the room, used his right hand in a peculiar manner, seeming to stroke the air at a point about ten inches above the back of the chair.
"There, there, little girl," he said in a low, gentle voice. "I didn't know you cared."

Then, with a rather abrupt dismissal of this theme, he returned to the mirror and, after a questioning scrutiny, nodded solemnly, forming with his lips the words, "The real thing—the real thing at last!"

He meant that, after many imitations had imposed upon him, Love—the real thing—had come to him in the end.
And as he turned away he murmured,
"And even her name—unknown!"
Seating himself at a small writing table by the window, he proceeded to express his personality in something he considered a poem.

Three-quarters of an hour having sufficed for its completion, he solemnly signed it and then read it several times in a state of hushed astonishment. He had never dreamed that he could do anything like this:

MILADY.

I do not know her name
Though it would be the same
Where roses bloom at twilight
And the lark makes his flight
It would be the same old name
Where music sounds in air
I was never introduced to the lady
So I could not call her Lass or Sadie
So I will call her Milady
By the name of the sea,
She always will be Just Milady to me.

—William Sylvanus Baxter, Esq., July 14
Suddenly again that voice:

"Will—er?"
To William, in his high and lonely tower, this piercing mummery brought in actual shudder, and the very thought of Jane (with tokens of apple sauce and sugar still upon her cheek, probably) seemed a kind of sacrilege.
He fiercely swore his favorite oath, required from a hero of a work of action he admired, "Ye gods!" and concealed his poem in the drawer of the writing table.

"Will—er! Mamma wants you!" Jane hammered on the door.

"What you want?" he shouted.
Jane explained, certain pangs indicating that her attention was partially diverted to another slice of bread and butter and apple sauce and sugar.
"Will—er, mamma wants you—want you to go help Genesis bring some washbasins home—and a tin of boiler —from the secondhand man's store."
"What?"

Jane repeated the outrageous message, adding, "She wants you to hurry —and I got some bread and butter and apple sauce and sugar for comin' to tell you."

His refusal was direct and infuriated, but there was a decisive tapping upon the door, and his mother's voice interrupted:

"Hush, Willie! Open the door, please."
He obeyed furiously, and Mrs. Baxter walked in with a deprecating air, while Jane followed, so profoundly interested that, until almost the close of the interview, she held her bread and butter and apple sauce and sugar at a sort of way station on its journey to her mouth.

"That's a nice thing to ask me to do!" stormed the unfortunate William.
"Ye gods! Do you think Joe Bullitt's mother would dare to?"

"Wait, dearie!" Mrs. Baxter begged pacificaly. "I just want to explain—"

"Explain?" Ye gods!

"Now, now, just a minute, Willie!"
she said. "What I wanted to explain was why it's necessary for you to go with Genesis for the—"

"Nervous!" he shouted. "Nervous! You expect me to walk through the public streets with that awful lookin' old nigger!"

"Genesis isn't old," she managed to interpolate. "He's—"
But her frantic son disregarded her.
"Secondhand washbasins!" he vociferated. "And tin clothes boilers! That's what you want your son to carry through the public streets in broad daylight!" Ye gods!

"Well, there isn't anybody else," she said. "Please don't rave so, Willie, and say 'Ye gods' so much. It really isn't his fault. The sure nobody's you!"

"Nobody?" His voice cracked in anguish. "Oh, no! Nobody except me whole town! Why, when there's anything disgusting has to be done in this family—why do I always have to be the one? Why can't Genesis bring the secondhand washbasins without me?
Why can't the secondhand store deliver 'em? Why can't?"

"That's what I want to tell you," she interrupted hurriedly, and as the youth lifted his arms on high in a gesture of ultimate despair and then threw himself manfully into a chair she obtained the door. "The secondhand store doesn't deliver things," she said. "I bought them at an auction, and it's going out of business, and they have to be taken away before half past 4 this afternoon."

"Genesis can't bring them in the wheelbarrow because, he says, the wheel is broken, and he says he can't possibly carry two tubs and a wash boiler himself. And he can't make two trips because it's a mile and a half, and he doesn't like to ask him, anyway. And it would take too long, because he has to get back and finish cutting the grass before your papa gets home this evening. Papa said he had to! Now, I don't want to ask you, but it really isn't much. You and Genesis can just slip up there and—"

"Slip?" moaned William. "Just slip up there?" Ye gods!

"Genesis is waiting on the back porch," she said. "Really it isn't worth your making all this fuss about."

"Ye gods!" He clasped his head in his hands, crushed, for he knew that the curse was upon him and he must go. "Ye gods!"

Genesis and his dog were waiting just outside the kitchen door, and of all the world's two creatures were probably the last in whose company William Sylvanus Baxter desired to make a public appearance. The aged, grayish, sleeveless, neckless garment which sheltered Genesis from waist to collar bone could not have been mistaken for a jersey.

Upon the feet of Genesis were things which careful study would have revealed to be patent leather dancing pumps long dead and several times buried, and upon his head pressing down his markedly criminal ears, was a once dainty hat or a brown not far from Genesis' own color, though decidedly without his gloss. A large ring of strange metal, with the stone missing, adorned a finger of his right hand, and from a corner of his mouth projected an unlighted and spreading cigar stub.

And Genesis' dog, scratching himself at his master's feet, was the true complement of Genesis, for, although he was a youngish dog, he was a dog that would have been recognized anywhere in the world as a colored person's dog.

Genesis and Clematis.

"SEND that dog back!" William said resolutely. "I'm not going through the streets with a dog like that, anyhow!"

Genesis chuckled. "He ain't got back," he said. "Ain't nobody kin make 'at dog go back. I ain't had him mo'n two weeks, but I don't believe pre'sent United States kin make 'at dog go back. I show you." And, wheeling suddenly, he made ferocious gestures, shouting, "Gon back, dog!"

The dog turned, ran back a few paces, halted and then began to follow again, whereupon Genesis pretended to hurl stones at him. But the animal only repeated his manner.

"I'll show him!" said William hotly.
"I'll show him he can't follow me!"
He charged upon the dog, shouting fiercely. The hunted animal, abandoning his paralytic dignity, turned a tucked under tail, ran at the way back to the alley and disappeared from sight.

"That's what I want to tell you," she interrupted hurriedly, and as the youth lifted his arms on high in a gesture of ultimate despair and then threw himself manfully into a chair she obtained

TORTURED BY TERRIBLE ECZEMA

Suffered Three Years Until She Tried
"FRUIT-A-TIVES"

DAME PETER LAMARRE

Pointe St. Pierre, P. Q.

"I think it my duty to tell you how much your medicine has done for me."

I suffered for three years with terrible Eczema. I consulted several doctors and they did not do me any good.

Then, I used one box of "Fruit-a-Tives" and two boxes of "Fruit-a-Tives" and my hands are now clear.

The pain is gone and there has been no return. I think it is a marvelous cure because no other medicine did me any good and I tried all the remedies I ever heard of, without benefit until I used "Fruit-a-Tives" and "Fruit-a-Tives."

"Fruit-a-Tives" cooled the blood and removed the cause of the disease, and "Fruit-a-Tives" completed the cure.
