The Town Plot is situated at the east of the township just within the entrance to Annapolis Basin, and twenty miles from Annapolis Town, and six miles across land from the head of St. Mary's Bay. This laid out from the water's edge, partly on level ground and partly on the declivity of a modern till, dry and pleasant, and having with an eastern aspect, a view of the Annapolis Basin and its cultivated shores for twenty miles in where it terminates with the Fort and River's mouth of that name. It was settled by Loyalists from New York in 1783, the most of whom went early to farms, or, moving to other countries, left the whole

"SALADA"

Is so full of intrinsic goodness, that you get full Value on every purchase

THE purpose of paint is two-fold: it should beautify of course; but, also, it must fully protect the surface to which it is applied. The high cost of repair-work has made us all fully realize the extravagance of letting a building "run down" for lack of a coat of paint.

It is equally important to understand the extravagance involved in the use of poor paint, and to know that there's one paint which leads all others in the matter of economy:

B-H PAINT 70% Pure White Lead
35% Pure White Zinc
100% Pure Paint

No other paint can match it in covering capacity--no other brand can equal its record of permanence. Affording real protection over a long period, it has removed the false notion that a house must be repainted every year. If you use this paint of extreme durability your house is protected for years.

Genesis carried the heavy wrench with his right hand, and he had fastened the other end upon his back by means of a bit of rope which passed over his shoulder. Thus the tin boiler, being a lighter burden, fell to William.

The cover would not stay in place, but continually fell off when he essayed to carry the boiler by one of its handles, and he made shift to manage the awkward thing in various ways, the only one proving physically endurable being, unfortunately, the most grotesque. He was forced to carry the cover in his left hand and to place his head partially within the boiler itself and to support it--tilted obliquely to rest upon his shoulders--as a kind of monstrous tin cow or helmet.

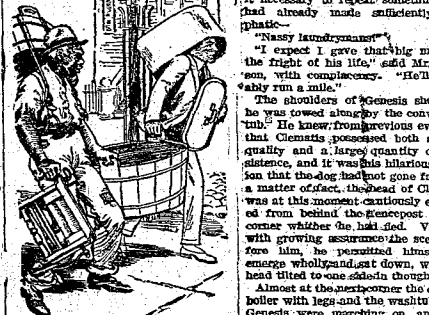

This had the advantage of somewhat concealing his face, though when he leaned his head back, in order to obtain clearer vision of what was before him, the boiler slid off and fell to the pavement with a noise that nearly caused a runaway and brought the hot-cheeked William much detestful attention from a passing street car.

Seen from the rear, William was unrecognizable, but interesting. He appeared to be a walking clothes boiler, armed with a shield and connected, by means of a washbowl, with a negro of informal ideas concerning dress. In fact, the group was whimsical, and three young people who turned in behind it out of a cross street indulged immediately in fits of inadequately suppressed laughter, though neither Miss May Patcher nor Mr. Johnnie Watson even remotely suspected that the legs beneath the clothes boiler belonged to an acquaintance. And for the third of this little party, Miss Patcher's visitor, those perigrinating legs suggested nothing familiar to her.

"Oh, see the funny laundryman's!" she cried, addressing a cottony digit's head that bobbed gently up and down over her supporting arm. "Sweetest Flopit must see too. Flopit, look at the funny laundryman!"

"Sh!" murmured Miss Patcher, choking. "He might hear you."

He might, indeed, since they were not five yards behind him, and the dulcet voice was clear and free. Within the shadowy interior of the clothes boiler were festering stitches with sudden, utter horror. "Flopit!"

The attention of Genesis was attracted by a convulsive tugging of the tub which he supported in common with William. It seemed passionately to urge greater speed.

"Walk faster! You got to walk faster!"

"I got plenty time out 'at grass before' you 'ya gits home," Genesis said reassuringly. "This here rope what I got my extrub tub along to is 'mos' w' plumb them my hilds."

Having uttered this protest, he continued to ambulate at the same pace, though somewhat assisted by the forward pull of the connecting tub.

The amusement of the second group having abated through satiation, the minds of its components turned to other topics. "Now Flopit must have his darlin' kiddle run," said Flopit's mistress, setting the digit's upon the ground. "That's why sweetest Flopit and I and all of us came for a walk instead of sitting on the nice, cool porchibins. See the awlins hotel! Isn't he adorable, May? Isn't he adorable, Mr. Watson?"

Mr. Watson put a useless sin upon his soul, since all he needed to say was mere "Yes."

Flopit, placed upon the ground, looked like something that had dropped from a Christmas tree, and he automatically made use of every conceivable what longer than a caterpillar, to patter after his mistress. He was neither enterprising nor inquisitive. He went close to the rim of her skirt, which was as high as he could see, and he wasn't to be taken up and carried again.

"My goodness!" exclaimed Genesis, glancing back over his shoulder. "At it! It's like he think he got a get somewhere!" And then, in answer to a frantic pull upon the tub, "Look like you mighty strong tider!" he said. "I can't go no farther!" He placed back again, chuckling. "At it! It's bird do well not mix up notin'!"

Clematis, it happened, was just coming into view, having been detained round the corner by his curiosity concerning a set of Louis XVI. furniture which some house movers were unpacking upon the sidewalk. He approached with glowing eagerness at a gallop. Flopit was about the size of Clematis' head, and although Clematis was certain that Flopit was something alive, he could not decide what.

Flopit paid not the slightest attention to Clematis. The self-importance of dogs, like that of the minds of men, is in directly inverse ratio to their size.

All at once a regular and irresponsible crowd eddied upon Clematis. He laid his nose upon the ground, delighting a bit of gaudy, and then, with a little rush, set a large, rude paw upon the sensitive face of Flopit and capered him. Flopit uttered a little complaint in an asthmatic voice.

"Oh, nasty dray bid horror!" cried his mistress, turning quickly at this sound and waving a placid paw at Clematis. "Shoot! Dirty dog, go 'way!"

And she was able somehow to connect him with the washbowl and boiler, for she added, "Nasty, laundryman to have his dog!"

Mr. Watson rushed upon Clematis with angry howlings and imaginary missiles. "You disgusting brute!" he roared. "You nasty dog!"

Apparently much alarmed, Clematis lowered his ears, tucked his tail underneath him and fled to the rear, not halting once or looking back until he disappeared round the corner where he had come. "The nasty dog, Watson," "I guess he won't bother us again very soon."

It must be admitted that Missy was one of those people who do not mind being overheard, nor care what they say. "Looky for us," she said, "we had a nice dray bidman to protect us, wasn't it, Flopit? And she thought it necessary to reject something she had already made sufficiently emphatic."

"Nasty laundryman!"

"I expect I gave that big mongrel the fright of his life," said Mr. Watson, with complacency. "He'll probably run a mile."

The shoulders of Genesis shook as he was crossed almost by the convulsive tub. He knew, from previous evidence, that Clematis possessed both a high quality and a large quantity of persistence, and it was this hilarious opinion that the dog must go on. As a matter of fact, the head of Clematis was at this moment cautiously extended from behind the fencepost at the corner where he had fled. Viewing with growing suspicion the scene before him, he permitted himself to emerge wholly and sat down, with his head tilted to one side in thought.

Almost at the same moment the clothes boiler with legs and the washbowl and Genesis were marching on, and just behind them went three figures not so familiar to Clematis and connected in his mind with a very solid apprehension. But all the backs were safely toward him, and behind them pattered that small live thing which had so profoundly interested him.

He rose and came on apace silently. When he reached the side of Flopit, some eight or nine seconds later, Clematis found himself even more fascinated and perplexed than during their former interview, though again Flopit seemed utterly to disregard him.

Clematis was not at all sure that Flopit was a dog, but he felt that it was his business to find out. Heaven knows, so far Clematis had not a particle of animosity in his heart, but he considered it his duty to himself, in case Flopit turned out not to be a dog, to learn just what he was. The thing might be eddies.

Therefore, again pacing obliquely beside Flopit, while the human beings ahead went on, unconscious of the approaching climax behind them, Clematis sought to detect by senses keener than sight some evidence of Flopit's standing in the zoological kingdom, and, sniffing at the top of Flopit's head--though Clematis was uncertain about its indeed being a head--he found himself baffled and much disturbed.

Flopit did not smell like a dog; he smelled of violets.

PEOPLE

22,000 Canadian Men and Women ask you to buy "Made-in-Canada" Shoes

22,000 CANADIANS are engaged exclusively in the manufacture of Boots and Shoes.

The industry provides them with over $20,000,000 a year to spend within the Dominion.

They buy food and clothing; pay rent and taxes--they help swell the total of Canadian trade.

ALLIED with these 22,000 men and women are many thousands of other workers who contribute to the making of Boots and Shoes. These include textile operatives; wire, nail and metal workers; machine manufacturers; box and carton makers; coal miners and dealers; railway men and shippers; printers; packers and bottlers of clerks.

All these, and more, participate in the $0 million dollars which is the yearly value of the Canadian-Made Shoes.

EVERY pair of Canadian-made Shoes you buy actually puts money in the pay envelope of this vast army of men and women.

Every pair of imported Shoes you buy reduces Canada's capital stock and puts money in the pockets of foreigners who contribute nothing to our national growth.

CANADIAN-made Shoes, made for grade, are the equal of the best in the world.

The most scientific processes of manufacture are employed.

Canadian workmen are as conscientious and skilled as those of any other country.

SITUATED as we are between the Old World and the New, every authoritative idea of shape and style and fashion is immediately seized and developed.

The price of Canadian-made Shoes is based entirely on actual production costs. It represents 100% of value.

Canada produces footwear of every desirable type, and of standard quality in all grades. When you buy Made in Canada Footwear you are assured, at fair prices always, of the utmost that modern skill can produce in Comfort, Service and Style.

Last call for fall fruits

Do not miss your chance to preserve these last sun-ripened gifts of summertime. How your folks will enjoy them, and how pleased you will be to serve them when canned goods made with top-priced sugar are out of reach. The time for preserving foresight is when the fruit is still in season.

Lantic is your best friend in retaining the rare bouquet of luscious plums and peaches, of delicately-flavoured pears. Its tiny, snow-white crystals of pure cane dissolve so quickly into syrup of concentrated sweetness, that you can smile at the old-time caution "Let it simmer until the sugar is all dissolved"—because it's FINE.

Fruit will retain its natural form and colour because overcooking is unnecessary. Lantic WILL go further, and so costs less.

TALKING TRUNK

A man came into Letteney's store and asked, "Have you trunks?" "What kind?" asked the clerk. "What kind?" responded the man, "how many kinds are there?" "Many," said the clerk. "There is the elephant, the tree and the human trunk, which do you want?" "I want one to travel in," said the man. "A trunk to travel in? why you must want a flying machine or an automobile. I never knew you could travel in a trunk." Just then a voice came from upstairs where the trunks are kept, and said "Stop your fooling down there and come up here Mr. and see us." The clerk's eyes opened like moons, he turned as white as a sheet. "I did not know that anyone was up there," said he, "it must be the devil." "Well, come along and let us see," said the man. "I will introduce you to him." When they arrived there a voice came from the inside, "let me out, I'm smothering." Well you should have seen that clerk turn. Then the man opened the window, let the trunk down by a cord and got out himself. They called the Chief of Police to go after him; they chased him down the mud flats and when he got to low water mark he threw the trunk into the water and jumped on it and paddled away with his feet. What was the chief to do, his pants, boots smothered and boots covered with mud? the man took an old saw and a board from H. T. Warne's lumber pile to prop the craft, and took chase. Do you believe the story? Well you can believe we have trunks for sale.

HAS NOW THROWN HIS CRUTCH AWAY

Weatherdoff Says He Is Entirely Free of Rheumatism Since Taking Tanlac.

"I feel I ought to let everybody know how Tanlac has relieved me of rheumatism, for I doubt if anyone has suffered worse than I have during the last ten years," said William Weatherdoff, of 215 Argyle St., Halifax, N. S.

"I used to ache all over with pain that seemed to go right to the marrow of my bones and drive me almost frantic. At times I could not bend my arms enough to get my coat on and it was only with great pain and difficulty that I could stoop over at all."

"My feet swelled up so that I was unable to get my shoes on, and my knees got so stiff that I was barely able to get around with the help of a crutch. My hands were all drawn up so I couldn't use them; and at night my whole body ached so I couldn't sleep."

"The way Tanlac helped me is simply wonderful. I have taken seven bottles altogether and the rheumatism seems to have left my system entirely. Today I haven't an ache or a pain in my body and all the stiffness and swelling has left my joints. I no longer need crutches to get about and although I am working every day, exposed to all kinds of weather, the rheumatism never gives me a bit of trouble. Never in my life have I known a medicine to do what Tanlac has done for me, and I strongly recommend it to all who suffer as I did."

PRIZES OFFERED FOR ESSAY ON FISH AS A FOOD

The following circular, addressed to the school teachers has been issued by the Department of marine and fisheries:

"To the School Teachers:—
In order that the matter may not escape your attention, the Department is taking the liberty of again addressing a letter to you in connection with the essay-writing contest for which prizes have been offered.

"In order to encourage school children to acquire extensive knowledge of the fishing industry, which is one of Canada's greatest sources of wealth, the Fisheries Branch, Department of Marine and Fisheries, Ottawa, offers a prize of $25, to the pupil in any of the schools throughout your Province who submits the best essay of from 500 to 1,000 words on "Why Canadians Should Eat More Fish."

"A similar offer is being made in all the other Provinces of the Dominion, and an additional prize of $25, will be given for the best essay received from the whole of Canada.

In addition to these prizes there will be issued engraved certificates to those in each Province who are second and third in order of merit.

"The essay will be reviewed by competent men and will be judged from the standpoint of reasoning, the amount of information they contain and the quality of composition, greatest credit, however, being given for the treatment of the subject matter.

"Any boy or girl attending school is eligible to take part. Teachers are encouraged to have as many as possible of their pupils enter this competition; and it would be of mutual interest to pupils and teachers that the former be kept thoroughly posted as regards the fishing industry.

"Those who intend participating should send in their essays before November 30th, as essays will not be received after that date. They should be addressed to the Publicity and Marketing Division, Fisheries Branch, Department of Marine and Fisheries, Ottawa. Each contribution should bear the name of the author, age, home address, school and class attending, and name of teachers.

"It is hoped the principals of the various schools will advise the teachers under them regarding this contest, and that the teachers in turn will inform their classes so that every pupil in the Province will have the same chance.

Sun Dance Lodge at Toronto

Toronto can always count on the C.P.R. to provide a unique and attractive exhibit for the Toronto Fair, and this year if anything the C.P.R. Exhibit has surpassed all previous records for originality and artistic execution. In order to visualize the romance as well as the majestic scenery of the Canadian Pacific Rockies, a Sun Dance Lodge based upon a Stoney Indian model has been reconstructed and decorated with Indian relics and sporting trophies—fine heads and priceless skins. The Exhibit is under the direction of Mr. Norman Luxton, editor of the "Crag and Canyon" of Banff, who has spent most of his life on the trails and passes of the Rockies, camping, fishing and hunting, and who is also an authority on Indian art. He is assisted by his wife, daughter of the late Rev. John McDougall, one of the earliest missionaries in Western Canada, and herself the first white woman born in Alberta.

The first thing noticed on entering the C.P.R. Exhibit is the huge Sun Dance Lodge which towers its way around the gigantic Lodge in which are gathered the side scenes portraying in miniature form some of the gorgeous settings which none but the Canadian Pacific Rockies can produce. The roof of the Indian Lodge is hand painted with symbolic writings and stencils typical of the Rocky and Plains Indians. The side embellishments are finished in white birch, the bark of which was always a favorite with the Indian not only for the construction of his canoe but for the building of a camp fire. On each side of the entrance, office accommodation has been worked into the setting where information of every description can be obtained and telegraph service is also installed. This has the tepee finish and real Indian tepee poles transported from the West for the purpose have been used. The lighting effect of these interiors with miniature Indian tepees he shades produces an effect of entrancing beauty.

The scene from Sulphur Mountain overlooking Banff Springs Hotel in the foreground and the beautiful Rundle and Tunnel Mountains, and the stretch of the Bow River in the background is highly realistic. A fine model of the C.P.R.'s famous hostelry built specially for the occasion is shown electrically illuminated and gives the visitor the impression that he is paying a visit to Banff instead of sweltering under the atmosphere of an exhibition. The Banff Hot Springs, famous for their health giving qualities were known to the Red men long years ago and accidentally discovered by some engineers when surveying for the C.P.R. The huge swimming tank hidden from the view, but situated directly in front of the hotel has a depth of water of from three to eight feet and is one of the great summer attractions. The Bow River scene in the back of the picture reminds one of an oval with its pale green color, and its ever changing fires. The scene cannot be eclipsed for grandeur, although Lake Louise depicted on the other side of the tent certainly gives it a close running. This panorama is the representation of what meets the eye of the tourist looking for the grandeur of Lake Louise from almost any spot behind the Chateau with a glimpse of the wonderful lake and gigantic glacier and mountains in the rear. The Victoria Glacier, which forms the background feeds the lake which is shown by real water, while the towering peaks of Mount Lefroy and Mount Aberdeen are observed in the distance. The frieze of Indian decorations and the magnificent transparencies lead to a perfect finish to the whole Sun Dance Lodge effect. The remaining sides of the "Lodge" are of typical white birch interspersed with paneling of real Indian mats made from cedar bark, and there are many reproductions in miniature of the famous Totem poles from Alert Bay. There is also an exhibition a very valuable collection of Indian relics from the West Coast, all of which are original, and many over a hundred years old. They include eating and cooking utensils made of wood and whalebone, bows and arrows, coffins and tom-toms, cedar chests and model Indian houses. The illumination effect is perfect comprising some five hundred lights. The panoramas were executed by Mr. Hal Ross Ferrisard, assisted by Mr. A. Robinson and the decorations by Mr. James Crockett, all of whom are of the C.P.R. The model was made by Henry Morgan & Co. of Montreal. The C.P.R. Exhibit is not only an historical representation but educational from every viewpoint.

British East Africa Is

Not a Place for Women,

Declares Lady Northey

"BRITISH East Africa," said Lady Northey, the wife of the Governor-General of that protectorate, "is no place for women, unless of course they accompany their husbands who may be employed in an official capacity, or may be planting or farming on a large scale. In the latter case they must have capital; even so, the bare usually goes out first to make some sort of preparation for his wife."

Sir Edward and Lady Northey are making a prolonged visit to London, owing to Lord Milner's wish to seize the opportunity of the governor's presence in England to discuss with him many urgent problems concerning British East Africa.

Continuing the expression of her views regarding the possibility of woman settlement in the protectorate, Lady Northey said: "People are apt to forget that British East Africa is an absolutely new country, without railways and houses, with all its wealth of natural resources lying latent and, with a teeming native population as yet savage and undisciplined. It is a country in which the white man, if he is to keep his dignity, cannot himself do manual work, but must be in a position to employ native labor."

"If there are absolutely no openings for anyone without capital, would it be advisable for women who have specialized in agriculture, and who have capital, to go and try their fortune there?" Lady Northey was asked. "No, such a thing would be quite impracticable," she said, "though I do know of one such case out there—two women with plenty of money, thorough sportswomen, and accomplished riders, are running their own estate near Nairobi, but then there is absolutely nothing to distinguish them from men and they are quite an exceptional case. Africa, generally speaking, for a young and pleasing woman would not be possible, for apart from the question of natives, the life is much too free and easy altogether for her to be entirely on her own."

"This country," continued Lady Northey, "was not so very long ago being boomed as one to which intending settlers with little or no capital could go and make good. It is an entirely erroneous idea; it is no good a man thinking of going to British East Africa unless he has plenty of capital; then, I admit, the possibilities are unlimited. The man with $50,000 or so must try his luck in another country for in such a country as British East Africa the man with small means becomes only a burden. It is a country in which everything remains to be done; fortunes will be made there, but before this can happen money must be put into the country."

"The labor problem in British East Africa is a very difficult one; the African native is not at all inclined to work, but Sir Edward has a scheme for the registration of natives which he is intending to place before the Government so that every native will be obliged to work. This would, of course, be a great step forward, for while the difficulty of obtaining labor or solved, Englishmen would be far more ready to invest their money in the country. Up to the present, labor has been a very uncertain quantity, which sometimes in amount of money will secure."

"An illustration of how essential it is to have funds out there," said Lady Northey, "I will tell you the case of a lady who went out with the idea of opening and running a hotel in Nairobi for people fresh out from England; the idea was for her to live at the hotel until they had fixed up a home for themselves. Well, the hotel was started, but the lady very soon became aware of the fact that she could not carry on without more funds and made a strong appeal to the Government to help her. The help was refused and the hotel closed. This and the two ladies I have already told you of who run their own farms, are the only ventures made by women on their own initiative in the country that I know of."

"The life is certainly a very pleasant one for women whose time is their own and who can take life very leisurely, and who in addition have their own car, under many other conditions, the life would not be a very desirable one for Englishwomen."

It Was Good-bye

A Frenchman, guest at a London hotel, had just been presented with his bill. Though he paid it without formal protest, he was most indignant at its amount. "I wish to see the proprietor!" he exclaimed to the clerk. In a moment the proprietor entered. The Frenchman was all smiles. "Ah!" he exclaimed, "I must embrace you!" "But why should you wish to embrace me, sir?" asked the astonished hotelkeeper. "I do not understand." "Look at zees bill!" "Yes, you receipted bill. What of it?" "What of it? Simply zees, sare, it means zat I shall never see, no nevaire, see you again."

A Good Pupil

A football player—name not given—had strayed into the Far West, and was instructing a group of eager convicts in the rudiments of the game. "Mind," he observed, "if you cannot kick the ball, kick an opponent. Now, let's get busy. When the ball is 'Batter the ball,' came the reply of a keen pupil; 'let's get on with the game.'"

The swallow has a larger mouth in proportion to its size than any other bird.

Natives in South Africa

And May Become a Problem

A SERIOUS race problem is arising in South Africa, as a result of the relations between the white and the natives. Most unusual restrictions are imposed on the natives. So severe are they in fact that William Charles Reilly, in the South African Review, characterizes the conditions under which they live as slavery. He offers a severe indictment of the white races, both Boer and British, for the treatment they are accorded the blacks. He writes, in part:

In South Africa we are confronted by a very unusual situation. Within the Union there is a population of over six million souls, only a million and a quarter of whom are European, and throughout the greater area comprised by the four provinces—Cape, Transvaal, Free State, and Natal—such a stringent and illiberal color line is drawn, and not alone have the non-European inhabitants no voice in the management of the country, but their social and economic conditions are such as to practically deny them from advancement. Moreover they are subjected to vexatious discriminating laws, and are the victims of a deep and growing race prejudice on the part of the Europeans.

Many people are under the delusion that the English South African, as a rule, is the natives' protector, while the Dutchman is habitually the natives' oppressor. Unfortunately this is by no means the case. Neither race is prepared to treat the native or the colored man with liberality. The law regarding natives and colored people is different in the four respective provinces of the Union. In only one particular is it uniform—the Parliament of the Union on native or colored man may take a seat. In the Cape province, white, black and colored have an equal right to the franchise, but in various Acts of Parliament, discrimination between the races is distinctly made. One important measure is the Natives Land Act of 1913 which forbade under stringent penalties, the hiring of land to natives, and prohibited throughout the Cape province, has been declared ultra vires on the ground that it conflicted with the Act of Union, but there is little doubt that before long the latter act will be amended to suit the situation. Of late years laws of increasing stringency on the subject of squatter rights have been enacted. A special law relating to Cape Town and Port Elizabeth has been passed, which provides that no native who is not a registered voter can sleep in either of these cities except as domestic servant, or on his master's premises. Locations with sheet-iron huts have been established in the environs, but these are disastrously overcrowded, as many sixteen people sometimes sleeping in one small room. It is in fact impossible for all the natives employed at the docks, or in handling merchant ships, or at other unskilled labor, to be accommodated in the locations provided for them. Consequently they are continually arrested for breaking a law which it is a physical impossibility for them to obey. Yet the very existence of the communities involved depends upon the labor of these natives.

The conditions under which the natives live in the locations established in the environs of the towns of the Cape province—and in fact, South Africa generally—are most pitiful. There is no fixity of tenure, and the plots allotted are preposterously small. The inhabitants are heavily taxed, but the taxes are not spent for their benefit. Overpopulation and discomfort usually result. The conditions comprise the only form of wealth the native values. When after long and faithful service on a farm, a native couple has acquired a small herd, he is up and gone, hurried because his master needs him for pasture. It is not uncommon, especially in one of the often recurring droughts, to see natives wandering along the roads with their dejected herds of emaciated kine, vainly seeking a refuge.

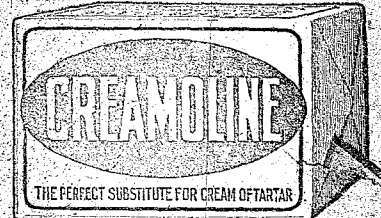

Natal was granted a liberal constitution in 1856, but in 1865 a law was enacted which practically disfranchised the natives. In the Free State both natives and colored people are disfranchised, and are subject to inconvenient and degrading disabilities. They have to carry passes when moving from place to place, and are not permitted to graze from European farms. Some of the municipal regulations in force are grotesquely oppressive. For instance, no girl of the age of sixteen is permitted to live, even with her parents, in a location unless she be a European. In the Free State there is a law in force—running to all municipal areas—under which all females over the age of sixteen have to take out passes, for which a substantial charge is made. The police are in the habit of making degrading visits, and bitter complaints are made regarding their treatment of girls approaching the taxable age. The municipal locations are unspeakably wretched places, as a rule, the miserable huts are built upon narrow plots, and are thus crowded together. Yet in many of these locations any native found outside the door of his hut after nine o'clock p.m. is liable to arrest, and imprisonment.

The foregoing points to a third, disguised system of slavery—slavery in which there are no masters, and instead of one, and in which there is no individual responsibility for the welfare of the slave, or for his maintenance when decrepit.

DEEP BROOK COUPLE TOURING NEW ENGLAND

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Henshaw of Deep Brook are enjoying an extended tour through New England, visiting their children, many of whom are located in that section of the States. They are making the tour by auto, having left their home on the morning of August 27th. Upon reaching Digby, their auto was taken across to St. John on the steamer with them. After spending the night at the hotel, they started early the next morning for Fredericton, N. B., a distance of 85 miles, where they stopped for dinner, and then drove 85 miles to Topsfield, remaining there for the night, finding splendid accommodations at a hotel in the town.

Sunday morning they resumed their journey, making as far as Lunenburg before stopping for dinner. After a short stay here they went to Hallowell, remaining at the Hallowell House over night. Monday morning they left the hotel about 8 o'clock and drove as far as Maples, lunching there, and then continuing their journey at Moultonboro, N. H., which was to be their first stopping place, their daughter, Miss Jennie Henshaw, residing there. Upon their arrival they found they had covered a distance of 650 miles, with the remarkable record of no tire trouble.

While at Moultonboro they made a tour of the White Mountains before leaving for Concord, N. H., to visit their daughter, Mrs. Carrie J. Read, where they remained for about one week, from there going to Boston and then to Salem, where two sons, John Bickford and Wallace L., each carry on a large milk business. From Salem they went to Berwick, Me., where Frank P. Henshaw is located on a large farm. Here they will remain for a visit before leaving for Springfield and Turner's Falls, Mass., Hartford, Conn., and Windsor, Vt., where other children reside.

On the 8th of October the family gathered at Berwick, Me., to celebrate the 59th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Henshaw. Several of the children with their families were present and gave the couple a royal greeting, remembering them bountifully with valuable gifts, among them a purse of gold.

The children include: Capt. Herbert A., port superintendent of the Pan-American Petroleum & Transport Company, New York City; Mrs. Carrie J. Read, Concord, N. H.; Warren H. and L. Fred, Windsor, Vt.; Joseph E. Hallowell, Conn.; J. Bickford and Wallace L., Salem Mass.; Frank P. Berwick, Me.; Mrs. Blanche Huff, Turner's Falls, Mass.; Miss Jennie Henshaw, Moultonboro, N. H.; Mrs. Laura Belle Burrell, Brook, N. S., and Mrs. Abbie M. Morgan, Lansdowne, N. S. Only two children are deceased, they being the oldest daughter, Mrs. May Adams, and youngest son, Wendell Henshaw.

Since leaving home, Mr. and Mrs. Henshaw have covered a distance of 1500 miles by auto. They are both enjoying the best of health and it is hard to realize they have nearly reached the fourscore mark, both appearing at least 20 years younger and being very active.

May they continue to enjoy good health for many years to come.

No Pollution In Digby Water

Oct. 13th, 1920.

Report on water from Digby, N. S., Dr. E. DuVernet.
Reference in Pathological Records; Entry No. 31941.
Serial No. P 4370.

RESULT OF EXAMINATION.

Chlorine:—	14 parts per million.
Free Ammonia:—	0.058 parts per million.
Albuminoid Ammonia:—	0.102 parts per million.
Required Oxygen:—	1134 parts per million.
Bacterial colonies per c. c. on agar plates after 48 hours, 196-No. B. coli found in 1 ft. c. m. of the water.

Remarks:—This water is light in vegetable matter; possibly this is due to rain-fall. Apart from this the examination is very satisfactory. There is no evidence to show any pollution of the water. The bacterial content especially is low, considering the length of time that has elapsed between the collection and the examination.

The water was submitted by Dr. DuVernet.

BISHOP MORRISON FAVORS PROHIBITION

The following letter for publication has been received by the General Secretary of the Social Service Council, from his Lordship Bishop Morrison, of the Diocese of Antigonish.

Antigonish, N. S., Oct. 9, 1920.

On the approaching Referendum as to whether or not the present Dominion law of Prohibition is to be adopted in the province of Nova Scotia, depends much that is intimately associated with the social and economic welfare of its people.

That the excessive use of intoxicants has been, and still continues to be, a serious obstacle to the social and economic progress of the Province, must surely be evident to anyone who has taken the trouble to note its dire results whether in the home or in general community, and it therefore behooves every citizen of the Province to co-operate for the abolition of the evil.

At the same time, there are also and it is no argument against the prohibition vote it should receive the overwhelming support of the Province. If prohibition, rightly enforced, does not completely abolish the drink traffic, it surely will lessen it close to the vanishing point, and it is no argument against it that it will not completely abolish the traffic. There are prohibitory and penal laws against theft, homicide and scores of other wrongs, and yet these things do happen, but this is no reason why such laws should not be enacted and supported by the public conscience. The same principle holds true in regard to the law of prohibition, and in view of the disastrous results of strong drink, also in this province, the public conscience should rally to the support of this measure.

In conclusion, let me say once more that the adoption of the prohibitory law has my strongest word of approval, and let us all hope it will be given a fair trial in this province.

to the continued detriment of the general community. The situation, therefore, comes to this point, namely, that since voluntary abstinence from alcoholic beverages cannot be had through persuasive means in the measure demanded by the public welfare, it becomes a necessity to enforce abstinence by prohibitory legislation. To this end is the Referendum proposed, and I am convinced that the cause of prohibition as embodied in this referendum should receive the unstinted support of the people.

The prohibition law, on which the referendum is to be taken, is not a law in the making, but one that already exists on the Federal Statute Books. Its provisions are well known, and it nowhere infringes on religious liberty or religious convictions. It makes for the best welfare of the people, and the referendum vote it should receive the overwhelming support of the Province. If prohibition, rightly enforced, does not completely abolish the drink traffic, it surely will lessen it close to the vanishing point, and it is no argument against it that it will not completely abolish the traffic. There are prohibitory and penal laws against theft, homicide and scores of other wrongs, and yet these things do happen, but this is no reason why such laws should not be enacted and supported by the public conscience. The same principle holds true in regard to the law of prohibition, and in view of the disastrous results of strong drink, also in this province, the public conscience should rally to the support of this measure.

Yours respectfully,
JAMES MORRISON,
Bishop of Antigonish.

PHANTOM SHIPS STILL HAUNT THE SEA

The coast of England has many legends concerning spectre ships firmly believed by the rugged fishermen, who assert stoutly that on various occasions glimpses of the shadowy craft have been seen. The spectre of the Palentine is occasionally seen on the Sound, and is the forerunner of a gale. She was a Dutch trading vessel and was wrecked off Block Island in 1732. The wreckers, it is said, made short work of her, stripping her fore and aft and setting fire to the hull.

As she drifted blazing off the coast a human form was visible amid the flames, the form of a woman passenger, left to perish on the doomed craft. Since, and generally upon the anniversary of the wreck, a phantom ship with blazing hull, tattered spars and scorched sail and rigging has been cruising off Block Island.

Whittier recorded the legend in graceful verse, as well as that of a ghostly cruiser that sailed from a New England port on her last voyage, which was termed "The Dead Ship of Salem."

In the seventeenth century a ship was about to sail from Salem, Mass., to England. Her cargo was on board, sails bent and passengers on deck when two strangers came hurriedly on board and begged passage. The couple were a young man and a young woman, who tradition records, were remarkable for their bearing and beauty.

Who they were or whence they came no one in Salem Town could tell. The ship, being delayed by adverse winds, the mysterious couple excited the suspicions of the townspeople, who viewed them as uncanny and prophesied disaster to the vessel if they were allowed to sail on her. But the master, a gruff and stern sailor, refused to listen, and finally departed on a Friday.

The vessel never reached her destination and was never spoken, but later in the year incoming vessels reported sighting a craft with luminous rigging and sails and shining hull and spars. She was sailing with all canvas set, against the wind, with a crew of dead men standing in the shrouds and leaning over the rail, while on the quarter deck stood a young and beautiful couple.

It is said that the French fishermen from the Magdalen Islands and the matter of fact Yankee shippers of Bangor, Me., also shun the shores of Bay Chaleur after dark and refuse to put in at Dead Man's Cove under any circumstances, preferring to run the risk of foundering in a hurricane in the open sea to sharing the shelter of the cove with the phantom ship.

This famous spectre of the sea is said to appear only in the calm, preceding a great storm, with every stitch of canvas drawing and her decks swarming with men, all running to and fro as if in a panic. The head of her water is like glass; behind her the gale comes tearing along, beating the sea into froth and driving her straight on through everything in her way. She is an ancient model, full rigged and gray all over—hull, upper works, sails and spars—as if formed of fog. Gray, too, is her ghostly crew.

The inhabitants of St. Pierre tell of a smack on a herring trip that found herself right in the track of the phantom ship. Captain and crew had heard of the ghostly vessel, but scoffed at it, and when they saw her loom up in the twilight straight ahead they thought a collision imminent and the startled steersman put the helm over. The sea wraith swept down upon them, and in the space of a breath had passed right through them and was sailing on in the direction of "Dead Man's Cove."

A fishing schooner from Magdalen Island, warned by the thickening sky of an approaching storm, put in at the cove to ride out the gale. Before she had reached anchorage, a ship was seen coming rapidly behind her, heading for the cove. As it drew near the captain got out his glasses to see if he knew the stranger. Suddenly he dropped to his knees and commenced to pray.

"Boys," he said, "it's a ghost. I saw a sea gull fly through her." Every man threw himself on his face, afraid to look. The first to raise his head and look over the rail was the cabin boy. "Oh, get up, get up, all of you," he shouted, "she's gone." The crew lost no time in making sail out of the cove in the teeth of a black squall.

Another story is that of a smack from St. Pierre which saw the phantom anchored just inside the cove at sunset. A small boat filled with men was making trips between the gray ship and the beach, at each trip heading for the cove and barrels, which other men waiting ashore buried in the sand. The captain did not wait to see whether they were interfering dead men or chests of treasure, but got away from the place as fast as he could.

Old sailors along the Maine coast firmly believe that the phantom ship is an old merchantman that went down with all on board trying to reach the cove in a great storm in 1784; but at St. Pierre the fishermen will tell you that it is a pirate haunting the spot where the buccaner crew hid the treasure for which they lost their souls.

Old maids are unknown in Persia. Miss Annie Stone, 102 years old, is the oldest registered woman in Massachusetts.

THE MILL-FEED QUESTION

One of the main factors in the scarcity and consequently high prices of bran and middlings, is that Canada's surplus wheat is shipped whole to the American market. Freight rates are 30 per cent. lower on whole wheat than on flour. This is one reason why it is shipped unmilled. Another is that farmers and stock men on the other side are anxious to have the by-products as we use them.

The proposal has been made that Government ships carry flour at the same freight rate as whole wheat, so as to encourage milling on this side.

The Secretary for Agriculture, Province of Nova Scotia, some time ago sent a formal petition to Ottawa, urging this course. He has received a reply stating that every possible consideration will be given to the proposal.

This is a most vital matter to Maritime Province farmers, and this seems to be the only feasible way at present of lessening the cost flow of bran and middlings from the country in the whole grain. It would be well to have the attention of Parliamentary representatives called to this question. The Dominion Millers' Association and various Farmers' organizations are working at present toward the same end.

The State military training law is now in force in the United States and the Governors are calling upon all boys between the ages of 16 and 19 years to register at the nearest public school buildings for military instruction.

Since January 1st, 1920, there has been no Federal restriction on importation for beverage use, and now liquor pours into dry provinces to supply bootleggers, whiskey smugglers and rum runners. The enforcement of the Temperance Act is thus made more difficult.

Under Wartime Prohibition of Importation, crime decreased. Since January 1st, 1920, it has increased because restrictions on importation have been removed.

Old British Industries

Are Enjoying Prosperity
With All Prices Tripled

THAT Great Britain finds her position with regard to export trade in certain lines, such as cutlery, china and toys, greatly strengthened by post-war conditions and that she is prepared to make every effort to improve the opportunities offered is indicated by recent trade reports.

The cutlery industry of Sheffield is again in a most flourishing condition, after a steady decline of almost fifty years. With the elimination of German competition in this field every maker in Sheffield is enjoying unexampled prosperity. Works are busied by buyers asking for goods, reversing the usual order of things, where travelers go out seeking to obtain orders. There is no question of finding a market for goods. The market exists for each article before it is produced. It is reported that the same would be the case if the entire Sheffield output could be doubled.

The scarcity of labor in this line, the greatly increased cost of the raw materials, and the higher prices that will prevail for cutlery and electroplated, silverware are strongly marked features of the new conditions. Sheffield cutlery and grinders were poorly paid before the war, this being true of even the skilled workers. Now they find there are opportunities for earning big pay at this work. Operators are turning into proprietors, almost 500 of these individual manufacturers of cutlery having come into existence overnight as it were. Big and little, progressive or otherwise, they are all making money, and Germany is looked upon as out of the running in this field for several years, at any rate.

The silver and electroplated trades report an almost equally flourishing condition, with orders far in excess of production, and a scarcity of labor, especially of the highly skilled class. Price increases have not discouraged orders and the growth is particularly marked in the more expensive silverware. Making reports that the heaviest and most costly goods have been most in favor with buyers.

The most marked increase, however, is noted in the sale of spoons and forks in silver, and nickel and chromium, plated and unplated, and this is largely accounted for by trade taken away from Germany. There has been a big increase in wages in this industry and advances in the selling prices are calculated as averaging about 110 per cent.

Advances in price in cutlery are most marked in cheaper grades, the increases in those grades being much larger proportionally than in the more expensive articles. Following are a few examples of wholesale prices, selected from makers' lists, representing a fair average.

Table knives with celluloid handles and penknives with two blades, each with an arrowhead in 1913 at 7 shillings and 6 pence per dozen; at 20 shillings per dozen; today: electroplated tablespoons and electroplated forks, which sold in 1913 at 16 shillings and 8 pence per dozen; today are 35 shillings a dozen; teaspoons which sold at 6 shillings and 6 pence a dozen have gone up to 13 shillings; scissors which sold at 4 shillings and 6 pence in 1913 are now 15 shillings a dozen.

The old-time cheap cutlery, it is said, will never again appear in the market. There is no cheap labor available to produce it.

In the pottery trade many British manufacturers are replanning and re-equipping factories and factories, waste-saving methods with an eye to the need of export trade, especially to the United States and Canada. A consistent attempt is being made to raise the general standard of design up to form, decoration and color in all grades. The result is new shapes and decorations are in evidence in special goods exhibited at the British Industries Fair, in London, Birmingham and Glasgow, and are calculated to make a special appeal to Central American buyers, colonies being designed for color, meaning the colonies and dominions of Great Britain, while entire lines are produced with the idea of being of special interest to the United States and South American markets.

German manufacturers of china and earthenware are already seeking the trade of Spain, Latin-American countries, Norway, Sweden and Mid-Europe, while they are apparently already regaining their foothold in Russia. British makers point to Germany's coal shortage and state that her output will be limited for some time to come, under any circumstances. Japanese competition is strongest in medium and cheap wares, principally in some sections of Canada and among her Pacific neighbors.

Japan's competition is not considered of great importance in the toy trade either, wooden toys, small celluloid dolls, animals and low-priced novelties comprising the field in which she is considered able to succeed. British manufacturers point to the marked inferiority of Japan's metal mechanical toys, with the statement that "the springs and putting together are so bad that they break after a few moments' use."

With Germany temporarily out of the running, on account of the shortage of the raw materials for the manufacture of dolls and "soft toys," the United States has become the chief competitor in the manufacture of some lines of toys.

History Repeats Itself,

Recalling Great Speech Delivered by Gladstone

IN few things is the present world more remarkable than in the way history is repeating itself. Forty years or so ago, the great anti-Turkish movement which swept over Great Britain, occasioned by the numerous outrages of the Turk upon the Bulgarians and other Christian peoples in the Balkans, was led by Gladstone in the early autumn of 1876. He suddenly emerged from the retirement into which he had recently withdrawn, and, with the publication of his famous pamphlet on the Bulgarian atrocities, embarked on a campaign against the pro-Turkish policy of the Government which ended, four years later, in the overthrow of Lord Beaconsfield and Gladstone's return to power. This extraordinary effort was marked by three tremendous battles, the great emancipation through the pamphlet, a memorable speech in the House of Commons in the early days of the Russo-Turkish War, and the Midlothian campaign. In many ways, the speech was the most remarkable of the three. "I shall never forget," declared Mr. Balfour, many years afterwards, the impression that speech left on my mind. As a mark of its physical endurance, it was almost unsurpassed; as a feat of parliamentary courage, parliamentary skill, parliamentary endurance, and parliamentary eloquence, I believe it will always be unequalled."

The occasion of its delivery was one of peculiar tension. A conference of the powers, which had met at Constantinople in the previous December in an effort to settle the Turkish question, had broken down. A subsequent effort in the following March had likewise failed, and Russia had declared war on Turkey. Mr. Gladstone was all for immediate action. His colleagues in the Opposition were all for doing Mr. Gladstone's bidding, a peculiar position. Two years before he had vacated his place as leader of the Liberal party. Indeed, he did not regard himself as being, even technically, amongst the leaders of the party. He tried, therefore, at first, to induce the official leaders to act in the matter, but, on their continued refusal, decided that considerations of humanity overrode all party considerations, and determined to introduce a motion in the House, which, if it had been accepted, would have completely reversed the country's "No Eastern Policy." "This day," Gladstone writes in his diary, under date of April 27, 1877, "I took my decision, a severe one, in face of my not having a single supporter in the upper circle. But had I in the middle of September asked the same body whether I ought to write my pamphlet, I believe the unanimous answer would have been, 'No.'"

A few days later, Lord Granville and Lord Wolcott came round suddenly to his point of view to endeavor to prevent any kind of breach in the party, but when Gladstone faced the House on Monday morning, May 1, it was in the presence of tremendous hostile ministerial forces and a sullen and silent Opposition. "To quote from his diary again: "For over two hours I was assailed from every quarter, except the Opposition bench, which was empty of men. I rose on the main question, nearly in despair as to the result, but resolved at least not to fall through want of effort. I spoke two and one-half hours. House gradually came round and at last was more than good. It was over at 2.30."

Thus simply does Mr. Gladstone record the matter, but many who heard him on that occasion must have agreed with Mr. Balfour that they had listened to an effort which, in many respects, would "always be unequalled." The speech, however, is the thing. Take this one passage in what Lord Morley calls the "noble peroration": "You talk to me of the established tradition of British policy in Turkey. I am glad to see an established tradition, older, wiser, nobler than the tradition which dominates British interests, but which teaches you to seek the promotion of these interests in obeying the dictates of honor over justice. And, sir, what is the end of this? Are we to dress up the fantastic ideas some people entertain of this policy and that policy in the garb of British history, and then, with a new and base idolatry, fall down and worship them?" Or take this appeal, made after describing the enormities of the Turk as Gladstone alone could describe them: "But, sir, the removal of this war and shame is a great and noble prize. It is a prize well worth contending for, too long to be left to try to win it. I believe there are men in the Cabinet who would try to win it, if they were free to act on their own beliefs and aspirations. It is not yet too late, I say, to become competitors for that prize."

The opportunities of this appeal to the present day and hour is something more than remarkable. The House was, in the end, as Gladstone puts it, "more than good." Two or three days of debate and party drilling, the motions were defeated by 353 votes against 223, but the speech was, none the less, one of the greatest moral triumphs ever won in the House of Commons.

Related to George IV?
Referring to a New York despatch to the effect that William Fitzherbert, who died at London, had been claimed to be a great-grandson of King George IV by his marriage with Mrs. Fitzherbert, who had been married to large estate, the London Daily News says: "Whatever the facts about the marriage, there is no doubt that Mrs. Fitzherbert followed herself to be lawfully married to George IV. It has always been understood that she died childless."

Wedding Bells

MOTT-SPITTLER

A quiet wedding took place at Victoria Street, paragon, St. John, where Rev. G. D. Hudson, united in marriage Walter Mott, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Mott, of Wickham, to Miss Gladys May Spittler, only daughter of Mrs. L. Spittler, of Bloomfield. The happy couple arrived on the Empress for a short trip to the bride's home, after which they will reside in St. John.

EISENER-HEIGHT

A quiet home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Height, of Plympton, on Wednesday morning, when their youngest daughter, Agnes Marion, a valued member of H. T. Warne's choir, became the bride of Forrest Eisener, of Eldridge's Garage. Rev. J. H. Copeland, of Weymouth, officiated, and the double service was used. The bride was gown in her travelling outfit of blue serge with hat to match. The happy couple came to Digby at once and left on the steamer for St. John. They will reside in Digby.

BAKER-CHUTE

A pretty wedding took place on October 20th, in St. Thomas Church, Bridgetown, when Dr. Charles Herbert Chute, a member of the medical staff of the International Health Service at Camp Borden, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chute, Bear River, and Miss Genevieve Caribid Baker, assistant house manager of the same institution, were united in marriage by the Rev. Wm. G. Stoddard, who read the impressive Epistle service. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with greenery and white flowers. Seventy-five friends and co-workers of the bride and groom were present at the wedding. Previous to the ceremony Mrs. Leroy Dale sang "I Love You Truly." Dr. and Mrs. William Crosby were the attendants. There were a very attractive suit of brown drapery with hat to match and a corsage bouquet. Mrs. Crosby was also attired in brown.

CHAPTER V.

Mr. Parcher and Love.

MISS PRATT, that unhappy gentleman, having been driven indoors from his own porch, had attempted to read "Platt's Lives" in the library; but, owing to the dimness of the porch and the summer necessity for open windows, his escape spared only his eyes and not his suffering ears. The house was small, but had a double one, with small rooms, and the "parlor," library and dining room, all about equally exposed to the porch which ran along the side of the house. Mr. Parcher had no refuge except bed or the kitchen, and as he was troubled with chronic insomnia, and the cook had caters in the kitchen, his case was desperate. Most unfortunately, too, his reading lamp, the only one in the house, was a fixture near a window, and just beyond that window sat Miss Pratt and William in sweet unconsciousness, while Miss Parcher entertained the overflow, consisting of Mr. Johnnie Watson, at the other end of the porch.

Listening perforce to the conversation of the former couple, he found it impossible to sit still in his chair. Sometimes he rasped, and other times he moaned a little.

"Oh, cute miss!" came the silvery voice of Miss Pratt from the likewise silvery porch outside, underneath the summer moon. "Darlin' Flop! took little boy Baxter's gold make imitations of darlin' Flop! again. See! Ickle boy Baxter puts head one side, then other side, just like darlin' Flop! then barks just like darlin' Flop! Ladies and gentlemen, imitations of darlin' Flop! by Ickle boy Baxter."

"Bern-wer! Bern-wer!" came the voice of William Sylvanus Baxter, and in the library "Platt's Lives" moved convulsively, while with writhing lips Mr. Parcher muttered to himself.

"More, more!" cried Miss Pratt, clapping her hands. "Do it again, Ickle boy Baxter!"

"Word!" muttered Mr. Parcher.

Miss Pratt's voice became charged with benighted wonder. "How did he learn such marvelous, marvelous imitations of darlin' Flop! He ought to go on the big, big stage and be a really actor, oughtn't he, darlin' Flop! He could make mlyums and mlyums of dollardies, couldn't he, darlin' Flop!?" William's modest laugh declined any great ambition for himself in this line. "Oh, I always could think up imitations of animals, things like that, but I hardly would care to to adopt the stage for a career. Word—word!" There was a thrill in his voice when he pronounced the ineffably significant word "you."

"It's my dream!" she said. William, seated upon a stool at her feet, gazed up at the amber head, divinely enlivened by the rain of moonlight. The fire with which she spoke stirred him as few things had ever stirred him. He knew she had just revealed a side of herself which she reserved for only the chosen few who were capable of understanding her, and he fell into a blissful rapture. "It was wonderful of you to say that to me," he said. "I shall never forget it."

"Do it again, Ickle boy Baxter!"

"It's my dream!" Miss Pratt exclaimed again, with the same enthusiasm. "It's my dream!"

"You would make a glorious actress!" he said.

At that her mood changed. She laughed a laugh like a sweet little girl's laugh (but, Jane's and, setting her rocking chair in motion, cuddled the fuzzy white doglet in her arms.

"Ickle boy Baxter tyn! fatterbox us, tynnis! Flop! No! no! fatterbox!"

"No, no!" Miss Pratt insisted earnestly. "I mean it. But—but—"

"But what?"

"What do you think about actors and actresses? Making love to each other on the stage? Do you think they have to really feel it, or do they just pretend?"

"Well," said Miss Pratt wearily,

"sometimes one way, sometimes the other."

William's gravity became more and more profound. "Yes, but how can they pretend like that? Don't you think love is a sacred thing, Cousin Lola?"

Fictitious sisterhoods, brotherhoods and cousinships are devices to push things along well known to seventeen and even more advanced ages. On the wonderful evening of their first meeting William and Miss Pratt had cozily arranged to be called respectively "Ickle boy Baxter" and "Cousin Lola."

Thus they had broken down the tedious formalities of their first twenty minutes together.

"Don't you think love is sacred?" he repeated in his deep tone.

"Ess," said Miss Pratt.

"I do!" William was emphatic. "I think love is the most sacred thing there is. I don't mean some kind of love. I mean real love. You take some people; I don't believe they ever know what real love means. They talk about it, maybe, but they don't understand it. Love is something nobody can understand unless they feel it, and—and if they don't understand it they don't feel it. Don't you think so?"

"Love," William continued, his voice lifting and thrilling to the great theme.

"Love is something nobody can ever have but one time in their lives, and if they don't have it then why, probably they never will. Now, if a man really loves a girl, why, he'd do anything in the world she wanted him to. Don't you think so?"

"Ess, deedums!" said the silvery voice.

"But if he didn't, then he wouldn't!" said William vehemently. "But when a man really loves a girl he will. Now, you take a man like that and he can generally do just about anything the girl he loves wants him to. Say, for instance, she wants him to love her, even more than he does already, or almost anything like that, and suppose she asks him to. Well, he would go ahead and do it. If they really loved each other he would!"

He paused a moment, then in a lowered tone he said, "I think real love is sacred, don't you?"

"Ess."

"Don't you think love is the most sacred thing there is—that is, if it's real love?"

"Ess."

"I do," said William warmly. "I'm glad you feel like that, because I think real love is the kind nobody could have but just once in their lives, but if it isn't real love, why—why, most people never have it at all, because."

He paused, seeming to seek for the exact phrase which would express his meaning. "Because the real love a man feels for a girl and a girl for a man, if they really love each other—and, you look at a case like that, of course they would both love each other or it wouldn't be real love—well, what I say is, if it's real love—well, it's—it's sacred, because I think that kind of love is always sacred. Don't you think love is sacred if it's the real thing?"

"Ess," said Miss Pratt. "Do Flop! again. Be Flop!"

"Bern-wer! Bern-wer-wer!"

And within the library an agonized man writhed and muttered:

"Word! Word! Word!"

This hoarse repetition had become almost continuous. But out on the porch, that littleasmine account how in Arcady where youth cried to youth and golden heads were haloed in the moonshine, there fell a silence, not utter silence, for out there came real music sounded constantly, unheard and forgotten by older ears.

It was William who spoke again.

"How"—he began, and his voice trembled a little—"how—how do you—how do you think of me when I'm not with you?"

"Think nice-ums," Miss Pratt responded. "Fibsit um, me think nice-ums."

"No," said William; "I mean what name do you have for me when you're—when you're thinking about me?"

"Miss Pratt," said she, puzzled.

"I mean like this," William explained. "For instance, when you first came I always thought of you as Mlady."

"Ess! Dearfums!"

"But now I don't," he said. "Now I think of you by another name when I'm alone. It—it's just sort of game to me. It was about as strange as I ever knew of. Don't you think so?"

"Ess. It us dest weird!" she answered. "What are that pitty names?"

"I call you," said William huskily and reverently—"I call you my Baby Talk Lady."

"Bang!"

They were startled by a crash from within the library. A heavy weight seemed to have fallen, or to have been hurled, a considerable distance. Stepping to the window, William beheld a large volume lying in a distorted attitude at the foot of the wall opposite to that in which the reading lamp was a fixture. Mr. Parcher had given up and was now haggard to his bed in the last faint hope of saving his reputation.

"Cream the butter with the sugar"
- the Cook-Book says

"OH, come on, Mabel, I want to go shopping. It needn't take all afternoon to make a cake! Here, let me cream the butter and sugar. Watch how quick I can do it! If you'd ever used Lantic before you'd realize how quickly a fine sugar creams!"

Lantic is a quick-acting sweetener, because it is fine. It distributes the pure cane sweetness speedily, thoroughly and economically. It saves time in the preparation of cakes, puddings and sauces, in the cooking of preserves, in the making of candy, in the sweetening of beverages, hot or cold. Not winter are the snowy dollops and that gleam and glisten in the sugar bowl. Not finer is the silver with its hall-mark. Yet, in homes where every penny counts, Lantic goodness helps in the saving. It does go farther!

DISTRESS IN EUROPE

British Empire Effort to Help Smaller Nations.

Canadian Red Cross to Organize Appeal on Behalf of Orphans—Call to Be Made in Armistice Week.

An urgent appeal for aid to combat the widespread disease and distress in the war-stricken areas in Europe has been made by the League of Red Cross Societies to the nations which have suffered least from the war. In response a War Relief Fund has been undertaken in Great Britain with an Empire-wide appeal for contributions. The fund is under the immediate patronage of His Majesty the King and has the support of all parts of the Empire.

His Excellency, the Governor-General of Canada, having received communications from London upon this matter, consulted the Prime Minister, and with his approval referred the question to the Canadian Red Cross Society, and it was arranged for an appeal to be made in Canada during Armistice week in November. The fund will be known as the British Empire War Relief Fund.

To Make Known the Need.

The Canadian Red Cross Society accepted the task of making this appeal known throughout Canada only in view of the enormous scale of the campaign and the humane desire to help to alleviate the terrible suffering of a large number of peoples. The reasons are "humanity and common sense." Large populations are suffering from distress and disease. Millions of innocent children are among them. Even in time of peace great numbers of their people lived close to the bread line. The war drained them of all their surplus resources.

Through the years of strife they were denied all but the bare necessities, and their condition was pitiful indeed. History has repeated itself. The diseases which took such fearful toll of human life after the Thirty Years' War, the Seven Years' War (1757-65), and the Napoleonic Wars are again widespread, and now there are millions of people in Galicia, Poland, Yugoslavia and Roumania who, in addition to being poverty-stricken, are in the direct line of disease. In some twelve countries, most of which were either our Allies or friends to the Allied cause, modern civilization is faced with the inevitable consequences of a great war through partial famine and pestilence.

A Previous Epidemic.

That the epidemic is now one of alarming proportions and terrible in its effect may be noted from the following quotation from "The Times":

"At present the worst results of typhus are confined to Galicia, where the schools are closed, business is at a standstill, and civil life is crippled. The whole community is faced with starvation, while the lack of clothing and drugs makes it impossible for the authorities to make any headway against the epidemic. Here we have a country into which the idea of modern sanitation has never penetrated; for the most part there is no water supply in the smaller towns and villages save wells, whilst the work of sewerage is done by open gullies running through the streets. There are no doctors, no nurses, and no beds, and the miserable typhus-stricken patients lie unattended on the bare floor. Throughout the rural districts whole families exist in miserable one-roomed huts, their diet consisting of starvation rations of potatoes and beet, both bread and meat being luxuries rarely seen. In almost every hut and in many instances whole families are stricken with the disease, and are perforce left to die unattended."

Many Countries Are Suffering.

What is said of Galicia is true of other countries of Europe, such as, Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia, huge territories of the Ukraine, Soviet Russia, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia. Nor is typhus the only affliction. Tuberculosis, smallerpox, dysentery, relapsing fever, are also ravaging large areas.

Lack of Medical Aid.

These terrible conditions have been called to the attention of the people of the British Empire in a statement by the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, who, speaking for the Council of the League of Nations, says:

"Men, women and children are dying by thousands, and over vast and civilized areas there is neither medical appliances nor medical skill sufficient to cope with the horrors by which we are tormented. Governments have in certain cases done all in their power to bring relief, but there remains a vast field for Christian charity, and one which can be dealt with only by voluntary effort."

Eleven Million Orphans.

Dr. Livingstone Farrand, chairman of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross, who has just returned from Europe, states that there are 11,000,000 fatherless children in Europe who face the next few years without hope of adequate care unless outside assistance is given.

For Suffering Children.

No stronger call could be made to humanity than that of suffering children, and on their behalf particularly the Canadian Red Cross will appeal throughout Canada during Armistice week. Each provincial division of the Red Cross will have charge of the arrangements in its own province, and all Red Cross workers should put themselves into touch immediately with their local branch or with the Headquarters of the Provincial Division if no local branch is organized.

Girl government clerks employed in Washington are compelled to pay $10.50 a month for board and lodging at the dormitories for women employees erected with such speed during the war.

LITTLE BROOK'S GOOD SHOW

Splendid Line of Exhibits in All Departments

Little Brook, Digby County, Agricultural Society held their exhibition at that place last week, and the attendance was very large. The show from every point was, like many others this season, a good one, and all departments showed marked improvement. The first to be well filled with a splendid line of exhibits. In the livestock several good general purpose horses were exhibited. The cattle exhibit was good, particularly that of working oxen, which made an exceptional showing, plainly demonstrating that the Acadian farmer still holds to the old reliable oxen, but a much higher classed animal than his predecessors. In the dairy cattle there was a display of several good heads of grade Jerseys, Guernseys, Ayrshires, etc., all of which showed good quality and bespeaks much praise for the owners are taking in the bettering of their stock. Prof. Cumming, of Truro, was the judge in the department.

The inside show, considering the size of the territory which it serves, and other conditions, was first to possibly could be expected and reflects much credit on the management in making it such a success. The vegetable show was very full of a class of potatoes, carrots, turnips, beets, etc., second to none to be found anywhere. The fruit also showed up well, and was of good variety.

In the domestic department there was found another admirable exhibit consisting of bread and other cookery, preserved pickles, jams, jellies, etc. The whole exhibit was of excellent quality and bespeaks much praise for the clever housewives of the Clare Municipality. A special feature of the exhibit was the splendid showing of home-made white starch for laundry purposes.

The showing of fine arts was an innovation, and at first sight won the admiration of many critics. Every piece was of the highest order, and the judging by three Sisters from the Art Department of the Sacred Heart Convent at Meteghan was done under the greatest care, so that the perfect was the work of each exhibit.

In the home-made goods there was a full showing of quilts, rugs, knitted gloves, mittens, stockings, and socks, all of which was of the very highest grade, while the yarn, home-made, from which they were manufactured was of the finest texture, displaying the remarkable skill in the manufacture of these articles by the exhibitors.

BETWEEN FIFTY AND SIXTY

(By D. Howells in Harper's Magazine)

After sixty, one must not take too many chances with one's self, but I should say that the golden age of man is between fifty and sixty when one may safely take these things. One peace then from the different passions; if one has been tolerably industrious, one is tolerably prosperous; one has fairly learned one's trade or has mastered one's art; age seems as far off as youth; one is not so much afraid of death as earlier; one likes joking as much as ever; and loves beauty and truth as much; family cares are well out of the way, if one has married timely; one no longer nightly walks the floor with even the youngest child; the marriage ring is then a circle half rounded in eternity. It is a blessed time; it is indeed the golden age, and no age after it is more than silver. The best age after it may be that between eighty and ninety, but one cannot make so sure of ninety as of seventy in the procession of years, and that is where the gold turns to silver. But silver is one of the precious metals too, and it need not have any of the alloy of the baser ones. I do not say how it will be in the years between ninety and one hundred, and am not yet confronted with that question. Still, all is not gold between eighty and ninety, as it is between fifty and sixty. In that time, if one has made one's self wanted in the world, one is still wanted; but between eighty and ninety, if one is still wanted, is one wanted as much as ever? It is a painful question, but one must not shrink it, and in trying for the answer one must not do less than one's utmost, at a time when one's utmost will cost more effort than before. This is a disadvantage of living so long, but we cannot change the conditioning if we wish to live. There is always the question whether one does wish to live, but for the average happy or unhappy man, I should say, yes, yes, yes.

WAS BIG SURPRISE TO SYDNEY WOMAN

Had Almost Given Up Hope, Gains 14 Pounds and Recovers Health Since Taking Tanlac.

"My friends and relatives were almost over my condition and I did not think I could last much longer myself, but since taking Tanlac I have been restored to perfect health and have gained fourteen pounds besides," said Mrs. Phillip Frazier, who lives on McLeod St., Sydney, Nova Scotia.

"It was about four years ago that my health broke down," continued Mrs. Frazier, "and two years ago I got so bad off that I had to have an operation, which left me in a weaker condition than ever. I was so restless I could never sleep good at night and time after time I went to bed and lay awake for hours before I even closed my eyes. My nerves were in an awful condition and any little unusual noise would frighten me terribly. I was subject to such severe headaches that I would have to stay in bed in the dark room. My appetite was poor and I never cared whether I went to the table or not, and the little I did force down disagreed with me. I fell off from one hundred and ten pounds to ninety, and was hardly more than a frame and was so weak it was an effort for me to get around."

"Finally I decided to try Tanlac, as I had heard so much about it, and I began to improve right from the start. I have finished my sixth bottle and am happy to say that I am a well woman in every respect. My nerves are steady and I am no longer troubled with these awful headaches. I have a splendid appetite and no matter what I eat it agrees with me perfectly. I sleep like a child every night and can stay on my feet from morning till night and do all my household work easier than I have in years. I just feel better and stronger in every way and all my friends say my recovery is marvelous."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

GLOUCESTER VERSUS LUNENBURG

There is good sportsmanship in Gloucester. The Vankee fishing fleet will enter the race with the Nova Scotians at several disadvantages. One is that the Lunenburgers are already in trim, and has sailed his race with his fellow Nova Scotians. Another is that, although 10 years ago Gloucester would have had a wide selection of fast schooners from which to choose its champion, so many of the vessels have propellers dragging astern now that the choice is considerably diminished.

Similar as the landsman may think the Lunenburg and Gloucester types of schooners are, they have differences which will unquestionably tell when it comes to a stiff race. The Lunenburgers are built of softer wood, their sides are higher out of water, and they are chunkier in the beam. The "long, black ones" out of Gloucester are lean and raamy.

In seamanship the Gloucester men have the reputation along the coast of being willing to take the longer chance, but if the skipper of the Nova Scotian is the same Himmelmann about whom they used to tell the story of knocking off the revenue cutter's figurehead with his main boom "clean as a pin maul," and another of firing a hammer-head across the bows of a steam trawler that was going down through his trawls, the race is likely to be a lively one.

There is an old chantey popular amongst glee clubs. It is no less a song than "Whisky Johnny." But to hear it sung by a crew of old salts is as different as sea water is from fresh. It was a song made by men to sing at their work; a bit of play to spice hardship and danger; and the song smells of the salt wind.

There is the same difference between this race of Yankee and Nova Scotia fishermen and the race of the cup defenders. The cup race is the play of the rich. This race will be the play of working-men.—Boston Globe.

Lubricant Carbon Remover cleans the cylinders, pistons and rings. Put two tablespoons of Kimo in each cylinder of your Ford or Chev., more for larger cars, and it will soften the carbon to a substance resembling Stove Paste, and being saturated with Kimo it will burn. After the hot cylinders have been allowed to steam with Kimo for fifteen to twenty minutes, turn the engine slowly by hand for a few revolutions and then start the engine under power. The carbon is burned and blown out of the exhaust. Your engine treated with Kimo once a week will give you more power and save time and money.

A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The editor has been keeping interested in telling me of the reception my last letter received. He tells me that on the Friday afternoon after the paper came out he received three telephone messages congratulating him on the article—but the next day he had half a dozen en knockers. But the knockers were not general. In every case some one, but by one of the paragraphs, its publication and thought that the publicity would do no good—but the rest of the letter was all right. It just goes to show how careful a writer must be if he expects to suit everyone, and it also goes to show what a spineless paper would be the one that always tried to please everybody. No one is perfect. Things are going wrong every day and the newspaper which prints out the most glaring of these wrongs is a public enemy. But will my readers be so kind as to tell me that I do not knock for the sake of knocking. I am not infallible and it may be that my idea of what may be in the public interest does not correspond with someone else's idea, but as long as no one suffers a malicious injury what does it matter?

The towns sprucing up quite a lot lately. Considerable paint is being used and a lot of general repair work is going on and it all tends to make Digby more attractive. But at this season of the year any town which has many ornamental trees, is pretty. The glorious colors which autumn takes on and the exceptionally clear air—much clearer than earlier in the year—renders the beautiful Basin still more beautiful. It seems strange to me that our tourists have not learned of the beauties of this place in May, June, September and October.

A week or two ago there was published in the Courier a list of "Beware's" for men. There have been several requests since for some "Beware's" to answer these first, and to show that girls sometimes really do pick out a life partner and do not, as seems to be the usual opinion, take the first thing that comes.

1. Beware of the man who says he has never loved anyone but you. That's just what he will say to the next girl.
2. Beware of the man with delicately manicured finger nails. When you marry, you want a husband, not a ladies' maid.
3. Beware of any man who years bright green. That is the only green thing about him.

4. Beware of the man who smokes too many cigarettes. He will never sweep up his ashes after you are married.

5. Beware of the man who likes to boss. If you want a boss, work for him.

6. Beware of any man who speaks slightly of women by force of habit. He means all of him, and the less you know of him the better.

7. Beware of the man who has flabby muscles and white hands. His backbone is usually as flabby as his muscles and his face as white as his hands in time of danger.

8. Beware of the man who sits back and watches you do the work. Marry him, and you will do his work too.

9. Beware of the man who will kick a dog.

10. Beware of the man who is satisfied with himself. No one else will be satisfied with him.

11. And last but not least, there is an old proverb which reads something like this:

"Beware of that man, although whose hair is of one color, mustache another."

DONALD MACKAY

Contributed by Arthur Hunt (Hunt) in the interests of the International Fishing Schooner Forty Mile Race.

Donald Mackay the premier clipper ship designer of all time, was a native of Nova Scotia. But he was born on the South Shore of our Province, the son of poor Highland immigrant folk, who had come to this country from County Ross, in Scotland.

Despite his humble origin, Donald Mackay, through industry and native genius, attained to a position of highest distinction. Today his bust may be seen at the Louvre in Paris, alongside of that of Raphael and of Michael Angelo. What Raphael did in canvas, what Michael Angelo did in marble, Donald Mackay did in yards and spars. He was a wizard and a dreamer, who knew how to make his dreams come true.

The soul of an artist never conceived anything finer than the "Lightning" or the "Sovereign of the Seas". To gaze upon the mere picture of one of his wondrous ships is still an inspiration, but to know them indeed was to view one of his clippers with skysails and moonsails faring forth, like an Archangel of the tempest.

Donald Mackay's greatest achievement was the "Lightning" the fastest ship ever built. She holds the record for a Cape Horn voyage, completed in eighty-nine days. On her fastest day of that voyage, she averaged 18 knots per hour, her total days run being 434 miles. During one hour of that day she logged 21 knots a speed never before or since equalled by sailing craft.

Let us honor the memory of this great NOVA SCOTIAN, in the way he would approve, by contributing something to the Racing Fund, a fund which has for its purpose a revival of the proud position and prestige held in the old days by the fleet bottoms of Nova Scotia, on the waters of the deep, in every quarter of the Globe.

"What do you know about Absalom?" The Rev. Geo. Craig Stewart, pastor of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, of Evanston, Illinois, asked that question of two hundred students of the Northwestern University. "Ignorance of the Bible is appalling," Dr. Stewart said. Out of these 200 there were only 19 who had even heard of Absalom, and about 199 who could tell me all about "Babe" Ruth.

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

My Prof. C. C. Langner, Mus. Rec. Series.

NO. 1—MUSICAL IMPRESSION
A vocalist writes to a music editor wanting to know how long it is possible for a man to hold a note. The editor replies, we have one that we have held for six years and rather expect to hold it six years longer. It would be quite difficult to hold a musical note that long, particularly if playing on a bass instrument.

We are told that an English physician advises the playing of wind instrument, as a recent investigation has brought this summer past. That cornetist's life averages 69 years, clarinetist's life is 64 years, and because flutists do not require the full exercise of their lungs in playing, their average is but 61 years. He adds that to play some wind instrument is the best thing for the steady and moderate use of the lungs somewhat in excess of breathing is the cause.

We sometimes pause in considering the drum as a musical instrument and we step up to the drum and say to him "after the band has stopped playing, you don't make very good music with that instrument. No, admitted the pounder of the drum, I know I don't, but I drown a heap of bad music."

The Scotch have a proverb: "When the victor sits, there is the head of the table." This brings us to an incident in Sarah Bernhardt's career when touring the U. S. A. Her manager failed to secure a proper theatre for her in a certain Texas city in which she had promised to appear. With great reluctance and expecting a contemptuous refusal, he suggested that he might secure a circus tent, but supposed that she would only act in a first-class theatre. "Go ahead," said she, "wherever Sarah Bernhardt acts is a first-class theatre."

Speaking of singing we realize that the singer's essentials are voice, ear and musical intellect. The voice must be pre-existent, it cannot be created, but its errors can be corrected. Mere bigness of voice makes no musical appeal. History makes us think the record for big voice belongs to Steno, a herald of the Greeks in the Trojan war, whose voice is said to be loud as that of fifty men shouting together.

A bass singer, whose name is Cherone, of the Paris opera, who lived toward the end of the eighteenth century, who in early life had been a blacksmith, is said that, by his blowing into a drinking glass could crack it, and by singing into it in his mighty upper "D" could burst it. The biggest and noblest voice that this twentieth century has listened to was Edouard de Reszke's.

The musician of today is usually exceedingly versatile in his activities, but in former times it was too common for them to be confined to an absurdly narrow and one-sided outlook on life, and to take little interest in anything outside of their own particular specialty.

An amusing example of this was

EXIT THE WIND- JAMMER

The latest available figures, says a London correspondent, show a remarkable declension in the sailing craft now afloat on the world's oceans. The old windjammer seems at last to be steadily slipping away into the limbo of dead things. Taking vessels over a hundred tons burden, within a period of eight years—the roll has fallen from 7,099 to 5,082—and the gross tonnage represented has decreased by about one million and a quarter tons. It appears to be a general symptom irrespective of flag/loom. In 1912, of sailing ships the British Empire possessed in commission 1,430, the United Kingdom 755, and the United States 1,358. These respective figures in 1920 are 1,032, 438, 1,316. Nevertheless, in spite of a falling total of sailing ships, the U. S. sailing vessels over an actually increased tonnage. The Americans are building large iron and steel wind-jammers still. Fewer than a hundred large ocean-going sailing ships now float the British flag. The submarine and the war boom in sea piracy brought a passing flicker of life into sails, but the slump in present freights once more brings oblivion within sight. Now that there is no coal going to South America from our home ports, the main business of sails on the sea has ended.

It is rather sad. Soon the larger sailing vessels will be only the pleasant memory of "ship's fair good when the sea." The time approaches when no more with Poppo, an eccentric violinist, at one time fashionable teacher in Paris and London. Living in Paris at the time of revolution, although perfectly inoffensive, he was denounced as a suspect and brought before the tribunal for trial. The following dialogue took place between him and the president of the tribunal. What is your name? Poppo, he answered. What do you do? I play violin. What were your activities during the reign of the tyrant? I played the violin. And nowadays? I play the violin. And if the republic have need of you what will you do? I will play the violin. Poppo was acquitted.

"We shall see her tiering canvas like sheeted silver spread,

The impression or influence that musicians leave behind them is little realized by themselves and we certainly do not know to what extent of trouble, difficulty or shortcoming some of these musicians worked under. Think of the beautiful music of Greig, much of it written while he had the use of one lung only. Schubert, whose artistic career lasted but seven years, was the most miserably poor of all musicians, yet he is regarded as the greatest song writer, producing the most beautiful melodic phrasing.

TOURIST BUSINESS IS BEST PAYING TRAFFIC

Should Be Better Developed.

On the whole, the best paying traffic for this Province, is the tourist traffic. A larger per cent of the money received therefrom is clearer gain, than any other business that can be carried on. It was once the case that those who came here from the States were just plain folks who wished to enjoy a quiet time at some country farm, with a comfortable bed and a plain sensible fare. This sort of tourist is now largely a thing of the past, and he has been succeeded by wealthier and more strenuous type—men and women who want the best of everything, who desire to have all the elegancies and refinements that can be supplied, and are willing to pay for them, as well as for trips all over the Province either in their own or a hired car. To adequately meet this traffic the hotel accommodations will have to be extended and improved, and a fuller programme of pleasures and sports be provided. And such things would pay, and they are the investment. The great road building campaign now being carried on throughout Nova Scotia will put this Province in a condition to encourage motor traffic to the uttermost, for good roads are among the greatest attractions which a country can offer to visitors from abroad.

Nova Scotia is now well known to Americans and for many years citizens of the Great Republic have been spending their summer vacations here and a number of our valley and coast towns have fared well by their visit. The traffic we have had, however, is microscopically small compared to what this country can accommodate if the right steps were taken without loss of time. Switzerland, it is claimed by those who ought to know; sees some scores of millions of dollars a year as a result of its annual tourist traffic. Of course we have no Alps, with their snow-capped peaks and wondrous glaciers; neither are we placed right in the switching centre of a densely populated continent; but we have beautiful valleys, countless beautiful lakes, and some of the most extensive forests, and a splendid seashore of a thousand miles or more in length with some of the finest beaches in the world. To the south of it also is a vast and wealthy population, a large part of whose territory is dotted with very hot and sunny spots with no thermal relief day or night.

Nova Scotia has cool nights blessed for sleep all the year around—a circumstance that has been the salvation of many a weary body and mind depressed by the high summer heat of the South. Nova Scotia has many resources: it has coal—it has iron, lumber, fine agricultural land, and coast waters swarming with fish; and besides all things—it is a tourists' paradise for at least four months of the year.

This latter fact may ultimately prove the most important of all, if the right courses are taken to develop the possibilities involved. King George has entered the grape business. The Hampton Court Gardens there is a famous vine which this year bore more than 600 bunches. The grapes were offered to the public in baskets made by blind soldiers and brought $1.25 a pound. The demand was so great that it could not begin to be supplied. Formerly all the grapes were reserved for the King's personal table.

The children of Dr. Hoffa, a New York oculist, never have to ask where they were born, for they were given as names their place of birth. Thus three were called Portland, Boston and Harlem, but the last, being born in the same city as his Harlem brother, was given the name of Lastin.

CAPT. MARTY WELCH WAS BORN IN DIGBY

Capt. "Marty" L. Welch, the Gloucester master picked to sail the Esperanto in the international race of fishing schooners, is well known in Boston. Miss Hildred C. Welch, his daughter, who is a graduate nurse, was trained at Fenway Hospital, Newbury St., receiving her degrees there three years ago.

Miss Helen M. Welch, another daughter, is in the second year of her training at another local hospital. A son, Thomas, graduate of Gloucester High School, pitcher of St. John Preparatory School baseball team last season, from which institution he was graduated in June, is at present staying with an aunt in Lexington and is to enter M. I. T. in January.

"Marty" himself, still comparatively young and full of vigor, is very well known to mariners and business men along the Boston waterfront, for it has been to this port that much of his biggest catches have been brought.

Three years ago Capt. Welch and his men landed a 110,000-pound catch of mackerel, the biggest for that season. He was born in Digby, N. S. 53 years ago, and sailed before he was ten. The traffic we have had, however, is microscopically small compared to what this country can accommodate if the right steps were taken without loss of time. Switzerland, it is claimed by those who ought to know; sees some scores of millions of dollars a year as a result of its annual tourist traffic. Of course we have no Alps, with their snow-capped peaks and wondrous glaciers; neither are we placed right in the switching centre of a densely populated continent; but we have beautiful valleys, countless beautiful lakes, and some of the most extensive forests, and a splendid seashore of a thousand miles or more in length with some of the finest beaches in the world. To the south of it also is a vast and wealthy population, a large part of whose territory is dotted with very hot and sunny spots with no thermal relief day or night.

Capt. Welch arrived at his Gloucester home, 31 Cleveland St., a week ago, after a successful trip to the Georges Banks, and he is now sharing the proceeds of a good mackerel catch.

Capt. and Mrs. Welch, who was Margaret's mother, had seven children. "Marty" died valiantly at Belleau Wood and his mother had in mind a journey to that locality to attempt recovery of the body for American burial.

Everett P., the eldest son, was attached to the Naval Aviation Service in the World War and did duty overseas. He narrowly escaped death by falling from an airplane while flying above Chatham early in 1919. His sister, Miss Hildred, nursed him back to health and he is now holding a responsible railroad post in the Canadian Northwest.

Lawrence and Louis Welch, twins aged 17, and 12-year-old Frank, the family "baby," are at the Gloucester home, the twins attending high school.

Capt. Welch has given up winter trips. Capt. William Welch, a brother, is master of a freighter plying between Boston and France, and John Welch, a Florida business man, is another brother.—Boston Globe.

Contribute to Nova Scotia's Great Epic of the Sea

IN less than two weeks two ships swifter than those fabled of the Argonauts, will spread their silver sails and race to the seas rim drawn at the mouth of Halifax Harbor in a contest between the "Esperanto," of the Gloucester fishing fleet, flying the stars and stripes, and the "Delaware," of the Lunenburg fleet, proudly carrying the Union Jack—a contest, whose story will be told in the pages of this paper, and whose merriment and merriment of the Grand Banks for a hundred years.

International in character it is a race which will overshadow in world interest the struggle of the fair weather craft off Sandy Hook for America's Cup.

Full-blooded Nova Scotians have pledged themselves to raise the necessary funds to carry out the project. The winter takes $5,000 and a silver cup donated by the Halifax Herald and The Evening Mail.

From coast and inland towns comes the cheering message: "This for the pride of the people."

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

This is a Short Letter, But It Proves the Reliability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Bothwell, Ont.—"I was weak and ran down, had no appetite and was nervous. The nurse who took care of me told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's 'Vegetable Compound,' and now I am getting strong. I recommend your medicine to my friends, and you may use my testimonial."

Mrs. W. J. Brady, R. R. 2, Bothwell, Ont.

The reason why Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills is because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old-fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are constantly testifying to its strengthening, curative influence, and as it contains no narcotics or harmful drugs it is a safe medicine for women.

If you want special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read, and answered by women only.

THE JEWISH PEOPLE

Only 15,438,000 Altogether All Over the World.

The population of the earth just before the war, according to statistical authorities, was 1,600,000,000 and though the loss of life in the war has been very great, the Jewish population is inclined to think that this has been offset by the general increase. So, when it is stated that David Tietz, the Jewish statistician, has estimated the present number of Jews in the world to be 15,438,000, it is not surprising that the percentage of Jews to the world's population is approximately 1 in 100. If this is so, it would seem that, all things considered, they are very much heard from. According to the figures presented by the Cincinnati weekly, the Hebrew population of the world is distributed as follows:

Poland	3,500,000
Ukraine	3,300,000
United States	1,000,000
Russia (including Siberia)	900,000
Rumania	650,000
Germany	540,000
Hungary	450,000
Czechoslovakia	450,000
British Isles	300,000
Austria	250,000
Lithuania	250,000
Jugo-Slavia	200,000
Africa (excluding Morocco, Tunis, and Algeria)	170,000
France	150,000
Algeria and Tunis	150,000
Arabia	130,000
Greece	120,000
Holland	110,000
Argentina	110,000
Canada	100,000
Turkey	100,000
Switzerland	100,000
Australia	20,000
European countries (not separately enumerated)	200,000
Asiatic countries (not separately enumerated)	100,000
American countries (not separately enumerated)	30,000

Where Men Are Welled.

We have gone far along the road of feminine emancipation, but we have still a long way to go before we undertake the stage reached by the wild Tatars of the tropical desert, says Answers. Among the Tatars, a woman's way is absolute. She does not rule by infectious whetting, but outright command, and though our own women may have the men twisted round their little fingers, the Tatars ladies can only be said to have them well under their heel. Among the Tatars, the woman shows her face to all the world; it is the men who go coyly veiled. Descended entirely through the feminine line, and what little teaching is given to the young is given by the women.

In order to obtain a wife a man has to pay a price that, in view of the Tatars' standard of wealth, is nothing less than sheer profiteering. Indeed, the ladies have put on the new gown so tightly that the young man who keeps to the narrow path of honesty and pursues the only peaceful occupation of camel-rearing, and carrying goods for the Arab traders—will have, for force, to remain a bachelor, as these occupations will never yield him sufficient surplus to provide him with his marriage portion.

Consequently, the young bloods are forced to join the razzle-dazzle, or robbing raids, which have destroyed the trans-Saharan trade, in order that they may amass the rapacity of their lady loves. The ladies are quite aware as to the source of the dowries their husbands receive, and, indeed, not infrequently, it is "the woman in the case" who decide upon the right amount and place for the raids. The tribe brought by the adoring husband becomes the absolute property of the wife, and the stick he carries and the wooden box in which he puts what his wife gives him are all the personal property the male Tatars possess, and all he retains, should the lady divorce him.

A GOOD RECORD.

The Yarmouth Grace & Ruby, which began her launching on Tuesday, completed another successful voyage on Wednesday. The ship, which was launched by Capt. Wm. Murphy, has a record of 100,000 lbs. of fish, Yarmouth-South, fitting for the winter haddock. With her last trip Capt. Murphy reached that command and is now taking a well-earned vacation, after which he will take charge of the fitting and equipping of the new ship, Grace & Ruby. The crew for the new ship took charge of the Grace & Ruby, he has maintained the splendid record which he has made for himself during the several years he has been sailing fishing schooners out of that port. Since last October, or for twelve months past, the Grace & Ruby has made the record stock of $76,000, of which $61,000 has been rolled in since the vessel commenced halibut work. The crew for the same, paid made a total share of $1,400 or $1,100 per man, since March. The foregoing is an exceptional record for any schooner fish fishing out of a Provincial port and holds well in comparison with many made out of the United States fish ports. The Grace & Ruby, which was built by her owner, Capt. Murphy, has a record of 100,000 lbs. of fish, Yarmouth-South, fitting for the winter haddock. With her last trip Capt. Since last October, or for twelve months past, the Grace & Ruby has made the record stock of $76,000, of which $61,000 has been rolled in since the vessel commenced halibut work. The crew for the same, paid made a total share of $1,400 or $1,100 per man, since March. The foregoing is an exceptional record for any schooner fish fishing out of a Provincial port and holds well in comparison with many made out of the United States fish ports. The Grace & Ruby, which was built by her owner, Capt. Murphy, has a record of 100,000 lbs. of fish, Yarmouth-South, fitting for the winter haddock. With her last trip Capt. Murphy reached that command and is now taking a well-earned vacation, after which he will take charge of the fitting and equipping of the new ship, Grace & Ruby. ## A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS

I wonder if the S. P. C. A. also includes human beings. My ire was greatly aroused, not long since as I was ambulating about town, to see a woman, whether mother or maid I am not prepared to say, actually driving two tiny little girls across a street and along the walk. She was switching them and they were screaming! Probably they were very bad little girls but their little faces did not look it and I could not see how any woman could have the heart to strike their tender flesh. I'm a very tender hearted old man I dare say and even my dog is well aware that no offense on his part would cause me to strike him across the shoulders with a switch even were there no S. P. C. A. to prevent me, but if I did not let him be big enough to bite me in protecting himself whereas these little tots were utterly defenseless and that woman presumably had every right in the world to correct them in that harsh manner—if she knew no better. They were not my children and even had the car I was occupying not been going as fast I knew I had no business to stop and interfere as I could have they been mere animals, but believe me my heart was often ached over the matter since, and I find myself wondering what their offence could possibly have been and if it was the way they were usually treated, and if there are many more mothers in this enlightened age who feel they must beat goodnights into those of whom Christ said "of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

I know a father who once thought that every childish offense of his son must be punished with the rod and he lived up to his convictions. That son grew up to hate his father and ran away from home at a very tender age—but I fail to see that he made a better man than many boys who have been more tenderly admonished and who are not compelled to hate their parents because of ill treatment.

Surely the time is past when parent or teacher must resort to corporal punishment except in very extreme cases. If a man strikes me, my most natural impulse is to strike back and all the innate ugliness of my being is instantly aroused. If he is too big for me to strike in return, my temper must sooner or later find vent on some other being who is not too big. So it is with the tiniest child. Though he soon learns it is useless to try to avenge himself on his angry, and to him gigantic, parent or teacher, all the evil in his nature is stirred to such an extent that he must vent it somehow or some where, and consequently his pet kitten, his dog or baby sister present gets a whack or a kick and every one wonders why some is so highly tempered. How truly children reflect their surroundings! Surround them with tenderness, gentleness sunshine and love and their natures will absorb and reflect it as does the fairest flower, the dew and the sun.

CURTAILING WASTE IN WATER SUPPLY

With Winter Near At Hand Carelessness Should Be Eliminated.—Too Much Water Wasted.

Much evidence is manifest throughout Canada of the necessity of immediate action to curtail waste in water supply systems. Many newspapers throughout the Maritime Province have taken up this matter lately, and the Courier is of the opinion that before cold weather sets in that the Town Council should take the matter of curtailing waste in the water supply under consideration and have steps as far as possible taken to prevent all unnecessary waste. During the past few years G. A. Vye, the chairman of the water and sewerage department, has been active in having "water waste" curtailed, but a semi-annual tour of the houses of the town should be made to inspect the water taps and so prevent a great waste of water, by compelling those who have defective taps to make same good. The coming winter, with its scarcity of coal, makes it essential to call for measures curtailing the waste of water that at any time in the town's history.

G. A. Johnson, Consulting Engineer, New York City, asserts that, as an integral part of the program of conservation, water waste prevention is of cardinal importance. The saving that can be effected by intelligent and persistent effort in this direction is not sufficiently appreciated.

Hazen, in his book "Meter Rates for Water Works," says in part: "When a water works system is first installed all the plumbing fixtures in houses are new and they are in general reasonably tight; people will ordinarily draw only the amounts of water that they need, and waste is comparatively small in amount. As time goes on, rust, corrosion, the hardening of rubber valves, and other changes result in leakage from plumbing fixtures. Small leaks running constantly make little impression on people who do not realize their significance. Yet a leaky faucet may waste without attracting attention as much water as would supply twenty families."

"As time goes on, people become accustomed to the waste of water in their home and indifferent to it; this is the experience of American cities that the consumption always increases more rapidly than the population. It may be a long time before the output becomes double the legitimate use; but after that point is reached, the rate goes on with greater acceleration until three-quarters of all the water that is furnished is wasted."

"The only limit to the increase is that a time comes when the new works required to supply the ever-increasing waste becomes so large and cost so much to build, that the burden cannot be further borne."

It does not require 100 gallons of water daily to cleanse the person and surroundings of the average citizen, carry away his sewage, cook his food and provide him with drink, or to furnish his share towards the water needs of the industries in his community. The New York water authorities seem to think that 80 gallons per capita is enough water for all the domestic, municipal and industrial needs of that city. There seems to be no good reason why one city should have an actual water consumption record of 70 or 80 gallons per capita daily, and another of approximately the same size and industrial activity show a water consumption of three times that amount. And yet such occurrences are not uncommon.

THE MILKING OF COWS

Shall cows be milked twice or three times a day? The average reader this may seem of small concern. To the farmer and dairymen it is a question of considerable interest. Tests have recently been made in Nova Scotia, Quebec, and Ontario. Professor Barton of Macdonald College says that it has been found from the standpoint of economy and safety that a cow giving 60 lb. of milk a day should be milked three times. Both Professor Truman of the Nova Scotia Agricultural College and Professor Barton are agreed, however, that unless the order is over distended there is little or no advantage to be gained by milking three times a day. These authorities are quoted in the September number of The Agricultural Gazette of Canada. Professor Wade Toole also contributed a solution of the same problem by giving results of tests made at the Ontario Agricultural College. The tests are to be continued and Professor Toole hopes to be able to give a more definite opinion another year than he does at present. In the meantime he shows that three high-class pure-bred cows gave more by three than by twice milking a day. His present conclusions however are the same as of those Professors Barton and Truman.

like and happy as it can be made. Contributions of money or gifts may be sent to the Medical Superintendent, Nova Scotia Sanatorium, Kentville, and all will be duly and gratefully acknowledged. Those who prefer to send parcels to individual patients may procure the names on application.

We especially ask that you send general gifts for the Christmas time for us to receive them not later than December 15th, if possible, so that we may know what we have to buy, before the last-moment rush, when shops are "sold out."

We are glad also to be able to tell our friends that we now have a Greenhouse, partly stocked, and that gifts of flowering plants to fill it up will be most acceptable.

FISH PRICES BOUND TO REMAIN HIGH

Trawlers Operating Under Increased Expenses.

"It is almost impossible for any change whatever to be made in the way of reducing the price of fish," stated Walter F. Leonard, president of Leonard Fisheries, Ltd., when asked on Saturday whether or not he considered there was any possibility of a recession of prices in that particular line. "Fishing material is as high as ever, and gasoline, which is one of the main stays is somewhat increased in price. There are four steam trawlers operating in Canada at the present high level. Judging from recent reports, it is quite possible that there will be a higher price demanded for coal in the near future; in fact, possibly this increase may become effective within two weeks, and as coal is another essential in the working of a trawler, this means a further increase in the cost of operations."

THE VALUE OF TRAP NESTS

(Experimental Farm, Note.)

Out of the many styles of trap nests, the Trapper type, now being used at the Experimental Farm, Nappan, has proven to be very satisfactory.

If any of our readers are not familiar with the construction of this nest, we would be very pleased to have them write us for a sketch of its construction.

Wherein lies the value of trap nests? Their value is four fold. First, it is a means of securing the individual records, secondly, it shows up the "boarders," thirdly, it enables one to keep a pedigree stock established. Fourthly, they have an economic value.

It is very apparent that by using the trap nest, one gets the individual records of each bird and that, from these, the boarders are easily found, and only one profitable fowl kept. Furthermore, the outstanding birds can be selected and their progeny used. In this way one can raise the standard of production very materially.

It may not seem so apparent that the trap nest has an economic value, for at a first glance it would appear that more labour and expense has been added to the poultry work. A few figures taken from data compiled at the Experimental Farm, Nappan, N. S. During the past ten months obtained by the trap nest, out of a pen of 53 White Leghorns, 22.6 per cent. of the pen of 53 White Leghorns, will answer this.

Out of the 53 Rocks, 22.6 per cent. laid less than 100 eggs in the ten months, their average being 7.14 dozen, which, at the average market price of $2.00 per dozen, would realize $3.57. It cost $2.81 for feed alone, thus leaving a balance of 76 cents. The remaining 77.4 per cent of the birds produced an average of 10.95 doz. per bird, realizing at 50 cents per dozen $5.48 at the cost of $2.81 for feed, thus leaving a balance of $2.67 per bird. Therefore a hundred birds like the former would only give a profit of $76.00 over the cost of feed, 100 like the latter would give a profit of $267.00.

Out of the 53 White Leghorns 37.7 per cent. laid less than 100 eggs in the ten months, their average being 6.3 dozen per bird. These valued at 50 cents per dozen, give $3.15, and deduct cost of feed $2.81 per bird leaves a balance of 34 cents. The 62.3 per cent over the 100 egg mark laid an average of 10.9 doz. per bird at 50 cents realized $5.45 less $2.81 for feed, leaving balance of $2.64 per bird.

Now it cost practically as much to keep the poor hens as it did the good ones, and from the foregoing figures one can easily see the value of trap nests as a means of increasing the profits of our poultry plants and that one will be well paid for the extra labour and expense.

EARLY-DAY OFFICIAL IN LAST REST.

One of The State's Oldest Masons Dies After Seventy Years In Los Angeles.

Funeral services for W. W. Robinson, 86 years of age, 117 South Olive street, who resided in Los Angeles for seventy years and was one of the oldest masons in California, will be conducted at the W. M. Brown chapel, at 2 p. m. next Monday, by the past master of Pentapla Lodge, No. 202, F. & A. M. Mr. Robinson died Thursday night at his home.

Born at Digby, Nova Scotia, he came to Los Angeles in 1850. He was the first man initiated into Pentapla Lodge, which is the second oldest in the city. For thirty-five years he served continuously as an officer for the lodge, until too aged longer to perform his duties.

After engaging in the lumber trade here in the early '50's, Mr. Robinson was for many years active in public affairs. For sixteen years he was the City Clerk. He also served as private secretary to Mayor Royce and to Mayor Hazard and was among the most active framers of the first city charter.

Shortly after the Civil War, when a project was launched for the laying of a cable across Bering Straits, Mr. Robinson joined the expedition that did the first work. While the party was in the north, the first Atlantic cable was successfully laid and the Siberian venture was abandoned.

Of late years Mr. Robinson has resided at the Olive-street address with a daughter, Mrs. Margaret West. Another daughter, Mrs. Lucy Devine, lives at Alhambra.

Following the Masonic services, Monday, the body will be cremated at the Los Angeles Crematory.

English women smokers are turning from cigarettes to pipes. The principal cause for the change is the advice of physicians, who tell the women patients that if they must smoke—it is healthier to use pipes and cigars than cigarettes. One well-dressed girl at a promenade concert pulled a briar pipe from her bag and lit it in the middle of the concert, recently.

Copyright, 1915, 1916, by Metropolitan Magazine.

Evening after evening passed while William sat dreaming painfully of Mr. Parlier's porch, but in the daytime, though he did not literally make his while the sun shone, he at least gathered a harvest somewhat resembling hay in general character.

Thus, one afternoon, having locked his door to secure himself against intrusion, William seated himself at his writing table and from a drawer therein took a small carved box, which he unlocked, placing the contents before him upon the table. In the box were:

A faded rose; several other faded roses, disintegrated into leaves; three withered "four leaf clovers"; a white ribbon still faintly smelling of violets; a small silver shoe buckle; a large pearl button; a small heart-shaped tortoise shell hairpin; a cross section from the heel of a small slipper; a stringy remnant, probably once an improved wreath of daisies; four or five withered dandelions; other dried vegetation of a nature now indistinguishable.

His gentle eyes showed his emotion.

CHAPTER VII.

Progress of the Symptoms.

WILLIAM'S writing table was beside an open window, through which came an insistent whirring, unagreeable to his mood, and looking down upon the sunny lawn, he beheld three lowly creatures. One was Genesis, cutting the grass; another was Clematis—she had assumed a transient attitude, curiously triangular, in order to scratch his ear—the third was Jane. In one hand she held a little stack of sugar sprinkled wafers, which she slowly but steadily depleted, while the other hand, in an unaccustomed garment of fashion and festivity, Jane stood, in speckless, starched white and a blue sash, watching the lawn mower spout showers of grass as the powerful Genesis easily propelled it across the grass.

Clematis found his ear too pliable for any great sound from his foot. Rising, he put his nose to lead him, with the result that it touched the rim of the last wafer in Jane's external possession.

This incident annoyed William. "Look tier!" he called from the window. "You mean to eat that cake after the dog's had his face on it?"

"It wasn't his face," Jane observed. "Well, if it wasn't his face, I'd like to know what."

"It wasn't his face," Jane repeated. "It was his nose. It wasn't all of his nose touched it either. It was only a little outside place of his nose."

"Well, are you going to eat that cake, I ask you?"

Jane broke off a small bit of the wafer. She gave the bit to Clematis and slowly ate what remained, continuing to watch Genesis and apparently unconscious of the scorching gaze from the window.

"I never saw anything as disgusting as long as I've lived," William announced. "I wouldn't 'a' believed it if anybody told me a sister of mine would eat after."

"I didn't," said Jane. "I like Clematis, anyway."

"To gods!" her brother cried. "Do you think that makes it any better? And, by the way," he continued in a tone of even greater severity, "I'd like to know where you got those cakes. Where'd you get 'em, I'd just like to inquire?"

"In the pantry," Jane turned and moved toward the house. "I'm going in for some more now."

William uttered a cry. These little cakes were sacred. His mother, growing curious to meet a visiting lady of whom, so to speak, she had heard much and thought more, had asked May Parlier to bring her guest for food tea that afternoon. A few others of congenial age had been invited. There was to be a small meal, in fact, for the honor and pleasure of the son of the house, and the cakes of Jane's onslaught were part of Mrs. Baxter's preparations.

William bled him to the pantry with such advantage of longer legs that within the minute he and the wafer appeared in conjunction before his mother, who was arranging fruit and flowers upon a table in the living room.

William returned to the stained glass attitude of one bearing gifts. Overhead his hand, hands, fingers, and feet were laden with small cakes and wafers, for which Jane was silently but repeatedly and systematically jumping.

Even under the stress of these efforts her expression was cool and collected. She maintained the self-possession that was characteristic of her.

Not so with William. His cheeks were flushed, his eyes indignant. "You see what this child is doing!" he demanded. "Are you going to let her ruin everything?"

"Ruin?" Mrs. Baxter repeated absently, refreshing with fair water a bowl of flowers upon the table. "Ruin?"

"Yes, ruin!" William was hotly emphatic. "If you don't do something with her it'll all be ruined before Miss Pratt before they even get here!"

Miss Pratt laughed. "Set the pan down, Willie."

"Set it down?" he echoed incredulously. "With that child in the room and grabbing like?"

"There!" Mrs. Baxter took the pan from him, placed it on a chair and with the utmost coolness selected five wafers and gave them to Jane. "I'd already promised she could have five more. You know the doctor said Jane's digestion was the best he'd ever understood. They won't hurt her at all, Willie."

This deliberate misinterpretation of his mother's use of the word for William to speak. "Do you think," he began hoarsely, "do you think?"

"They're so small too," Mrs. Baxter went on. "She probably wouldn't be sick if she ate them all."

"My heavens!" he burst forth. "Do you think I'm worrying about?" He broke off, unable to express himself save by a few gestures of despair.

Again finding his voice, and a great deal of it, he demanded: "Do you realize that Miss Pratt will be here within less than half an hour? What do you suppose she'd think of the people of this town if she was invited out expecting decent treatment and found two-thirds of the cakes eaten up before she got there and what was left of 'em all paved over and chewed up lookin' from some wretched child?"

"Now, Willie," said Mrs. Baxter gently, "you'd better go up and brush your hair again before your friends come. You mustn't let yourself get so excited."

"Excited?" he cried incredulously. "Do you think I'm excited? Ye gods! He smote his hands together and in his despair of her intelligence would have flung himself down upon a chair, but was arrested halfway by simultaneous loud outcries from his mother and Jane.

"Don't sit on the CAKES!" they both screamed.

Saving himself and the pan of wafers by a supreme contortion at the last instant, William decided to remain upon his feet. "What do I care for the cakes?" he demanded contemptuously.

He looked at his mother and Jane. "What do I care for the cakes?" he demanded contemptuously.

Middle Aged Women

Women should take warning from such symptoms as heat flashes, shortness of breath, excessive nervousness, irritability, and the blues—which indicate the approach of the inevitable "Change" that comes to all women nearing middle age. We have published volumes of proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest aid women can have during this trying period.

Read About These Two Women:
Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run-down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. Gossard, 222 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Urbana, Ill.—"During Change of Life, in addition to the annoying symptoms I had an attack of grippe which lasted all winter and was in a weakened condition. I felt as times that I would never be well again. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for women passing through the Change of Life, so I told my doctor I would try it. I soon began to feel better and the annoying symptoms disappeared and my Vegetable Compound has made me a well, strong woman so I can do my own housework. I cannot recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly to women passing through the Change of Life."—Mrs. J. H. Haines, 1316 South Orchard Street, Urbana, Ill.

to see her. They all knew her except Miss Pratt, perhaps, and Mrs. Baxter paused; then she asked absently, "By the way, haven't I heard somewhere that she likes to talk baby talk?"

"Upon this a tromper passed over William, after which he became rigid. "You ask a lady to your house," he began, "and even before she gets here, before you're even near, you pass judgment upon one of the one of the noblest!"

Mrs. Baxter laughed, and then, probably a little out of patience with him, she gave way to that innate mischief-mongering in such affairs which is not unknown to her sex. "You see, Willie, if Miss Pratt pretends to be a cunning little girl it will be helpful to Jane to listen and learn how."

William uttered a cry. He knew that he was struck, but he was not sure how or where. He dashed from the room. Near the open front door he came to a sudden halt, and Mrs. Baxter and Jane heard him calling loudly to the disheveled Genesis. "Here! You go cut the grass in the back yard and, for heaven's sake, take that dog with you!"

"Grass already cut round back," responded the grumpy voice of Genesis. "Cut all 'at back yard's maw'nin'."

"Well, you can't cut the front yard now. Go around in the back yard with the dog."

"Maw'nin' maw'nin' 'at back yard! Ole Clem ain't trouble nobody!"

"You hear me?" William shouted. "You do what I say at once!"

Genesis launched a cry. "I got my grass to cut. Who pay me my wages? At's my boss. You ma say, you sit all 'at lawn mowed p'ro' sundown?"

No, said Mrs. Baxter, she was not on my 'cause I got all my time good 'at took up."

Once more William presented himself faithfully to his mother and Jane. "Max! I just kind of ask you to look out in the front yard? I want you to look at Genesis."

"I'm familiar-with his appearance," said Mrs. Baxter. "Why in the world do you mind his cutting the grass?"

William groaned. "Do you honestly want guests coming to this house to see that awful old dorky out there and know the kind he'll be to our friends we employ? Ye gods!"

"Why, Genesis is just a neighborhood outdoor dorky, Willie. He works for half a dozen families besides us."

"Yes," he cried, "but a lady that didn't live here wouldn't know that! Ye gods! What do you suppose she would think? You know what he's got on!"

"It's a sort of sleeveless jersey he wears, Willie, I think."

"No, you don't think that!" he cried, with great bitterness. "You know it's not a jersey! You know perfectly well what it is, and yet you expect to keep him out there when—when one of the—of the noblest—when my friends arrive! And they'll think that our dog out there, won't they? When intelligent people come to a house and see a dog sitting out in front they think it's the family in the house's son, don't they?"

William paced the room. "Ye gods! What do you think Miss Pratt will think of the people of this town when she's invited to meet a few of my friends and the first thing she sees is a nigger in his undershirt? What'll she think when she finds that child's mother? And that's what she'll be to have to explain that the dog in the front yard belongs to the dorky?"

"And probably she wouldn't believe it. And she'd say she didn't own a dog like that! And that's what you want her to see before she even gets inside the house! Instead of a regular gardener in livery like we ought to have and a well-dressed maid or a maid or a footman or something, the first thing you want intelligent people from out of town to see are that awful old dorky and his most contemptible mother and like as not lettin' 'em get out on other people!"

LOOKS fine, Peggy! Bet it's as good as Mother used to make!

"Better, Dick! Your Mother never had a fine sugar like Lantico to make her cakes with. Fine feathers make fine birds, you know, and it takes a fine sugar to make a fine cake. Wait till you taste it."

The quality of Lantico is always apparent. Its sweetness is the quick penetrating sweetness of purest tropical cane. Its fineness imparts fineness to everything it touches—cakes, puddings, pies, sauces, candies, preserves; the costliest product of the pastry-cook's art, the humblest cookie; milder's demitasse, the workman's morning cup of coffee.

Insist on original packages, to be sure of Lantico fineness, full weight, and cleanliness.

NEIGHBORS SEE THE BIG CHANGE

Moncton Woman Receives Many Compliments on Wonderful Improvement Since Taking Tanlac.

"I am a regular walking advertisement for Tanlac; for my neighbors are constantly noticing how much better I look and are asking what I have been taking," said Mrs. Frank Callant, of 227 Dominion Street, Moncton, N. B.

"For three years I had an awful time with indigestion. I had hardly any appetite and after every meal gas formed on my stomach and made me miserable. I had sharp pains and a feeling like lead in the pit of my stomach. I had an unhealthy color and was losing weight and growing weaker constantly. I lost interest in everything, was in very low spirits and my life was a burden to me.

"A number of my friends advised me to try Tanlac and it has put me in shape where I have a splendid appetite and can eat anything I want and am never troubled with a particle. I have gained back the weight I lost and am feeling so much stronger and better that life is a pleasure to me. My friends who used to sympathize with me are now complimenting me on my wonderful improvement. I am still taking Tanlac and always expect to keep a bottle on hand, for I prize it above every medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

SANDY COVE

Mrs. Walter Collins spent a week "recharging" friends at Annapolis and LeQuille.

C. H. Saunders is spending a few days in Halifax taking in the interesting race.

The last journeymen of the season, Mrs. Ellis and son, Roland, of Georgia, also Miss Leanne, of Texas, left for their homes via Boston and New York on Friday last, before spending three months at Bonnie Blue Croft. They mention being delighted with the comfort and beauty of our little village and expect to return in the near future. The romance has been a busy one at Bonnie Blue Croft.

A number of our boys have returned from various farms up the country where they were engaged in picking fruit.

We are sorry to report Mrs. L. Saunders on the sick list.

Mrs. Sophia Campbell and daughter, Miss Alice also friend, Mrs. Abel Perkins, all of Lynn, Mass., recently made their first trip to Sandy Cove, visiting at the home of Mrs. E. H. McKay.

A rather interesting Halloween party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Morhouse on Monday evening. Through the night was dark and guests hovered about the entrance and Jack-O-Lanterns grined, the guests, eighteen in number, interest seemingly without end.

The evening was spent in games of a lively nature, and the prizes won by Mrs. J. Leary, Mrs. C. H. Saunders and Dr. Rice proved to be "Hot to eat."

After a real Halloween supper the guests departed, vowing that they had at least a busy time.

"I suffered with Rheumatism for five years, having it so badly at times I was unable to get up without assistance.

I tried different medicines I saw advertised and was treated by doctors in Amherst, also in my home town, but the Rheumatism came back.

In 1916, I saw in an advertisement that 'Fruit-a-lives' would stop Rheumatism, and took one box and got relief, then I took them right along for about six months and the Rheumatism was all gone and I have never felt it since.

Anyone who would care to write me as regards 'Fruit-a-lives' I would be glad to tell them what 'Fruit-a-lives' did for me.

PREHISTORIC BEASTS

GIGANTIC REPTILES EXISTED
THOUSANDS OF YEARS AGO.

Remains That Have Been Examined by Scientists Indicate That These Animals Were Much More Terrible Than Anything That Has Existed Since the Coming of Man —The Laelaps Was the Most Formidable of All.

NO animals alive to-day on the earth possess weapons at all comparable to those of many of the gigantic reptiles that provided over this country a few million years ago.

Take, for example, the Laelaps.
This creature when alive weighed perhaps two tons and stood about twenty-five feet high as it walked erect, like a kangaroo. It could not walk on all-fours, because its forelegs were relatively very small.

Its hands, however, were armed with huge and sharp claws, which, it is surmised, were used to tear out the eyes of the animals, often much larger than itself, on which it preyed.
The above-mentioned skeleton is mounted in such wise as to represent the beast in the act of devouring the remains of a brotosaur, which in life may have weighed twenty tons.

The Laelaps was probably the most formidable creature that ever existed in the world. Incredibly agile, with the activity of an antelope, it could leap 100 feet at a bound, its vertebrae and leg bones being hollow for the sake of lightness. Its tremendous jaws were furnished with saberlike teeth half a foot long and probably the most claws on its hind feet were employed for tearing open the belly of its luckless victim.

There were in these ancient days many species of carnivorous monsters, mostly built on the kangaroo plan.
They preyed (as do the carnivora of nowadays) on plant-eating animals.
Just as the tiger assails the elephant in the jungle, so did the Laelaps attack the brotosaur or its even larger relative, the Diplodocus.

Brotosaurs and Diplodocus were stupid, helpless reptiles, eight feet or more in length, which browsed in the shallows of lakes. They possessed no weapons of defence, and it is a marvel how they escaped extermination. On the other hand, there were many species, likewise plant-eaters and huge in size, which were formidably armed and also armored, so as to be able to put up a very descent fight if needed.

A typical armored lizard was the huge Auklosaur, whose entire back was covered with ridged plates of impenetrable bone. Low of stature, with a short, blunt head, it carried on the end of its short, heavy tail a great triangular bone, which was used as a weapon, which could be closed over the eyeball. The brute was an animated fortress.

The Stegosaur, about twenty feet long, had the smallest brain of any known vertebrate relatively to its size. But its pelvis it had a sort of secondary brain, ten times as big as the one in its skull, which was a power station actuating its tremendous tail, the latter being armed with two pairs of mighty spikes. One well-aimed blow with those spikes and it was all over with the adversary.
The most remarkable feature of the stegosaur's anatomy, however, was a series of immense plates of bone standing erect along the back of the animal from head to tail. The biggest of them were four feet across, a sheathing of armor protected the body and throat.

By no means so well provided with means of defence was the hadrosaur, which measured thirty feet from the tip of its nose to the end of its tail.
As it walked erect on its huge three-toed hind feet the top of its head was fifteen feet from the ground, a good part of its length being represented by the tail. The head was nearly a yard long and the forehead of its skull was expanded into a broad bask covered with horn, in shape not unlike that of a duck. Its jaws resembled great salad spoons, being appropriately formed for cropping the aquatic weeds on which it fed.

These amazing jaws were furnished with no fewer than 2,000 grinding teeth, arranged, so to speak, in imaginary rows. In each row there were five to sixty rows of teeth, ten to fifteen of them in each row.
One of the formidably armored reptiles was the stryocosaur, the rear part of whose skull extended backward in the shape of a great, flat, after the manner of a dinosaur's hemet. The flat terminated picturesquely in half a dozen long hornlike processes; and the beast's nose carried a mighty horn resembling that of a rhinoceros, but far bigger and more dangerous as a weapon. On the end of the nose was a horny cutting beak, very powerful and not unlike the beak of a snapping turtle, magnified.

Not distinctly related to the stryocosaur was the triceratops, which was as tall as a big elephant and twice as long, including the tail. Its skull, one-third the length of its body, was provided with the same kind of bony "frill," meant for the attachment of the muscles required to hold up the enormous head, which weighed half a ton. It had the same sort of cutting beak; and its head bore three horns—a short one on the nose, and two that were each a yard long on the forehead, projecting forward. The two great horns were sharp as daggers.

That the triceratops was a fighter, and often engaged in combat, is proved by the finding of many broken, and beated bones of reptiles of this species. Evidently they lived to recover from their wounds and fight again another day.

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

By Prof. C. C. Langher, Mus. Bac. Sarala

NO. II—THE HARP.

The name "Harp" is attached to so many of its kind and all the instruments are plucked strings that it is advisable to mention some. The Irish harp is an instrument of the lyre family but having more strings and is only used to play simple melodies and to accompany another instrument. The harp-lute was an instrument of guitar kind and an improvement was made by Edward Licht, who produced this instrument having frets on it and a thumb key was fitted to each string, this key when depressed was to adjust the pitch similar to the modern harp and its pedals.

The harp is one of the most ancient and universal of stringed instruments, and possessed a larger number of strings than the lyre.
The strings were plucked with the fingers. The triangular form of the present harp is very similar to that of the Egyptian and Assyrian harps depicted on the ancient monuments.
The shape gives to us the idea of it being derived from the bow of an archer, for we find the farther back we go that these instruments are bow-like in shape.

We read of the harp in the most ancient and universal of stringed instruments, and possessed a larger number of strings than the lyre.
The strings were plucked with the fingers. The triangular form of the present harp is very similar to that of the Egyptian and Assyrian harps
depicted on the ancient monuments.

The shape gives to us the idea of it being derived from the bow of an archer, for we find the farther back
we go that these instruments are bow-like in shape.

We now come to the more modern times and find the harp now tuned to semitones and has a double row of strings.

The Welsh harp has three rows of strings and is sometimes called the triple harp, the gut strings numbering 28. The outer rows produced the natural tones and the centre row gave the sharps and flats.
The real modern harp has a double action invented by Sebastian Erard about 1810. The modern harp is a graceful orchestral instrument possessing a triangular outline.
It has a straight slender pillar, slanting sounding box and a carved neck connecting the two, both pillar and sounding box rise from a circular base in which eight pedals are arranged in a semi-circle, the com-paratives of this instrument is over octaves. There is a limit to the technique on this instrument as the scales or passages of a chromatic order are almost impossible and even when practicable is ineffective.
Simple chords and arpeggios are the most telling on this instrument.
With but few exceptions what music is suitable for the piano is suitable for the harp.

In the modern double action harp by means of the pedal the strings may be raised two semitones, affording great facility for modulation. The strings are arranged in diatonic scale and turned in flat, the normal scale being B flat.
Each lever or pedal controls two sets of disc from each disc project two pins, the strings pass between the pins, but in pressing the pedal the way down, presses the pin against the string, thereby shortening it or making it one semitone higher, by pressing the pedal entirely down presses the second pin against the string shortening it yet another semitone. The second pin controls the string, but the eighth governs the damper. The voice of the harp possesses great sweetness, as the strings are not plucked sharply, but gives a sweeping motion, producing a stately effect.

DUMB ANIMALS HAVE PRECIPITATED MANY POLITICAL CRISES

HATE THE POLES

Even More Than the French, (They Are Held in Detestation

Sight of a Polish military uniform has almost as much effect upon some German officials as the well known red rag has upon the bull.

This is the experience of Capt. Harmon Rorison, of the Kosciuszko squadron and Virginia, who has been honorably discharged from the Polish army and who recently arrived in Paris from Warsaw. He travelled through Germany en route. There were a number of other Americans on the train.

At the German border customs officials treated them courteously and made only a perfunctory inspection of their baggage. American in civilian dress, had his American passport, and there was nothing to distinguish him from the rest—that is, nothing until a uniformed functionary lifted the lid of the Rorison trunk locker and saw a Polish officer's cap staring him full in the face.

"What are you doing with that?" asked the official. Rorison explained that he had been an officer in the Polish army and had been demobilized a few days before. The official said something which was unintelligible to Rorison and returned to the examination of the contents of the trunk. Article after article was laid upon the platform and when the official unearthed Rorison's uniform he positively goggled Rorison says. Everything was removed. At the very bottom was a knife which some Polish officers, for convenience, wear on their Sam Brown, instead of a sword.

"And why do you keep this?" asked the officer.

"For the next war with Germany," came the reply.

The German threw the knife to the right and the scabbard to the left. It was saved from confiscation by appeal to a higher official.

At the Franco-Prussian border the inspection of luggage again brought official displeasure upon Rorison. The train was held 15 minutes while he repacked.

"Extraction of the Poles from their immediate difficulty seems to have been a terrible blow to German hopes," said Rorison. "The Germans are raging with disappointment. The Poles come first in their hatred and the French second. They don't have enough hate left for England, and their attitude toward Americans is one of friendliness, although they do not care for anyone who has aided Poland."

Montreal is to have a hotel exclusively for business women.

Nova Scotia and Her Arms

A movement is on foot in Nova Scotia for the restoration of the original armorial bearings that province in place of those adopted at Confederation. Most Canadians are unaware that in 1621 King James I. of England, and VI. of Scotland, as King of Scotland, and as a Scottish measure, granted to Sir William Alexander (afterwards Earl of Stirling) the territory now forming the whole of the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, and parts of Quebec and of the present State of Maine, on the sole condition of paying annually "one penny of Scottish money, if so much be demanded," the purpose of the grant being that Sir William might carry out a project he had in mind of making of this vast territory a New Scotland in America, as there was already a New England and a New France.

The story of Sir William Alexander and his efforts to carry out his great project is beside the present purpose. It all came to little enough at the time but bore fruit as we know long afterwards. Royal encouragement to the scheme given by King James was continued and amplified by his son and successor, Charles I., and among other marks of favor the last named sovereign made a grant of arms to Nova Scotia in these terms: Silver, a cross of St. Andrew blue with an encutcheon of the Royal Arms of Scotland, Crest, on a wreath a bunch of laurel and a thistle issuing from two hands, the one hand being in armor and the other naked. Supporters, on the dexter side the Royal unicorn—silver, horned, maned, and hooved gold, imperially crowned, gorge with an open crown and chain affix, a lions primary and by Royal authority to the country and yet to the Knights Baronet of Nova Scotia. Its use by their Order was a different matter altogether and with quite different connotations.

But the mistake referred to accounts no doubt in some measure for what took place in relation to the Provincial coat of arms at the time of Canadian Confederation. The ancient arms were then found "in position" in this Province. They were displayed in the doors of the Provincial building, and are to be seen there still, and in the old Great Seal of the Province. But at the time of Confederation the origin and authority of these arms had been forgotten.

It was thought that the Province had little ground for using armorial bearings which (as was supposed) belonged in reality to an order of Barons. The record was not looked for in the right place, namely, in the Lyon Office in Edinburgh, where it might have been found, and so the College of Heralds in London, supposing no doubt that the field was clear, proceeded to prepare arms and a new seal for Nova Scotia as a Province of the Dominion of Canada, not moved thereby by the Provincial authorities of the day, but in opposition to their wishes. The new Great Seal was received in December, 1857, but was never welcomed nor adopted nor proclaimed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, but pigeon-holed, and left unused for years afterwards.

But even then the ancient arms did not go wholly out of memory. The shield is still to be seen, not only on the old office doors in the Province building, but on old pieces of jewelry of much later date, and the full achievement appears on the Bank of Nova Scotia $10 notes, of the issue of January 2nd, 1918. In this last case the Indian slinger supporter is shown in a sitting posture and the unicorn charging around the dexter side of the shield—the shield itself is of a shape characteristic of the period of debased heraldry and is wrongly marked red! All interesting facts remain that in casting about for a suitable design for its notes the Bank of Nova Scotia selected the ancient rather than the modern arms of the Province. The Historical Societies of Nova Scotia now ask the rectification of the blunder committed when the ancient and lawful arms of Nova Scotia were supplanted by a new and commonplace design of salmon and thistles.

FARM LIFE AS SHOWN IN MOVING PICTURES

Exception Taken To The Way Farm Life Is Set Forth In Moving Pictures.—The General Tone Is One Of Contempt For Country Life.

The Courier has been asked to publish the following comment on "The Farm in Moving Pictures."

Why not give farm life a fair show in the moving picture? The city man is exhorted to go "back to the land." He goes to a moving picture show in which the farm is pictured as a place where a party of joy-riders take refuge when something happens to the car. The farmer is a ridiculous figure with chin whiskers and one suspender. The general tone is one of contempt for country life, of ignorance and flippancy.

To help the movement for better pictures, we present the authors with a plot. Take a boy out of the city into the country, and describe his experience in learning how to farm. The story need not be too serious. There is plenty of room for fun in the mistakes which a city boy will naturally make in learning the care of animals, and the numerous other things that are to be done on a farm. Show the plowing, the seeding, the harvest, the threshing, the pruning and spraying of fruit trees and the gathering of the fruit; the farm animals, their care and use. There is an opportunity for displaying many beautiful and interesting pictures. Do not waste ingenuity on freaks, but tell the story naturally. Bring in the country school and the various recreations of country life. We assure that city men, women and children would be charmed by such pictures. Some would recognize scenes of their childhood. Others would receive a real knowledge of a life with which they were not acquainted.

The fault of many of the authors of films is that they are always after something freakish and abnormal and neglect things that are normal and simple. If they want to point a moral, they depict some lurid scene of crime, some household blasted by fire, father or mother hankering after some other woman or man. They call these "problems," neglecting the problem of making a living and furnishing the house and buying boots for the children to wear to school.

The best way to teach morality is to show the better way, the joy and domestic life, the everyday joys and sorrows of the home.

Other industries besides that of farming could be depicted. Take the building of a house, with all the stages of digging out the cellar, laying the foundation, the work of the bricklayers, carpenters, plasterers, etc. Weave these things into a story with plenty of human interest.

Scenery is usually shown in too hurried a way. Time should be allowed for the eye to rest on the picture and drink in its beauty. At present most of the shows are exciting and nerve-wrecking, much like a glass of stimulant. They might be made restful, stimulating thought and not emotion alone.

It is not a censor that is required so much as a constructive, intelligent mind applied to the moving picture business.

The Canadian curlers who are going to Scotland this winter will not have to worry.

The British Government has decided that it will not publish an official account of the Battle of Jutland.

J. W. Patterson, reputed to be the tallest man in the United States, died of Bright's Disease last Sunday night, at his home in Bloomsbury, Texas. He was seven feet, five inches tall.

Outrages and reprisals follow each other in rapid succession in Ireland. A policeman or a soldier is shot. This is followed by reprisals, and so the war goes on without any indication that there is any end to it.

Four times married and three times divorced, Dr. K. L. Maxwell, of Little Rock, Arkansas, has had but two wives. Through divorce and re-marriage his first wife became his third wife and by the same process his second wife is now his fourth wife.

Mrs. Esther Richardson recently celebrated her 80th birthday by teaching seven history classes in the High School of Hutchinson, Kansas. Moreover, she has been a school-teacher for six of the years—beginning her teaching career in Ohio in 1858, and has taught steadily ever since.

END OF THE WORLD

What the Last Man Will See When Globe Is Enveloped in Ice.

When the sun goes out—a catastrophe that is bound to be—man-kind will have long ago disappeared, inherits Anatole France. "The last inhabitants of earth will be as destitute and ignorant, as feeble and dull-witted as the first. They will have forgotten all the arts and all the sciences. They will huddle wretchedly in caves alongside the glaciers that will then roll their transparent masses over the half-obliterated ruins of the cities where men now think and love, suffer and hope. All the emus and lindens will have been killed by the cold and the firs will be left sole masters of the frozen earth."

The last desperate survivors of human-kind—desperate without so much as realizing why or wherefore—will know nothing of us, nothing of our genius, nothing of love, yet will they be our latest-born children and blood of our blood. A feeble flicker of the regal intelligence of nobler days, still lingering in their dull brains, while for a while yet enable them to hold their empire over the bears that have multiplied about their subterranean lurking places.

Peoples and races will have disappeared beneath the snow and ice, with the towns, the highways, the gardens of the old world. With pain and difficulty a few isolated families will keep alive. Women, children, old men, crowded pell-mell in their noisome caves, will peep through fissures in the rock and watch the sparrow sun mount the sky above their heads; dull, yellow gleams will lit across his disk; like flames playing about a dying brand, while a falling snow of stars will shine on all the day long in the black heavens, through the icy air. This is what they will see; but in their heavy blindness they will not so much as know that they see anything.

One day the last survivor, callous alike to his own fate, will cower to the unfriendly sky the last human breath. And the globe will go rolling on, bearing with it through the silent fields of space the ashes of humanity, the poems of Homer and the august remnants of the Greek marbles, frozen to its icy surfaces. No thought will ever again rise toward the infinite from the bosom of this dead world.

Under the English common law no one has a right to bathe in the sea. This was decided by the courts one hundred years ago, and at attack on the decision at the beginning of this century failed to upset it, the higher court deciding that in the strict legal sense one could fish in the sea, but could not bathe in it.

Announcement is made of the marriage of J. C. Collins, the musical comedy actor, and Lord Alastair Robert Jones Kerr. The ceremony took place privately in London several days ago. The groom is the brother of the Duke of Roxburgh, who in 1903 married, May Goelet, daughter of Ogden Goelet.

WOMAN'S INSTITUTE "RALLY DAY"

Special effort in any of life's activities, leads to greater things accomplished. It is this which makes the difference between the world's work and workers who cease, and ambition, energy and enthusiasm make the difference between the world's work and workers who cease.

It is with this idea of "special effort," and faith in its results, that the Bear River Woman's Institute is assembling, on an urgent appeal to its members for their attendance at a special "Rally Meeting," and asking each to do her individual share in making it one of interest and enthusiasm. At this meeting it is expected, plans will be made for the programme of the regular meetings through the coming winter.

The question is often asked—"What are the times of your organization?" We should have this answer ready—"To be used, and to be active in all things that pertain to the moral, intellectual and social life of our community." We are not usurping the field of other women's organizations; for, with our special charter, we are not confined to any special kind or branch of work, but may include every activity that is endorsed by our own insight and in this way, we work to the needs of our environment.

One of the chief reasons for existence of our organization should be emphasized, it gives to many women who have long been tied by household cares and motherhood, a chance once more to take an active part in the civic, social and intellectual life of an "up-to-date" stirring town, such as ours.

The mothers, who for years have been guarding and rearing in the home, the "new ones," who are to be our future citizens, and as such our most precious assets, have, through this organization, had a chance to make appeals, and quickly and wisely, to the community and to the preserving conditions in the schools entrusted with the training and education of their children.

Our Institute points with pride to its efforts in this direction, and the results in the past have been most gratifying. It is open for all to see. It only needs the spur of our woman's organization, to help to the necessary improvements speedily accomplished.

Another subject of deep interest to not only the women of our town, but to all true citizens, is that of equipping our Academy with the sciences; and our organization has shown its anxiety for such equipment, by sending a delegation of its members to the annual school meeting, to urge the great necessity of such a provision.

The Temperance "Referendum" also entered our energetic list, and during the recent campaign, our Institute gave great assistance to the local committee, both financially and by members efforts, in rolling up a fine majority, finally, on the side of Prohibition.

The field is indeed wide for Women's work, and it is only by the individual efforts, as a woman, and an organization, such as ours, given to her efforts a strength and impetus by the individual efforts, that we can hope to make a mark in the future.

So to our members, I wish to say, what we have done is small in comparison with what we may do, and we will give her the encouragement to make a mark in the future.

Local and General PERSONAL MENTION

St. John's Episcopal Church, Rector A. W. L. Smith, service 3 p. m.

2341. Hally purchased the property formerly owned by the late V. T. Harwick.

The Methodist Ladies Aid Society met on Tuesday afternoon of this week, at the home of Mrs. Thaddeus Davidson.

Father Mackay will preach in the St. Francis Catholic church on the Indian Reserve, on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock.

The Ladies Circle of the Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. Adler B. Clarke on Tuesday evening. A large number were present, and a pleasant evening enjoyed.

The housing condition in Bear River is as acute as in the larger country, owing to the increased staff of Clark Bros. many of whom are unable to procure homes.

We learn that from now on through the winter months, there will be two motion picture entertainments a week instead of three as formerly, these being on Tuesday and Saturday nights.

The annual Harvest Festival and Thanksgiving service was held in St. John's church on Thursday evening, October 28th. Rev. John Reika of Round Hill preached the sermon. The church was appropriately decorated with fruit, vegetables and autumn leaves.

Mrs. Theobald Marshall, of Stormy Beach, Annapolis County, on November 2nd sold seventy-five acres of timber land on the Sibitau road, four miles from Bear River, to Stillman Henshaw, of Valley Line. There is a fine lot of pulpwood on this land. She also recently sold Mr. Henshaw a horse.

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 26th, Royal Division, No. 37, held a very successful dinner and bean supper in Temperance Hall. The proceeds amounted to about $30, which will help to defray the expense of painting the outside of the building, which work has recently been finished.

Obituary

ELIZABETH HARRIS: On October 30th Elizabeth, aged seven years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Harris passed peacefully to the home above. Always frail, and delicate, she had won a place of love and tenderness in the hearts of all who knew her. And may the One who said "Suffer the little children to come unto me" comfort the bereaved ones. The funeral was conducted by Rev. R. S. Gregg, pastor of the Baptist Church on Wednesday afternoon.

BAPTIST RECEPTION. On Friday, October 29th, a reception was tendered by the Baptist Church, Bear River, to its new pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Gregg. The vestry was tastefully decorated for the occasion with spruce and autumn leaves.

After the presentations to the pastor, an address of welcome was made by the Church Clerk, W. W. Clarke, following which an enjoyable programme was rendered by the choir. Addresses were also given by the visiting clergy, Rev. W. J. Wright, Rev. A. W. L. Smith, Rev. Mr. Sleeves and Rev. Mr. McVie. During the social hours a dainty lunch was served by the Ladies of the Church. About 150 were present.

METHODIST CHURCH PLAN OF SERVICES. Preaching at Bear River every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sabbath school at 11:45 a. m. Prayer Service Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. Epworth League Friday at 7:30 p. m. Sabbath afternoon services as follows: 1st Sabbath, Rev. R. S. Gregg, 2nd, Rev. W. J. Wright, 3rd, Rev. A. W. L. Smith, 4th, Rev. Mr. Sleeves, 5th, Rev. ### ADRIANOPOLE

City Is Beautiful Even in Decline.

The decadence of the two great empires, the Ottoman and the Russian, has been a constant theme in the history of the world. The city of Adrianople, a city of eighty odd thousand souls, is still a holy city in fact and in appearance. Romance still abides there.

The Orient is the only place left to Europe where cities seen at close range are beautiful," remarked Jules Verne, a French aviator, while visiting the most beautiful of all mosques, Sinan's masterpiece in Adrianople, the mosque of a thousand windows but one, erected at the order of Sultan Selim II. in the sixteenth century.

The first impression of the city had been one of infinite beauty. Arriving from across the lofty Balkans in an airplane, the city had been seen with a rush, a place of spires and slate domes and red roofs, planted at the intersection of three rivers. It had been a welcome sight. It had come at the end of a four hour ride, and it was journey's end to a tired aviator.

Seen from aloft, the city, surrounded by poplars at its outer rim, its house gardens within the city showing green vines and flowers, its outlying fields bare, aroused memories of Mardin on the mountains, Darabekir by the Tigris and hells of other Turkish cities, always sleeping in beauty, whether visited by sunshine or moonlight.

The longer the stay in Adrianople, the more the charm of this beauty grows, a charm that is as great as of old.

Adrianople is a city that has the tone of country friendship about it, not unlike a county seat of the south. The centre of the agricultural change business of Eastern and Western Thrace, it is frequented by peasants and traders of Turkish, Greek, Bulgarian, Jewish and Armenian nationalities. There is record of but one American ever having done business in the city, and he came from Paris and bought up all the brooms.

While no day knows what the next may bring forth in the way of political strife and crime, to-day the city preserves this tone of friendship and order. Strangers as they go along the streets, or visit the shops, are treated with kindly concern. The Turkish officers salute courteously and there is no hint of hostility in the eyes of the Turkish soldiers carrying their new rifles, recently distributed them by Col. Diefel Tavar Bey. His martial law is administered with gentleness, though there is no doubt that the silken glove hides the mailed fist.

The decadence of Adrianople goes at a dignified pace. There is little or none of the seething squalor and dirt and noise and poverty of Constantinople. There is none of the clamor of Constantinople's street cars and automobiles. There are a few ragged beggar children who beseege the stranger, but for the most part Adrianople endures its shabby gentility with pride and calm. Here there are none of the fallen houses and dusty streets which characterize the majority of the cities of Asia Minor.

Any day the city may surprise the world by tremendous massacre, but meanwhile its life goes on as smoothly as the flow of a river.

Undoubtedly the life of Adrianople is fraught with that deep mystery which seems to cling inevitably to the sinful, idle, sleepy Orient, but this mystery the stranger sees only the charm.

ORIENTAL POETRY.

Walter Byrner, the American poet, seems to have a taste for curiosities in literature. Mr. Byrner is going to China for the purpose of working on an anthology of Chinese poetry. He will endeavor to reproduce in English, not a literal rendering of the poems, but an emotional equivalent, using the English idiom that is as familiar to our ears as the quaint phrases were to the Chinese. His method of procedure is to be very simple. He will be accompanied by Prof. Kiang Kang Hu, formerly head of the Chinese University in Peking and more recently connected with the Chinese Department of the University of California. Prof. Kiang Kang Hu will make a literal translation of the poems that Byrner wants to use, and then the poet will turn the material into English verse.

Of course this is not the first time that Chinese poetry has been turned into its English equivalent. Sometime ago a little volume entitled "170 Chinese Poems" appeared, of which Mr. Arthur Waley was the translator. The collection was a unique one, as several of the poems dated back to seven hundred years before Christ. Mr. Waley did not try to make good poems out of the Chinese verse, but attempted to catch their ideas and their spirit, in a translation that was as near as possible to the original. It was not merely an old scraps of ancient literature that these poems were interesting. Some of them were almost startling in their modernity.

The poets who lived in China were writing delicate satires at a time when our ancestors could think of nothing more humorous than cracking somebody over the head with a stone. A Chinese poet who lived about A.D. 250 wrote a satire entitled "On the Birth of His Son," which sounds not unlike the ironical verses that are now making Siegfried and the other famous poems of marked originality. Here it is:

Families, when a child is born Want it to be intelligent,
I, through intelligence,
Having wrecked my whole life,
Only hope the baby will prove Ignorant and stupid.
Then he will crown a tranquil life
By becoming a Cabinet Minister.

That little poem is not the only amusing bit of satire in the volume. Po Chü-i, who was born somewhere about A.D. 750, had a talent for taking digs in the form of epigrams at other writers. In some ways, his thrusts to right and left make you think of Edgar Lee Masters, except that the Chinese seems to have had a healthier viewpoint. There is a poem by Po Chü-i entitled "The Philosopher"—

"These who speak know nothing;
These who know are silent."
These words, as I am told,
Were spoken by Lao-tzu.
If we are to believe that Lao-tzu
Was himself one who knew,
How comes it that he wrote a book
Of five thousand words?"

Offhand one cannot recall any more pungent and well directed bits of satire by our modern English-speaking poets than the two examples given above from the works of the "Heavenly Chinese," who lived almost before the dawn of our modern civilization.

Playing Cards.
The invention of playing cards has been variously attributed to India, China, Arabia and Egypt, but there seems to be little doubt that they originated in Asia, and were introduced into Europe about the close of the thirteenth century. There is a historical mention of the game of cards in Germany in 1275, in Italy in 1282, but not in France until 1332. In the sixteenth century the manufacture of cards was a flourishing business in England, and under Edward IV. their importation was forbidden to protect the home industry.

The marks upon the suits of cards are believed to have been chosen to represent symbolically the different classes of society. Thus, the hearts denote the clergy, clubs for the soldiery, spade for the serfs, and diamonds for the merchants. In the early French cards the kings were pictures of David, Alexander, Caesar and Charlemagne, representing the monarchies of the Jews, Greeks, Romans and France. The queens were Esther, Judith, Argine and Pallas.

The suits of the earliest German cards were designated by henneg, bells, leaves and acorns. Italian cards had swords, batons, cups and money. The court cards at first were the king, chivalier and knave, the queen being first substituted for the chivalier by the Italians. The English cards in the seventeenth century were embellished with heraldic designs, the king of clubs bearing the coat-of-arms of the pope of Rome, and those of hearts, diamonds and spades being adorned respectively with the armorial device of the kings of England, Spain and France. The club of modern cards derived its form from the trefol, a French design.

Protecting Seals.
The protective measure adopted by the Government for the benefit of the seals in our waters has been entirely successful, as indicated by the great number of animals seen migrating to the Arctic seas. The migration was three weeks earlier than usual, and an unusually large number of animals were noted on their way to the north.

A "Strong" Room.
To prevent thieves from getting at the money vaults by the tunneling method, the foundation of the strong-room of the Bank of England extends for sixty-six feet below the level of the street.

Mutual Feeling.
"Are you a careful driver?" asked the nice old lady.
"Yes," replied the chauffeur.
"I don't want to get hit by a railroad train any more than you do."

Windmill Barbados Super-Fancy Molasses

It is the fruit juice of ripe, Golden Ribbon sugar cane—not crushed by steel, nor cooked by steam—but, as in days of old, it goes through wooden rolls with windmill's aid, and is cooked over the open fire in open kettles.

It takes 100 lbs. of this Golden Ribbon Cane to make one gallon of "Windmill" Barbados. Nature alone gives it its sweetness, flavour and colour.

Nothing added—nothing extracted. Full of the food elements that give heat, energy, and endurance, and well balanced with minerals, fruit salts, that give health to the blood and strength to the body frame.

Yet costs no more than common molasses, or compounds in which there is practically no food value.

No fancy cans to raise the cost—Sold in bulk only.

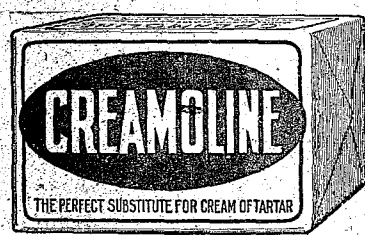

Be sure you get the good, old-process, "Windmill" Barbados—it savors of fruits and flowers of Barbados.

We guarantee Windmill to be absolutely pure and highest grade Barbados Molasses.

Quit Laxatives, Purges; Try NR

NR Tonight—Tomorrow Feel Right

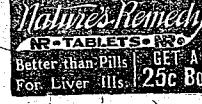

It is a mistake to continually dose yourself with so-called laxative pills. Instead, get the bowels and liver and make constant, steady action.

Why don't you begin right today to overcome your constipation and get your system in such shape that daily purging will be unnecessary? You can do so if you get a box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one each night for a week or so.

NR Tablets do much more than merely cause pleasant easy bowel action. They also mean the cleansing of the digestion as well as eliminative organs. They get the nourishment from all the food you eat, give you a good heavy action, strengthen the liver, overcome biliousness, regulate kidney and bowel action and give the whole body a thorough cleansing out. This accomplished you will not have to take medicine every day. An occasional NR Tablet will keep your body in condition and you can always feel your best.

Try Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and prove this. It is the best bowel medicine that you can get and costs only 25c per box, containing enough to cure three days. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

Iron Clothes With Feet.

In Cairo men employed in the native tailoring establishments iron clothes with their feet. Except for the long handle, the irons are shaped like an ordinary flat-iron, but are larger. A solid block of wood rests on the top of the iron, and on this the men place one foot, holding the iron in the desired direction by means of the handle. For the sake of convenience, ironing-boards are raised only a few inches from the ground, and, however strange the method seems, the work is done well and expeditiously.

An Ingenious Machine.
A machine has been built which will shape woods up to 100 feet in length and three feet in diameter. The timber is set up in the machine and turned at a speed of fifty revolutions a minute, and it is shaped by a cutter head which is electrically driven at the rate of 700 revolutions a minute.

H., and also had the pleasure of visiting the Apollo Quartet in Boston, and of visiting Randolph Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, of Derby, N. H., of which he is an honorary member.

And now let us consider the weather for November.

November, a fertile year for corn. A heavy November snow will last till April. As November, so the following March.

If there's ice in November that will bear a duck.

There's nothing after that sludge and mud.

Thunder in November on the northern lakes indicates a dry winter. The lakes will remain open until at least the middle of December.

As November 21st, so the winter.

If ducks do slide at Hollandside, at Christmas they will swim.

If Christians they will slide at Hollandside.

If leaves of the trees and grape vines do not fall before St. Martin's day (Nov. 11), a cold winter may be expected.

Wind northwest at Martinmas, severe winter to come.

A QUESTION.

Dear Mr. Editor (or Aeronaft):

It is really true that children in our schools are being flogged? If so how long is the town going to let such things go uncorrected?

A TOWER OF CHILDREN.

"BOON FOOLS."

Mentality of a Growing Child May Be Improved.

Thomas Carlyle estimated that London has 4,000,000 people.

"moist fools." While there are many fools and many kinds of them, optimism for the human race says that the world is better than as per London, was exaggerated.

Medical authorities hold that the worst foe of all is the "herd fool."

"If man is born stupid," writes one authority, "his stupidity does not necessarily diminish as he grows older, unless he be a born fool."

In the majority of cases the slow-wittedness, the lethargy of mind and body so characteristic of the "herd fool," is due to the effect of some inefficiency in the brain.

A small gland situated beneath the skin of the child's neck, in immediate proximity to his carotid artery, this gland is known to the learned in these matters as the thyroid.

It is essential to the life of the child, and in an internal secretion or essence which in some mysterious way influences the development, and nutrition of various tissues of the body.

It exerts a profound influence on the brain, and may be said to operate in lubricating the machinery of the mind.

When this secretion is altogether absent growth is stunted, normal brain development is retarded, the bud, the tissues become thickened and coarsened and a condition of idleness is produced.

In the majority of cases the complete absence of the thyroid secretion and a condition of mental retardation is the result. When it is insufficient you get a flooding of all the tissues, the muscles, the nerve cells, etc., with a gummy-like matter which causes thickening with consequent clogging of the organs concerned. Hence muscular movements and thinking are performed slowly and with difficulty. A brain in this condition grows ideas, memories, recollections and judges slowly. Those very colloquial expressions of "thick head" and "fat-head," express the physical basis of the condition very aptly.

A brain insufficiently supplied with thyroid secretion can no more digest and assimilate mental nourishment than can the stomach digest and assimilate food.

If the food is put into it. To make up for this deficiency, thyroid secretion must be supplied from outside. It is not necessary to implant a new thyroid. Medical science can administer to the child the thyroid extract derived from the glands of humbler animals. This, however, must be given only under medical supervision, as the dose must be very carefully graduated in accordance with the age of the subject and degree of thyroid insufficiency that may be present.

"Skilful treatment will then be found to improve the mentality of the growing child by sharpening his wits."

The steamship Aquitania arrived at New York on Saturday from Southampton and Cherbourg with 2,500,000 pounds ($12,367,000) in bullion, consigned to American bankers.

FORTUNES IN SUGAR

Cuba Grows Wealthy Almost Overnight.

Many stories are told of the marvelous prosperity with which fortunes have been made in Cuba in the sugar business.

A young man from Havana, who three years ago was copying clerk in an establishment in Havana at $20 a week, became a millionaire, and, believing that the country offered opportunities, secured a small ten-acre plantation near the town of "Santo Tomas" in Camaguey Province.

The three years ago, the results of the first two years' work were not satisfactory. Two friends of his in Havana were given the opportunity of purchasing a much larger cane plantation in the same district, for which they paid $150,000 and they at once managed at a salary of $500 per month.

Becoming dissatisfied last fall the two friends of the Cuban, offered to sell it to him at a profit of $20,000 to each, permitting him to pay in instalments from the returns from the crop.

Jean de Paillet has brought from the Charles Burrell estate, a house and barn which he immediately repaired for the use of his chauffeur.

The result has been that he has been able to sell all his sugar to the mill at excellent prices, permitting him not only to pay the expenses of the harvesting of the crop, but the entire cost of the plantation, having left in addition some $80,000 in cash. To this the Cuban now receives an offer of $700,000 in cash for the plantation. Thus it may be said that since November 1st, this young man has cleaned up over three-quarters of a million.

A short while ago Don Manuel Biondo, president of the Cuban Cane Corporation, was seated in the office at Central, Yaguajay. A man approached him and asked him to sign a document.

Don Manuel did not at first recognize him, but the man asked him if he did not remember the carman who four years ago used to deliver the wood needed for the kitchen at Central Yaguajay. Don Manuel then recognized him and asked him what he was doing at that time. The reply was that he was growing cane, and upon being asked what his annual production was, he replied: "About 4,000,000 arrobas," sufficient to give him a princely income.

Such a success has been repeated many times. There is hardly a wide, Spanish storekeeper throughout the island of Cuba who, through the cane plantations, has not amassed a fortune.

While these developments have been in progress, the sugar crop, in four years, the sudden jump and tremendous increase in productive power and in wealth-producing capacity have occurred.

Mrs. Baxter managed to obtain his attention. "If you'll go and brush your hair I'll send Genesis and Clematis away for the rest of the afternoon. And then if you'll sit down quietly."

"Quietly?" he echoed. "I'm the only one that is quiet around here!" "There, there," she said soothingly. "Go and brush your hair, and then your collar, Willie. It's all wilted. I'll send Genesis away."

"Collar," he muttered.

"Change it!" said Mrs. Baxter, raising her voice. "It's wilted!"

He departed in a dazed manner. Passing through the hall, he paused abruptly, his eye having fallen with sudden disapproval upon a large, heavily framed, glass covered engraving, "The Battle of Gettysburg," which hung upon the wall near the front door.

Obviously it was a picture feeble in decorative quality. No doubt, too, William was right in thinking it as unworthy of Miss Pratt, as were Jane and Genesis and Clematis. He felt that the must never see it, especially as the frame had been chipped and had a corner broken, but it was more pleasantly effective where he found it than where in his nervousness he left it.

A few lusty jerks snatched the elderly green cords by which it was suspended; then he laid the picture upon the floor and, mounted two at a time, rushed into his own room and confronted his streaked image in the mirror.

Pausing to wipe his hot brow with the same implement, he remembered that some one had made allusions to his collar and hair, whereupon he sprang to the stairs, mounted two at a time, rushed into his own room and confronted his streaked image in the mirror.

CHAPTER VIII.
At Home to His Friends.

AFTER ambitious William found his wet hair plastic and easily obtained the long, even sweep back which he had seen in the magazine which no male person, unless he fulfilled his definition of a man of the world. But there ensued a period of waiting, and an active life by bent collar button. The day was warm, and moisture bedewed him afresh. Beated victory no sooner arrived than he perceived a fatal dimpling of the new collar and was forced to exchange it for a successor.

Voices from below, making polite laughter, warned him that already some of the hidden party had arrived, and as he completed the fastening of his third consecutive collar an ecstasy of sound reached him through the open window—and then, oh, then he began to tremble. It was the voice of Miss Pratt, no less!

He stopped for one heartstruck look from his easement. All in buffy white and heliotrope she was, a blond capture floating over the sidewalk toward William's front gate. Her little white tontony dog, with a heliotrope ribbon snuggled about its neck, bobbed his head over her cuddling arm. A heliotrope parrot shielded her infinitesimally from the amorous sun. Poor William!

Two youths entirely in William's condition of heart accompanied the glamorous girl, while Miss Farcher appeared dimly upon the outskirts of the group, the well known penalty for hostesses who entertain such radiance. Probably it served them right. Miss Pratt's voice came clearly as the chiming of tiny bells, for she spoke whimsically to her little dog in that tinkling childlike fashion which was part of the spell she cast.

"Darlin' Floppit," she said, "wake up! Oo tummlin' to tea potty wis all do drowed up. P'esus Floppit, wake up!"

His heart melting within him, William turned from the angelic sounds of the window. He ran out of the room and plunged down the front stairs. And the next moment the crash of breaking glass and the loud thump-bump of a heavily falling human body resounded.

Mrs. Baxter, alarmed, crossed her self from the tea table round which were gathered four or five young people, and hastened to the front hall, followed by Jane. Through the open door were seen Miss Pratt, Miss Farcher, Mr. John Watson and Mr. Joe Bolt.

Litt coming up the walk, laughing and unaware of the catastrophe which had occurred. And a little distance from the foot of the stairs William was seated upon the prostrate "Battle of Gettysburg."

"It slid," he said hoarsely. "I carried it upstairs with me"—he believed this—"and somebody brought it down and left it lying flat on the floor by the bottom step on purpose to trip me. I stepped on it, and it slid."

"Get up, Willie," Mrs. Baxter urged, and then she beheld ruins other than the wrecked engraving. She sidled a cry. "Willie, did the glass cut you?"

He felt himself, "No'm."

"It did your trousers. You'll have to change them. Hurry!"

Some of William's normal faculties were restored to him by one hasty glance at the back of his left leg, which had a dismantled appearance. A long blue strip of cloth hung there, with white showing underneath.

"Hurry," said Mrs. Baxter. And, hastily gathering some fragments of glass, she dropped them upon the engraving, pushed it out of the way and went forward to greet Miss Pratt and her attendants.

Upward William sped unseen and came to a breathless halt at the top of the stairs.

As it were in a dream he heard his mother's hospitable greetings at the door, and the little party lingered in the hall, detained by Miss Pratt's discovery of Jane.

"Och, twosome tontumsickle did!" he heard the ravishing voice exclaim. "Och, tontumsickle blue sash!"

"It cost a dollar and eighty-nine cents," said Jane. "Willie sat on the cake."

"Och, no, he didn't!" Mrs. Baxter laughed. "He didn't quite!"

"He had to go upstairs," said Jane. And, as the stricken listener shuddered, she added placidly, "He tore a hole in his clothes."

She seemed about to furnish details, her mood being communicative, but Mrs. Baxter led the way into the "living room." The hall was vacated, and only the murmur of voices and laughter reached William.

William leaned upon the banister railing and thought thoughts about Jane. For several long, seething moments he thought of her exclusively. Then, spurred by the loud laughter of friends and the agony of knowing that even in his own house they were monopolizing the attention of one of the noblest, he hastened into his own room and took account of his clothes.

Standing with his back to the mirror, he obtained over his shoulder a view of his trousers which caused him to break out in a fresh perspiration.

Amphibian, which he forced with the handkerchief, and the result was instantly visible in the mirror.

William began a feverish examination of the garments, hanging in a clothes closet. There were two pairs of flannel trousers which would probably again be white and possible when cleaned and pressed. Beside them hung his last year's summer suit of light gray.

Feverishly he brought it forth, thrust off his coat and then, deflected by another glance at the mirror, began to change his shirt again. To the dressing process he decided to straighten the bent collar button. Using a shoeborn as a lever, he succeeded in bringing the flat cap or head of the button into its proper place, but his final effort dislodged the cap from the rod between it and the base, and it flew off into space.

Here was a calamity. Few things are more useless than a decapitated collar button, and William had no other. He had made sure that it was his last before he put it on that day; also he had ascertained that there was none in, or about his father's dressing table. Finally, in the possession of neither William nor his father was there a shirt with an indigenous collar.

At first he did not realize the extent of his misfortune. Of course William searched his dressing table and his father's, although he had been thoroughly over both once before that day. Next he went through most of his mother's and Jane's accessories to the toilet, through trunk boxes, glove boxes, hairpin boxes, handkerchief cases, even through sewing baskets. Utterly he convinced himself that ladies not only use no collar buttons, but also never pick them up and put them among their own belongings. Jane, arriving at his locked door upon an errand, was laden by a thick, unnatural voice to depart.

"Mamma says, 'What in mercy's name is the matter?'" Jane called. "She whispered to me, 'Go on, see what in mercy's name is the matter with Willie, if the glass cut him, after all, and why don't he come down? And why don't you, Willie? We're all having the nicest time!'"

"You g'way!" said the strange voice within the room. "G'way!"

Ten Years After

Ten years ago the first packages of KING COLE TEA were packed and put on the market. The time that has elapsed since then has been filled with hard work and with many difficult situations to be met and overcome. But withal, it has been a period of unquestionable, steady and persistent progress. KING COLE TEA has never looked back. Every year has brought its increase. Today its sale is ten times greater than the first year's business. This is the public's remarkable tribute to the worth of KING COLE TEA. It speaks for unusual service.

VILLAGES THAT GO MAD.

Queer Craves of Country Folks in Some Places.

Quite a fashionable craze has taken hold of the little village of Cerrito, near San Francisco, says Pearson's Weekly. The crazing for spasms with planchets or ouija boards, by which it is claimed spirit messages may be received, has reached such a pitch that many of the inhabitants have gone mad and been tied to the lunatic asylum. As a result, the whole village is to be submitted to an examination by mental specialists.

Small villages are not infrequently subject to crazes. Their life is generally so placid that a new pursuit of unusual interest is apt to take an undue hold upon the population.

A stranger entered a Swiss little village in a remote spot of Switzerland some years ago, seated himself in the inn and produced a chess board. The inn cronies gathered round him, wondering. They had never seen a chess board before, and showed such keenness in learning the game that before long the visitor had incited the whole village with chess mania. Chess men and boards were ordered in large quantities and the time played with chess sets and both men and women neglected their duties in pursuit of it. The village became known in the country as "the village that is chess-mad."

When Halley's comet last appeared an astronomer betook himself to a little village in South America, setting up there an improvised observatory for the purpose of viewing the great star as it streaked in a well defined, and the natives, who knew nothing of telescopes, were intensely interested in his great "magnifying tube."

Ultimately the chief men were granted permission to peer through it at the heavens, and were so delighted with the experience that they induced the astronomer to secure for them a number of small telescopes. This was done, and for a long time afterwards the villagers spent the greater part of their nights in "star gazing."

During the vogue of the "diablo" toy some years ago a village in the north of England went diablo mad. It was contended that there were more than two diablo outfits in the possession of every family.

WORTH OF THE WORLD.

It is reassuring to learn on high authority that the world's wealth is still expressed in twelve figures—that is, that it is not a million, it would represent over a hundred thousand millions in good gold; and that this colossal sum John Bull can lay claim to, nearly a sixth, says Answers. He still remains the richest man on earth, with the solitary exception of his cousin Jonathan.

Figures that run to thousands of millions convey nothing to the unaided mind, and if we would gain any conception of the world's riches we must juggle a little with them. Let us in fancy convert them into gold, and we shall then find them represented by a cube, rising nearly as high as Nelson's monument in Trafalgar Square, or more than 40 yards in each dimension, and containing as much gold as all the mines of the world could yield in a thousand years.

So heavy would our cube be that it would outweigh three times the population of Australia; all the people in England to-day could not raise it a fraction of an inch from the ground; and its transport by rail would tax the power of twenty-five thousand locomotives.

Of the world's wealth it is interesting to know that towards every pound of 14 karats contributes, approximately, 6s. houses 4s., railways 1s. 8d., and merchandise 1s. 7d., leaving us to see that the world's wealth is about 100 times as great as the world's population.

Long-Lived Tortoise.

Sparrows have been known to live for forty years, so no wonder some of our sparrows are knowing little fellows, because they are quite "grown up."

A horse does not live much more than twenty-seven years, and it hard worked would probably not live as long as that.

The tortoise is supposed to live to be anything between 500 and 400 years old. Some people say tortoises can live for ever, but, of course, that has not been proved, though certainly they live a long time.

Both an eagle and a crow have been known to live to be 100, but the poor little vulture lives about three years.

An elephant's lifetime lasts about 100 years, and he isn't considered "grown-up" until he is about twenty-five years old.

Cotton In Mesopotamia.

The possibilities of Mesopotamia for cotton growing are said to be very considerable, but its potentialities have yet to be investigated and put to the test to decide whether cotton growing can be established there on a commercial basis. The rainfall is so small that the summer cultivation of the country must depend entirely upon irrigation. Mesopotamia, it is said, differs from Egypt as regards the conditions under which the work of irrigation will have to be carried out. The irrigation system is dependent not on a single river with a well defined and permanent course, like the Nile, but on two great rivers, the Tigris and the Euphrates—meandering through a wide plain in very ill-defined and frequently changing courses, with shifting tributary branches and cross connections.

"Water We Carry."

The body of an average man, weighing 154 pounds, contains forty-six quarts of water. The bones are nearly one-half water, the fat a little less, the nerves more than one-half water, and the skin nearly three-quarters water. The brain, muscles, nerves and heart are three-fourths water, while the blood is more than four-fifths water.

The British Government has decided that it will not publish an official account of the Battle of Jutland.

The convenience of the Coupe are almost too apparent to mention. Shelter in the Winter from the cold, snow or sleet; protection in the Spring, Summer and Autumn, from the hot sun, or rain; cleanliness, distinction at all times—all these may be enumerated as the advantages of an enclosed car. To some an enclosed car is a matter of more or less necessity; to others a matter of added convenience and comfort.

HIS WILDEST RIDE

An old locomotive engineer who is rated as a good mixer by his brother workmen tells how he got excited at a piano recital when the professor tore down through the yards, over the switches and away down the main line in a manner that put Jones to sleep, according to H. H. Hicks, a Moose Jaw, in a communication published in a recent issue of the Saskatchewan Daily Star. Brother Ernest W. Haworth, member of Lodge 38, has sent us a clipping of the communication, which is as follows:

"I was loitering around the streets one night," said A. Lenning, one of the old and best known engineers, at one time out of Moose Jaw, "and as I had nothing to do I dropped into a concert and heard a sleek-looking Frenchman play a piano in a way that made me feel all over in spots. As soon as he sat down on the stool I knew by the way he handled himself that he understood the machine he was running. He tapped the keys away up and down, as if they were eggs, and he wanted to see if he had water enough. Then he looked up as if he wanted to know how much steam he was carrying, and the next moment he pulled open the throttle and sailed into the main line as if he was half an hour late. You could hear the thunder over culverts and bridges and getting faster and faster, until the fellow rocked about in his seat like a cradle. Somehow I thought it was the old 935 pulling a passenger train and getting out of the way of a general freighter's special. He worked the keys on the middle division like lightning, and then he flew along the north end of the line until the driver went around like a buzz saw and I got excited. About the time I was fixing to tell him to cut her off a little, he kicked the dampers under the machine wide open, pulled the throttle 'way back in the tender, and how he did run! I couldn't stand it any longer and yelled to him that he was pounding on the left side, and if he wasn't careful he'd drop his ash pan. But he didn't hear. To one heard me. Everything was flying and whizzing. Telegraph poles on the side of the track looked like a row of corn stalks, and trees appeared to be a mud bank, and all the exhaust of the old machine sounded like the hum of a bumble bee. I tried to yell out, but my tongue wouldn't move. He went around the curves like a bullet slipped an eccentric, blew out his soft plug--went down grades fifty feet to the mile and didn't touch the air once. He went the meeting point at a mile and a half a minute and called for more fog. My hair stood up straight, because I knew the game was up. Sure enough, dead ahead of us was the head light of a 'Special'. In a daze I saw the cars shivered into atoms, people smashed and mangled and bleeding and gasping for water. I heard another crash as the French professor struck the deep keys away down on the lower end of the Sutherland division, and then I came to my senses. There he was at a dead-standstill, with the door of the firebox of the machine open, wiping perspiration off his face with a chunk of waste, and bowing to the people before him. If I live to be a thousand years old I'll never forget the ride that Frenchman gave me on a piano."

EATS HEARTILY EVERY MEAL NOW

Nova Scotia Man Says Taking Tanlac Was the Wisest Thing He Ever Did.

"Since I began taking Tanlac I have found relief from troubles that made life a burden to me for three years," said John R. Gray, of Richmond, N. S.

"I suffered from indigestion so bad that even the lightest foods soured on my stomach. Gas bloated me up and I had pains in the pit of my stomach that nearly drove me double. Sometimes after these attacks I was so weak it was all I could do to stand up and I had headaches that nearly drove me distracted. I was so nervous and restless I hardly ever got to sleep for hours after I went to bed, and I would wake up in the morning feeling as tired as if I had just finished a hard day's work. I lost weight rapidly and was so weak and short of energy it was an effort for me to get any work done."

"After taking a few bottles of Tanlac I am to day as well as I ever was in my life. I can now eat three square meals a day and never have a particle of trouble afterwards. My nerves are steady and I sleep soundly every night and get up in the morning feeling good. I have gained ten pounds in weight and am in the pink of condition and feel like I can do as big a day's work as anybody."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

HOW FAR CAN A FROG JUMP

Don't despise the street car conductor. He may be a genius in disguise. Don't get impatient when he urges you to "move up in front."

You may be poring over his books in a few years. In the great country of America you may not find dukes in ditches, but you are likely to find supermen in the slums. The man in overalls today may be your banker tomorrow. The farm lad shovelling manure this fall may be your son's candidate for the Presidency a generation hence. America furnishes the surprises for the world. The people are composed of such wonderful mixture that you can never predict with any certainty the future of any man.

Only a few years ago a Swedish immigrant named Knute Hansson was a street car conductor in Chicago, having come to the Windy City from a North Dakota farm. He wasn't even a very good street car conductor, for he persisted in having a book handy and sometimes he read the book when he should have been watching out for fares. Finally he was discharged.

This week "Dr." Knute Hansson was awarded the Nobel prize for literature for the year 1920--a neat little purse approximating $40,000. The winning of a Nobel prize is no matter of luck or favoritism. It can be secured only through merit, and the honor is even greater than the money award.

Naturally, even the best-read of us have to stop occasionally and ask ourselves just what a Nobel prize. The facts are worth remembering.

Twenty-six years ago, Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite, died and left a fortune of $9,000,000, the interest from which should be distributed yearly to those who had mostly contributed to the benefit of mankind during the year previous. Several prizes are awarded each year--for contributions along the line of physics, chemistry, medicine, literature and the promotion of the world's peace.

Some of the prize winners of the past have been W. C. Röntgen, the discoverer of the "X" ray; Mr. and Mrs. Curie, the discoverers of radium; Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy; Bjornson, the Swedish writer; Kipling, the English novelist; Theodore Roosevelt, for bringing about the peace between Russia and Japan; Elihu Root, for his activities in behalf of the Hague Tribunal.

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

By Prof. C. C. Laugher, Mus. Bacc., Harris NO 111--PERT REMARKS.

"The chesty concert singer said to his friend, 'I am thinking of touring South Africa next year.' His friend said, 'Take my advice and don't, an ostrich egg weighs two or three pounds you know.' What a difference to that most lovely and interesting character Chopin, his delicate touch was full of expression and exquisite grace, his physical condition debared him from every bodily exertion. He was seriously restricted always by a lack of strength, and died at the age of forty. Listen to what Chopin said of himself, 'I am well and in good spirits, why, I do not know, but the people here (Vienna) are astonished at me, and I wonder at them for finding anything to wonder at in me. My manner of playing pleases the ladies so much, I move in the highest circles and I do not know how I got there. I am in the world like an E string of the violin on a contrabass.'"

Living during the same period but in the little country of Belgium was de Beriot, a man of different habits. This talented violinist was appointed solo violinist to William I. King of the Netherlands. "De Beriot received a New Year's present of a dozen bottles of champagne from a wealthy friend. The violinist consumed the wine and returned the empty case with his card, on which he had written 'en-core,' his patron did not resent this, but sent a second lot with his visiting card, on which he had written the word 'finis.'"

Joachim was another great violinist who is known as the most distinguished teacher and greatest violinist of recent times. Joachim insulted the Kaiser, for when the Kaiser asked Joachim to teach two of his sons the violin Joachim replied, 'Your majesty, I fully appreciate the honor of teaching your sons, but I am very sorry to say that all my time is so taken up with talented students that I find it impossible to accept your majesty's offer.' Ever after that time Joachim was no longer a favorite with the Kaiser. Joachim was the greatest teacher of his time, he took no pupil at any price who was not already an artist of talent, yet we often think of the words of Jacob Abbott who said, never get out of patience with dullness or stupidity."

But we are inclined to question when we read of an examiner asking the following questions and receiving these replies: What is a double sharp? When you strike two black keys at the same time, one with each hand.

Define "form" in music? Well it is not good form to applaud by stamping your feet, you should clap your hands.

What does "rit" signify? So far for one day's practice.

What is a Minuetto? A short piece that you can play through in one minute.

We cannot but smile at some answers, for Willie after reading about the Guitar asked, what is a guitar? Why said Johnnie with a sneer, it's a disease in the head. No it ain't said Freddie, giving his chum a nudge, it is a lump growing on the throat.

The violinist was certainly put to a test for an answer when the landlady said to the violinist, who, also was a new lodger, Oh, good-morning, good-morning answered the lodger, I hope you had a good night's rest, said the landlady, No I did not said the mild looking man, your cat kept me awake. Oh, said the landlady tossing her head, I suppose you are going to ask me to have the poor thing killed. No, not exactly, said the gentle lodger, but would you very much mind having it tuned.

Speaking of singing we cannot do better than listen to the soap-box orator: Yes, said the orator, this is indeed a wonderful country. We have thousands of women who hold their audience for hours at a time--after which they lay it in a cradle and rock it to sleep.

"Floating In The Air"

Looking out of my window I saw something

Floating in the air.

It's movements were so graceful

Floating in the air.

I cried aloud, what are you there,

Floating in the air?

Are you some dried up, dead leaf,

Floating in the air?

Are you some lawyer's law brief,

Floating in the air?

The answer came so quickly,

Floating in the air.

No! I am one of Northway's fashion sheets,

Floating in the air.

And, if you wish to feel the joy like

Floating in the air.

If you wish to be, where things do

Neither rip or tear;

If you long to breath a perfume rich and rare;

Then buy a Northway garment and

You will have a joy

Like floating in the air.

Good Night!

A WORD OF THANKS

The Publicity Committee of the Bear River Womens Institute take this opportunity of expressing their appreciation of the kindness of the editor of the Digby Courier in placing at their disposal a full page of his valuable paper. Many citizens of our town remember the time when a weekly paper was published to the interest of Digby and Annapolis County. The "Telephone" was always welcomed into our houses; but after several years of service it ceased to exist. Since then we have had no newspaper in our immediate vicinity, the nearest being those of Digby and Annapolis towns.

We therefore take great pleasure in presenting the Bear River Courier to the people of our town. We are hopeful that it will fill a long felt want in our midst. We appeal to our citizens to help us make this effort the success we wish it to be.

Contributions of articles of interest to the welfare of our town and surrounding country will be very thankfully received by the committee. We solicit your hearty co-operation.

EDISON'S NEW DIAMOND AMBEROLA

The World's Greatest Phonograph Value

THINK of the vast difference between Edison's Amberola and ordinary phonographs or "talking machines". The Amberola is the product of matchless inventive genius—of inspiration. Other phonographs are plain, factory-made machines, devoid of inspiration.

Thomas A. Edison's master mind conceived the Amberola to entertain mankind. Commercial phonographs are put together with just one object in view—to sell at so much profit.

No wonder the Amberola has demonstrated its superiority time and again in public comparative tests with "talking machines" and commercial phonographs.

The marvelous tone of the Amberola—the permanent, genuine Diamond Point Reproduction (no needles to change)—the practically unbreakable, everlasting Amberol Records—all reveal the genius of Edison. And the surprising, low cost of the Amberola puts high-priced "talking machines" and commercial phonographs to shame.

Let us show you how easy it is for anyone to own an Amberola. Call at our store or write to us in the next few days. Even if you are convinced you cannot afford an Amberola, put it up to us to make it possible. So remember—call or write—soon.

FUR MARKET.

The bottom has fallen out of the fur market, according to word given out by A. C. Baxter, chief of the State Fish and Game Department of Ohio, and a state wide appeal is being made to trappers requesting them to delay their trapping operations until December 1st this year, in order to conserve the fur bearing animals and prevent the taking of fur bearers whose pelts will have practically no market value if taken early in November, in spite of the fact that the law on several varieties of fur bearing animals opens November 1st. With the fur markets of the world flooded with raw furs and prices falling every day, early November fur will not be worth the taking, Baxter advises after consulting with leading fur merchants. Muskrats that brought four dollars each in 1919 will be quoted at from thirty-five to fifty cents only, add skunks that brought double the amount last year will be quoted at from two and one-half to three dollars only for the best pelts. A similar drop is promised in all other furs. Baxter advises that the slump is due to the immense stock of furs the dealers have on hand ready for the manufacturers, amounting to millions of dollars in value, throughout the United States. The extreme high prices last year caused excessive trapping, and this, together with the fur strike lasting all summer and fall, has caused such a surplus that dealers will not buy. Fur dealers have lost hundreds of thousands of dollars because of decline in values, and it will be money out of the trappers' pockets as well as a useless waste of fur bearing animals to have them killed before December, Baxter declares. Only prime furs and full furred pelts, commanding the highest prices, are wanted this season, the fur merchants of the world advise.

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

By Prof. C. C. Laughier, Mus. Bac., Sarnia

NO IV—INSTRUMENTAL ACCOMPANIMENT.

Instrumental accompaniment means to accompany with the instrument, or as someone puts it, to add an accompaniment is to add an ornament. We readily think of the piano as the general accompaniment for the singer or soloist.

The first mention of the piano-forte as an accompanying instrument was made in 1767 on the play bill of "The Beggar's Opera." Between the first and second act Miss Brinkler was announced to sing a popular song from Judith, accompanied upon the new instrument by Mr. Diblin. In London, June 2nd, 1768, John Christian Bach, was heard in a pianoforte solo, the first of its kind.

The purpose of the accompaniment is to support the principal part, it must be independent but should always be subservient to the chief part. An instrument such as the piano, harp, or organ may be used in accompaniment, even a chorus of voices may successfully carry an accompaniment part.

To acquire this art, the accompanist must have great care and judgment. He must not overweigh the voice, but must assimilate with the quality of the voice, taking special care of the contrast. Too often we hear such an accompaniment that is so strong that the soloist is simply an occasional part, and the effect is very ridiculous.

We read that at the time of the old miracle plays the accompaniments were performed by a double lyre, an harpsichord, a double guitar and two behind the scenes, simply to add musical effect, and even Wagner went back to the way of hiding the orchestra.

Back in the days of 1600, Cavalli arranged instrumental effect of sights and sounds of nature, such as the murmuring of the rivers and the sighing of the winds.

Caccini, a great vocalist of Italy, in the sixteenth century, broke away from the old style composition of many voices and wrote for one voice only. These compositions he sung to his own accompaniment, playing on the lute, a pear-shaped instrument four feet long, with a number of strings of different lengths. Caccini met with great success.

These early musicians aimed only to devise means to vocal and music with poetry, so that the two arts should enhance one another, but when it is understood that the accompaniment to the recitative and solos were provided only with a figured bass from which to read and play, it was the accompanist at the harpsichord that near-shaped the details. This weakness and effectiveness would make the music unendurable to a modern audience. From about this time on, particularly in the matter of accompaniment, the resources of expression in music became much enlarged and elastic for the harmony was more richly developed and the tonality better understood. The modulation now came in as an additional means of effect.

Dr. Furry adds—"Where the words are thoroughly musical and the composer sensitive and skilful the music fits the words at every instant and makes the words glow with meaning."

Both Schubert and Schumann were very expressive in this form. Schumann's genius showed itself in his power to suggest unexpressed depth of feeling in a few lines. The piano accompaniment and postures to many of his songs intensifies this emotional atmosphere.

A woman in Berlin, aged 38 has had 27 children, including three sets of triplets and four sets of twins.

THE SEEING EYE

Principal Reynolds of the Ontario Agricultural College, thus delivers himself in the Agricultural Gazette of Canada:

The teacher who hopes to take a right place in the life of the country school district must cultivate the seeing eye and the understanding heart for persons and things rural. The usual, popular, melodrama, comic supplement, moving picture conception of the farmer and of country people must be forgotten. It is essentially and perniciously false. The farmer is something of a humorist, and takes delight in deceiving the simple-minded by a somewhat unfinished exterior. The city-bred person makes the fatal mistake of judging by outside appearances. To the city-trained eye there are two classes of persons, one wearing overalls and the other wearing white collars. The former class work with their hands. The latter class work with their brains. That is the superficial judgment, which ignores the fact that there is a very great deal of clear, hard thinking done to-day by the men wearing overalls. At any rate, the farmer belongs to both classes. The more he understands of the discoveries, which it is the business of the agricultural college to make, the more he absorbs the teaching which it is the business of the college to spread abroad, the better farmer will he be.

Mrs. C. P. Petot, of Bowdoinville, and Mrs. Mary Conrad, of Celina, O., are twins and aged 87. All their lives they have never disagreed, but on the recent election they split, the former voting for Harding and the latter for Cox.

George Silker, who has just died at Ayr, Scotland, at the age of 102, claimed that as a tailor in America he made clothes for Abraham Lincoln. Silker also fought in the American Civil War on the side of the north and later saw service in the French-Prussian war.

Best Interests Of Fishermen Served By The Retention Of The Present Tariff

Memorandum Submitted to the Tariff Committee at Halifax, by A. H. Brittain, Vice-President and General Manager, the Maritime Fish Corporation, Limited.

The Atlantic fisheries are experiencing at the present time what is in some respects the most difficult and menacing situation in their history.

It will be remembered that during the war the fisheries were called upon as a source of food supply to a greater extent than ever before. Production was greatly increased. Consumption of fish was promoted by the Governments of Canada and the United States in order to release beef and bacon for the soldiers. The Canada Food Board has testified to the important service of the fishermen and the Canadian fish companies in that time of need of our armies and those of our allies.

When the emergency passed, the consumption of fish in Canada and the United States dropped sharply. Then, too, export orders became scarce, partly because there was a lessened consumption of fish overseas but more largely because the exchange situation compelled the Mediterranean countries drastically to reduce their purchases on this continent. But the production of fish has been increased in response to an official, national and indeed, to an international appeal, and the peculiar conditions of the fishing industry make exceedingly difficult an adjustment to new conditions.

To-day there is a large over production of fish on the Atlantic. Wholesale prices have fallen to the pre-war level or below, while the generally higher price for everything required in the industry, amounts to this, that it costs between two and two and one-half times as much to catch and land fish as it did before the war.

Approximately 47,000 Nova Scotians are engaged in the fishing industry, wholly or in part, and 87,000 persons are directly dependent upon the Canadian fisheries for their livelihood. Many of the fishermen own small vessels and sell their catch in the home port. It is hard for life-long fishermen to turn to other employment. They are not organized. Few of them have any considerable savings or resources. These men are suffering genuine hardship today because the markets of Canada and the United States are glutted with fish offered below the actual cost of catching.

Besides the interests of the 47,000 persons who are engaged in the Atlantic fisheries and dependent upon them for their living, the situation of the fishing companies may seem of relatively small concern. And yet the interests of the companies and the fishermen themselves are so closely interwoven that the problems of each group are actually the problems of both. Taking the figures of three individual companies operating on the Atlantic coast, producing fresh fish, and manufacturing smoked, and canned fish, there is a combined investment of $2,312,600. These companies employ close to 700 persons and last year disbursed in pay roll and in payment for fish purchased from the fishermen approximately $2,275,000. The Company of which I am Manager, buys sixty per cent of all the fish it handles and the other companies also purchase a very large proportion of their fish. These companies provide a substantial market for Canadian industries manufacturing wooden boxes, cardboard containers, tin cans, and other fishery supplies. It cannot be stated too strongly that the companies engaged in the Atlantic fishing industry are not interrelated, that they operate in absolute independence and in the keenest competition. They are not a "trust" in any way and there is no arrangement or understanding of any kind as to prices or allocation of selling areas.

The above three companies does not by any means represent the total volume of business done as there are many other operators carrying on a similar business.

Difficult and serious as is the present situation for the Canadian fishermen and the fishing companies, it would be still worse if it were not for the Canadian tariff. The tariff items in which we are principally interested are:

ITEMS.	ARTICLE.	BRITISH PREFERENTIAL TARIFF.	GENERAL TARIFF.
115 and 118	Fish, pickled or salted, fish oil, than pickled or salted herrings.	50c. per lb.	1c. per lb.
119	Fish, smoked or bopped.	50c. per lb.	1c. per lb.
122	Dried fish.	50c. per lb.	1c. per lb.
123	All other fish, prepared or preserved, n. o. p.	17 1/2 per cent.	30 per cent.

By far the largest item is fresh fish, which is dutiable under the Canadian tariff, General Schedule, at 1 cent per pound. With the fish markets of Boston, Gloucester, and other fishing centers of the United States Atlantic coast are endeavoring to take advantage of the Canadian market and are offering fish in Montreal and other points in Eastern Canada at prices which are well below the cost of production. The fishermen little more than one-half the cost of catching the fish and bringing them to port. United States concerns have recently offered fresh haddock, delivered at Montreal, freight and duty paid, at 6 cents per pound, and have instructed their representatives to sell for even less than 6 cents if necessary to meet the competition of the Canadian fishermen, while fresh fish recently has been offered f. o. b. Boston at as low as $1.60 per 100 lbs. pounds. Such competition of course represents only a fraction of the cost of production. The situation is a temporary one but it is demoralizing the Canadian fishing industry and working serious hardship to the Canadian fishermen at a time when the Canadian industry needs every possible encouragement.

The fishermen cannot be paid more than is warranted by the market price at the consuming centres. By reason of the tariff duty, Canadian fishermen are receiving somewhat higher prices than are being paid to the fishermen operating from ports on the United States Atlantic Seaboard and to the extent to which the Canadian payment is higher the fishermen have the Canadian tariff to thank.

At a time when Canadian fish is being sold below the cost of catching and marketing, and when enormous quantities of Canadian fish are being thrown away for lack of a market, United States fish is being offered in the consuming markets of Canada. This situation is indeed serious, but it would be even worse if it were not for the Canadian tariff.

If, as the Canadian Council of Agriculture proposes, all foodstuffs (including fish) be placed on the Canadian free list, United States fishing vessels would be able to land their catch at Canadian ports when the Canadian markets were favorable, in competition with the Canadian fishing vessels and, Canadian concerns which have recently invested in the industry which pay taxes in the Dominion, and which have to do business in Canada during the entire year whether the markets be strong or weak.

Despite the tariff, and in complete answer to the charge that Canadian prices are determined on the basis of United States prices plus the tariff duty, I submit that the prices at which fresh fish have been sold to the Canadian consumer at almost any time in the history of the industry, and certainly at any time during the past ten years, have been much lower than the prices charged for similar fish in the United States. At least the present measure of tariff protection is needed to help to stabilize conditions in the industry and, despite the home market largely for Canadian products, the best interests of the Canadian consumers, as well as those of the fishermen, will be served by continuance of the present tariff duty on fresh fish. It will enable us to develop plans for marketing so as to make fresh fish available at reasonable prices to practically all communities in Canada.

Speaking only for the Maritime Fish Corporation, Limited, although I think I also express the attitude of the other fish companies as well, let me say, that it is my deliberate conviction that if the Canadian tariff duty on fresh fish be removed there is no business alternative open to us but to dispose of our fixed investments in the Maritime Provinces for what they will bring, abandon the industry and take up some other business as a means of livelihood, or transfer our movable property to a New England port and from there endeavor to build up business in the United States where there is a greater opportunity to develop trade for the Fresh and Cured fish industry and where there is better facilities for shipping the cured product to foreign markets.

Under free trade conditions in the fishing industry, the companies would be much more favorably located in the United States with the assured market represented by the population of that great country; with the further advantage of free entry into the Canadian market, rather than in Canada with the possibility of being shut out at any time from the United States.

Nova Scotia's history has been closely connected with the fishing industry, and a large export trade has been built up with Canadian fish. Nova Scotia fish are favorably known in the world's markets as a distinctive Canadian product. That distinctiveness, of course, could not be maintained under free trade conditions, and the identity of the Canadian fish would necessarily be lost.

There is little need to emphasize what free fish would mean to Nova Scotia. Whole villages and towns are dependent upon the fisheries. The latter are dependent in turn upon—

1. The principal fish consuming centres of Eastern Canada, which it is now proposed should be thrown open to the dumping of United States fish, at any time there is an over-supply in Boston, Portland or Gloucester. The per capita consumption of fish in Canada is fifty per cent higher than the corresponding average consumption in the United States, due partly to education and advertising, yet it is now suggested that United States fishing companies be given free entry to the Canadian markets.

2. Export trade, built on distinctive high grade Canadian fish and fish products. The proposal for free trade in fresh fish would entirely cancel this important and deserved foreign trade advantage.

Not only would free trade operate to destroy the fishing villages of Nova Scotia but many other interests would suffer loss. Consider the transportation companies, to which the tonnage of fish from Nova Scotia ports means considerable revenue. The following records show the amount of business handled by The Canadian Government Railways.

Best Interests Of Fishermen Served By The Retention Of The Present Tariff

Year.	Tons of Fish.	Value.	Transportation Charges.
1900	1,450	$ 100,000.	$ 16,500.
1919	10,256	1,382,800.	150,153.

Much more serious, however, would be the exodus of Nova Scotia fishermen to New England, which would necessarily become the centre of the Atlantic fisheries. Even now 80 per cent of the fishermen out of New England ports are Maritime Province and Newfound-land by birth.

Not only is the present duty on fresh fish needed, but also that on manufactured fish. It should be noted that the United States imposes import tariff duties of from 15 to 25 per cent on canned fish (U. S. tariff item 216) and a duty of 3-4 cent per pound on skinned or boned cod or other fish. It must be apparent that such duties prevent the Canadian fishing interests developing trade with the United States in these lines.

If the Canadian duties on fish are removed, nothing could be plainer than that the United States concerns operating from a large protected home market base would quickly invade the Canadian markets and the companies here, with a relatively small amount of business available, would be unable to compete and would have either to suspend operations or to move to the United States.

In the Atlantic fisheries, territories and adjacent banks, Canada possesses a natural resource of great national importance and of possibilities which are only just commencing to be realized. These fisheries represent an annual value of between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. The smallness of the Canadian home market presents a serious problem for the industry but one which in part at least has been met successfully. The Canadian companies have built up a considerable business with fish, smoked as soon as it is landed—either in the United States or in the place in the United States to which, like the same extent. Then, too, the export trade enabled the companies to get quantity production with the economies which a large output makes possible. De-sides the Canadian companies have been developing and endeavoring to popularize new fish. While the immediate export trade situation is not bright, one cannot doubt that it will improve and that the Mediterranean countries, South America and the West Indies will offer a larger market for Canadian fish than ever before. The Advisory Council of Scientific and Industrial Research and the guild of the fishing interests in Nova Scotia are concerned themselves with the technical problems which the fisheries present. With the Canadian home market reasonably assured by at least the duties now in effect, this development can continue and I am satisfied that every fisherman in Nova Scotia shares my confidence that our Atlantic fisheries, if accorded fair treatment and reasonable encouragement, will prove one of our most important and valuable national resources.

DEEP BROOK

The annual meeting of the Deep Brook Dorcas Society was held in the Baptist Church, Nov. 4th, with a good attendance.

The meeting was conducted by the President, Mrs. L. E. Sturman. Opening exercises a hymn, Scripture reading, prayer and report of the secretary showed a creditable year's work done with splendid financial results, the largest in the history of the Society. Total receipts for the year $625.06. Expenditure $590.25, balance in the treasury $34.78. The summer sale was most successful. A large vote of thanks was given our President for faithful and efficient service. It was resolved to hold a Christmas sale, and a good amount of business was done. Past officers were unanimously re-elected. They are:

President—Mrs. L. E. Sturman.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. H. B. Vroom.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. Robert Spurr.
Treas.—Mrs. Howard Adams.
Secy.—Miss E. A. McClelland.

A GOOD PROVIDER

When it comes to being a "good provider," no man would pride himself on furnishing trash liberally for his family. The family is entitled to good, wholesome food.

It is the same with reading. Good reading places and creates a new world for more good reading. The Youth's Companion is the best of reading for all—every member—every age.

The Youth's Companion has long since ceased to provide for "youth" alone. It has become the favorite all-the-family weekly of America. Its name is a misnomer, but its claim for the sentiment it has generated in American homes through its service to every age.

Still $2.50 for a year of 12 issues, but this price not guaranteed beyond January 1, next.

Subscriptions for 1921 will receive 1. The Youth's Companion—62 issues in 1921.

All remaining weekly 1920 issues for 1921.

All the above for $2.50. McCall's Magazine for 1921, $1.50—the monthly fashion authority. Both publications for only $3.50.

For years I have never considered my stock of household remedies complete unless a bottle of Minard's Liniment was included. For burns, bruises, sprains, rheumatism or chilblains, excels, and I know of no better remedy for a severe cold in the head, or that will give more immediate relief, than to inhale from the bottle through the nasal organs.

And as to my supply of veterinary remedies it is essential, as it has in very many instances proven its value. A recent experience in reclaiming what was supposed to be a lost section of a valuable cow, has again demonstrated its great worth and prompts me to recommend it in the highest terms to all who have a herd of cows, large or small. I think I am safe in saying among all the patent medicines there is none that can be so sure a shield of necessity does Minard's Liniment. A real treasure good for man or beast.

THOUGHT SHE'D HAVE TO GIVE UP

Mrs. Kenney Had Suffered Eight Years Before Taking Tanlac—Is Now Well and Happy

"I'll never stop praising Tanlac since it's helped me so much, and I just feel like going and telling everybody about it," said Mrs. O. R. Kenney, of 75 President Row, Halifax, N. S.

"For the past eight years I suffered dreadfully with stomach trouble and chronic indigestion. My appetite was poor and for years I don't think I ate a good meal. The little 'T' ate, soured on my stomach and caused me to press up into my chest and throat until I could hardly breathe. I had awful headaches that were as bad as any I had for days at a time and left me in a terribly weakened condition.

At nights I was so nervous and restless I could scarcely sleep. I had no energy to do my housework, and I thought I would have to give up altogether, as I was getting worse all the time.

"I got a bottle of Tanlac one day it gave me so much relief I kept on taking it until I had finished my seventh bottle and all my troubles have disappeared. I was surprised it was so quick and I no longer suffer from indigestion or any on my stomach. My breathing is free and easy I never have a sign of a headache. I sleep like a child and have regained all my strength and energy so that my housework is a real pleasure. I have gained ten pounds in weight, and am feeling just fine in every way."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth, and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

"Floating In The Air"

Looking out of my window I saw something floating in the air. It's movements were so graceful floating in the air, I cried aloud, what are you there, floating in the air? Are you some dried up, dead leaf, floating in the air? Are you some lawyer's law brief, floating in the air? The answer came so quickly, floating in the air: No! I am one of Northway's fashion sheets, floating in the air. And, if you wish to feel the joy like floating in the air; If you wish to be, where things do neither rip or tear; If you long to breathe a perfume rich and rare; Then buy a Northway garment and you will have a joy like floating in the air, Good Night!

FISHWAYS ON THE MERSEY

The Fisheries Department has recently completed repairs and building of fishways in dams on the Mersey River, Nova Scotia, and hopes are now entertained that it may again become the resort of salmon, for which it was famed in years gone by.

This river has been obstructed for a number of years by five dams, and although fishways of a sort had been installed by the owners, investigation proved that although they may have been more or less effective when built, owing to their having fallen into a state of disrepair, no fish have been ascending the river for the last few years. New fishways were built entirely at the first, fourth and fifth dam; while those in the second and third were repaired and altered with a view to making them more effective, the work being performed under direction of Mr. H. A. Lynch, Assistant Engineer of the Fisheries Branch.

Shortly after the completion of these works reports were current that salmon had been taken with a rod above the uppermost dam, for the first time in a number of years. The department is taking steps to verify these reports, with a view to following the matter closely and remedying any defects in the system.

A VALUABLE WORK

"Nova Scotia's Part in the Great War" is a complete record of the war activities of the province, collected and edited from the official documents by Captain M. Stuart Hunt. The book, which is now on sale, is a wonderfully complete work, and one which will be believed to be readily welcomed in every home in the province which in any way affected by the war, which means practically every Nova Scotia home.

There are fifty-seven chapters, and hundreds of illustrations. Every Nova Scotia Battalion is given a chapter to itself, and there are special chapters devoted to the activities of the Red Cross, the Patriotic Fund, the various Militia Units which did yeoman work of home service, as well as records of the work accomplished by Nova Scotians in munitions, recruiting, troop transport and other incidental activities.

There is an interesting frontispiece in the shape of a reproduction of the ancient Nova Scotia coat of arms, granted to the colony by King Charles the First. The book has been warmly praised and endorsed by His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, Premier Murray, as well as by leading military men of the province.

It is a matter of congratulation that Nova Scotia should be the first province in Canada to complete such a record of its war effort. The province owes Captain Hunt and his collaborators a debt of gratitude. As for the book it is hardly conceivable that so excellent and authentic a record should fail to meet a ready sale. Certainly this volume should find an honored place in the home of every loyal Nova Scotian. It is a historical chronicle which will be of great value in years to come.

"Don't B. A. J." are signs conspicuously displayed on the telegraph and telephone posts on a number of the principal streets. Don't B. A. J. might be an appropriate sign for banners suspended across the same street.

"What?" said Lord Coleridge once to a puzzled cabman, "you a London cabby and don't know where the Law Courts are?" "Oh! the Law Courts, is it? I know them; but you said the Courts of Justice!"—The Christian Register (Boston).

A sailor recently walked into a jewellery store in Montreal and asked for a watch that he had left there nine years before to be cleaned. He went off on a cruise around the world and was unable to "claim" the watch until now. The timepiece was placed in his hands within five minutes.

The prohibitory law, submitted to a direct vote of the people to strengthen Prohibition enforcement in South Dakota, was defeated by a majority of more than 10,000 at the recent elections. South Dakota, as an original temperance State, is the first to repudiate the "bone dry" Prohibition idea and search and seizure in private homes.

Brooklyn is no longer "a city of churches," but is becoming merely New York's sleeping place, according to the Rev. John F. Carson, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church. Dr. Carson said when he came to Brooklyn 35 years ago there was a church for every 2191 persons. Now there is one for every 4370.

MT. ALLISON'S DRIVE IN FEBRUARY

Mount Allison's University celebrated simultaneously, Founder's Day and Armistice Day with ceremonies well befitting the occasion. The program for the day opened at 10.30 a. m. with a procession headed by the Regents of the Institution, followed in order by the relatives of the Founder, Professors, Alumni, Alumnae, Visitors and students, who marched in solemn order to Fawcett Memorial Hall where the morning's program was followed out. The services were opened with the March from Aida, by Verdi, played by the University Orchestra, followed by the Anthem, "Lift Up Your Heads" sung by the Choral Class. Responsive prayer was then led by Rev. B. C. Borden, D. D., President of Mount Allison University.

Chairman Rev. George Steel, D. D., with a few appropriate remarks, introduced the principal speaker of the day, The Hon. Justice Russell, D. C. L., of the Province of Nova Scotia and a graduate of Mount Allison, who, in an eloquent address, paid a glowing tribute to the Founder of the Institution, Charles F. Allison.

At the close of the ceremony, the procession again formed and proceeded to the cemetery, where each member, in passing, uncovered, dropped a spray of evergreen upon the grave of the Founder.

In the afternoon, the Board of Regents met in the Board Room of the University Residence, in their semi-annual session, and among other matters of pressing importance, discussed plans for the promotion of the half million dollar endowment campaign to be held some time during the month of February.

For some months, the Board of Regents has considered a short-term intensive campaign for the raising of funds to provide an endowment with which to carry on the good work of the Mount Allison Institutions. The financial statement of the University shows the imperative need for a more adequate endowment. The extension program proposed is to be carried through during the next few years. It has been pointed out that with the constantly increased cost of maintenance, it is practically impossible to even continue on the present basis of operations unless the cost of tuition was increased and this step is one that will not be countenanced by the Regents governing the Institutions since the primary purpose of Mount Allison is to supply the means of acquiring a high education particularly to those lacking great financial resources.

The actual date of the intensive campaign was selected and it was decided that the week of February 7th to 14th should be set aside as Mount Allison Week, by the various conferences and districts of the constituency served by that Institution. This embraces every Methodist Conference and District within the Maritime Provinces and the campaign will be carried on as extensively in the more remote quarters of the Province as in those adjacent to the University for it is from Mount Allison that the majority of the Methodist pastors of the Province have received their theological training.

It is estimated that in 1919 insurance companies in the United States and Canada paid to policy holders or their beneficiaries the huge total of $1,845,500,000. This is a daily distribution of $5,050,000. In St. John the payments are given as $109,000, and in Halifax $230,000 for the year. In Quebec, with twice the population of Halifax, the payments were $253,000.

BRITISH EMPIRE WAR RELIEF FUND

Again the Canadian people are asked to loan their purse strings, and exhibit the un-bearish generosity that distinguished them in the unhappy years of war, by contributing to the British Empire War Relief Fund, a fund to be used to send nurses, doctors, food and clothes to the starving, diseased people in the ravaged war zone of Central and Southwestern Europe, and to provide means to prevent and control the threatened epidemic of Typhus, Smallpox, and other diseases, now sweeping over that part of Europe.

Nova Scotia's Red Cross organization has been requested to take charge of the fund in this Province, and our local Red Cross has received an appeal from the Provincial President, Mrs. Dennis of Halifax, to receive and forward whatever contributions are sent in from our town.

Mrs. Dennis, especially distinguished herself through the war, by her ready response to all calls for assistance, and now that this urgent plea has come to her for help to stem the tide of disease and destitution in the war-ravaged countries, we surely cannot disregard it. When we know that reliable statistics and a conservative estimate places the number of European war-orphan at eleven million, that winter of deprivation of all necessities, food, clothing, housing facilities, medical attendance, etc., faces the majority of these little ones who are the noblest aftermath of the great war, can we though our financial resources are depleted by living conditions of the war, turn away from this appeal, without doing grave wrong both to them, and to ourselves?

A selfish standpoint even, the aid we give to prevent disease and crime, stunted physiques and clouded mentality, which our own good as a nation, and the preservation of the Anglo-Saxon race. The diseased children of Europe, in a few years, may become the immigrant clamoring at our gates for citizenship in this wonderful big Canada of ours. We cannot live to ourselves alone, and we cannot and should not, escape from our responsibilities to our fellow men. Let the spirit of the good Samaritan, which we cannot and should not, escape from our responsibilities to our fellow men. Let the spirit of the good Samaritan, which we cannot and should not, escape from our responsibilities to our fellow men.

Canadians have never been quitters, and though the war is over, the ideal for which our best blood was spilled in France, are still ours to imitate. In England and France we go on to destruction as surely through disease and crime, as though actual subjugation—no let us when we proudly say "Canada forever," mean a Canada prepared to fight much less as these, a Canada ever pitiful to the needy and generous to the poor, taking an active part in all that contributes to world welfare and prosperity.

ROLL CALL.
The Bear River Baptist Church will hold their annual Roll Call Wednesday evening, December 15th, in the audience room of the church. After the calling of the members' names and their responses, a short address by an invited speaker will be given, after which a social hour will be spent in the vestry where refreshments will be served. It is the desire of the church that all members and friends be present to renew friendships and help make the evening one of pleasure and profit.

A PRETTY SIGHT.
The monarch of our forests evidently realizes that this is vacation time, according to reports at hand. On Sunday afternoon last two moose, cow and calf, came down Sibley Road and strolled in at Harry Harris' place. They went right by the front door and down through the field toward the flat unobstructed and admired by many of our good sportsmen, to whom the temptation to try their skill as marksmen must have been almost irresistible.

Local and General

The annual business meeting of the Woman's Institute will be held in Temperance Hall on Monday afternoon, Dec. 6th at 3.30 o'clock. Members please take notice that your annual fee for the coming year are due at this meeting. Since our organization in March grant, progress has been made in improving some of the conditions in our community. And this alone has justified the existence of the Woman's Institute and your continued and active support.

The officers of the institute request that you retain your membership as a busy program has been laid out for the coming year, along the lines of Public Health, Nursing, lecturing etc. As an interesting and helpful year is anticipated, all those not at present members are cordially invited to join us in our activities.

Our forests have been, wonderfully prolific in big game this fall.

The Baptist Circle met at the home of Mrs. Harry Moore on Tuesday evening.

Steamer Bear River, Capt. Arthur Moore, from St. John arrived on Friday. The Methodist Aid Society met with Mrs. Arthur Moore on Thursday afternoon.

The date of school meeting is Monday, Nov. 29th, instead of 22nd, as reported in last issue.

We are sorry to see Mrs. S. S. Sullivan is quite sick at time of writing. Dr. Lovett is in attendance.

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church is holding a fancy sale and supper in the vestry of the church on Tuesday, Dec. 7th.

Edna V. Cook of Wallace Lake, was injured in the foot while at work in Clark Bros. mill, and will be laid up for some time.

The Public Utilities Commission met at Bear River on Wednesday afternoon last, on a hearing of the Bear River and Digby Electric Light and Heating and Power Co.

Provincial Secretary, Mr. Hamilton, will meet with the G. W. V. A. and Ladies Auxiliary on Wednesday evening.

A short programme will be given followed by refreshments.

The Ladies Aid and Wendell Clute with Louis Peters as guide closed the season with one of the biggest catches yet reported. Two moose and a bear should be the result.

The term schooner Barbara W. owners, Nalgh and Wigmore, St. John, master, Mr. Towers, arrived in port on Tuesday.

The school meeting scheduled for Nov. 22nd will not be held until Monday evening, Nov. 29th in Oakdale Hall.

Important business is to come up, and a full and prompt attendance is requested.

The Woman's Institute has been very fortunate in securing the services of Walter McEay, lecturer, and Miss Nancy McEay, pianist, who will appear in Bear River on Thursday evening, Dec. 9th.

Watch the next issue of the Courier for further particulars.

A buffet lunch was served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the G. W. V. A. in their rooms on Saturday, from 8 until 11 p.m.

The women's day supper, consisting of baked beans, steamed brown bread, soup, chicken, sandwiches, cake, tea and coffee will be served from 8 until 11 p.m.

On Sunday last an appeal was made in the Baptist Church for funds to aid in the construction of the Viny Ridge Memorial Church, to be erected in memory of the Canadians who gave their lives for God and Country in the Great War. The sum of $83 was subscribed. No appeal has been made in the other churches as yet.

Schooner Valdaire, owners, Clarke Bros. Ltd., Capt. M. Trahan, arrived from Boston on Friday. She has a partial load of piping for the new pulp mill being erected at Victoria Bridge.

During her return trip she encountered heavy weather and while at anchor near Quebec, parted her anchor chains, losing both anchors. Fortunately she was able to make the open sea and arrive safely at her home port.

HONORED ON HIS BIRTHDAY

W. G. Clarke, of Bear River, the Guest at Impromptu Dinner.

Halifax Chronicle

Mr. W. G. Clarke, of Bear River, one of the heads of Clarke Brothers, Limited, and Chairman of the Highway Board, was the principal in a very happy birthday party held for him at the Halifax Hotel last evening. Mr. Clarke was greatly enjoying the fact that his good health and many other good things had been granted him for sixty-three years, when he was invited to an impromptu dinner at which were assembled a sufficient number of well known men to prove that his anniversary was not to pass without some expression of good will on the part of business associates and public men.

Among those present were Hon. G. H. Murray, Premier of Nova Scotia, Mr. H. Logan, K. C. of Amherst, Mr. W. G. Bates of New York, Mr. A. C. Croft of Montreal, Mr. George Gilbert and Mr. Angus Maclean both of the Bathurst Lumber Company of Bathurst, New Brunswick.

Mr. MacMillan of Antigonish, Mr. E. M. MacDonald, K. C. of Pictou, Hon. R. M. Macdonald, New Glasgow, and Mr. A. G. MacIntyre of Bear River. Premier Murray made a delicious address congratulating Mr. Clarke upon the many privileges of life which he was enjoying, and expressing appreciation for his services to the province and public life of the country.

The dinner was given by Mr. MacIntyre, the son-in-law of Mr. Clarke. Not less among the features of the event was the presence of Mr. Estes of New York, who is in Halifax in connection with a case with Clarke Brothers Limited, now being tried in Court. Mr. Estes made a peculiarly appropriate speech for the occasion, and the incident was accepted as evidence that Mr. Clarke's personal relations are not affected by business misunderstandings.

At Bear River last Wednesday and Thursday the public utility commissioners of Nova Scotia heard a petition of the local electric light company for another increase in rates. The company asserts that its revenue is insufficient. The petition was opposed by some of the consumers who are dissatisfied with the increase in rates. The company asserts that some people were given street lights at the house of not more than six cents per light per week, and it was intended that some people were given street lights at the house of not more than six cents per light per week, and it was intended that some people were given street lights at the house of not more than six cents per light per week.

The commissioners are considering the case. The rates were increased in May last. The consumers appear very loath to fight the matter to the end.

GOOD WORK.
The Ladies Circle of the Bear River Baptist Church as an organization carry on the work of their department in an able manner. It has for its special interest the upkeep of the church and during the past summer it was found that quite extensive repairs were needed on this particular building. The necessary work was outlined by the Finance Committee of the church and undertaken by the Ladies, and through their efforts the expense was readily met, to the extent of about $400.00. This Society in addition to the above also helps the Church in carrying on other phases of its activities, thus trying to do their bit for the welfare of the church.

Wedding Bells
DAVIS--HARRIS
A very quiet wedding took place on Friday morning, Nov. 19th, at 10.30 o'clock, at the home of Thaddeus Harris.

The ceremony was the marriage of his second daughter, Alice Gertrude, to Charles Byron Davis, of New Haven, Conn. Only the immediate family were present. The bride, who is one of the fairest of Bear River's daughters, looked very lovely in her wedding gown of pastel blue satin very heavily embroidered.

She was unattended. Rev. W. J. Wright performed the ceremony, after which a very dainty lunch was served. The bride's going away dress was of navy blue broadcloth with large velvet bust to match. She will be much missed in the Methodist church, where she was an active member, being in the choir for a number of years, and a teacher in the Sabbath school. The best wishes of a host of friends follow the young couple to their home in New Haven.

TURKS LACK FRIENDS

NO ONE WILL SAY A GOOD WORD FOR THEM.

Yet the Nation Which Is Now a Hated Outcast Was Once Great and the Men of the Race Have Proved Themselves in the Past to Be Brave and Adventurous.

WHEN there is no publicist to say "a good word" for a country, it must either be very bad or have no friends. Such is the case with Turkey. Nearly every non-Turkish journal denounces Turkey. She is pictured as a barbarous nation in a state of hopeless decrepitude and utter political chaos. Her association with Germany in the war has created additional prejudice against her. The Armenian massacres have been looked upon as a proof of the murderousness of the Turkish character. And yet much can be said for the Turks, writes Louis in the Rochester Post-Express. They certainly are a brave people, and if valor could make a race great, they should be viewed as one of the greatest races. The founders of the Ottoman Empire were only a section of a wandering Turkish tribe. They had for a long time to face bitter opposition from races akin to them in blood or in creed. The Turks believed in the "war" with which the Arabian prophet sought to propagate his religion, but in order to consolidate their empire they had to resort to stern discipline and political organization. The capture of Constantinople by Mohammed II. in the fifteenth century was a remarkable military achievement.

One element in Turkey's governmental system was the creation of a privileged hereditary class consisting of Christian converts to Mohammedanism. From this class the officers of the army and the members of the administration were selected. The Turkish-speaking Moslems had to be content with the modest career of a farmer, a merchant or a teacher. This state of affairs naturally led to discontent among persons of pure Turkish blood. Selim II. and Murad II. Soliman's successors, were weak rulers. They allowed Turks without education to obtain official positions and palace intrigues helped to demoralize the Government. The ablest men now contented to guide the destinies of Turkey. One result of this was that the country's progress was retarded. There was no mechanism whereby able-bodied men could rise from the ranks of the common people. Moreover, Vasco da Gama's voyage around the Cape of Good Hope, by causing the Indian trade to shift from the Mediterranean to Western Europe financially injured Turkey.

The burden imposed upon the Turks of fighting all Christians was a severe one, and, as we know, militarism is a two-edged sword. Even if the Polish king, John Sobieski, had not defeated the Turkish army in a terrible battle, it is more doubtful whether Turkey could have achieved hegemony in Europe in the closing years of the seventeenth century. The leading minds in Turkey saw the need of adopting Western methods. In 1728 a printing press was established in Constantinople with the help of the Government. Since that time there has been a fierce struggle in Turkey between the old and the new. The reign of the Sultan, Mahomet II. was one of strenuous effort and reconstruction. He came to the throne when the empire was almost disintegrated. The Janissaries, a powerful military corps, resisted all reforms. Owing to their aggressiveness, the provinces were allowed to drift into anarchy. He moulded put the axe to the root. He destroyed the Janissaries—a harsh measure, but, in Turkish nothing can be done "by halves."

He founded a newspaper. There had already been several newspapers and periodicals in the Turkish language. Sultan Mahomet in his order for the establishment of a newspaper said that it had long been for him an ideal. He gave it the name of "The Calendar of Events," and the first number appeared on May 14, 1828. An article in this issue stated that it was necessary to make daily events public to avoid misinterpretation of them, and that it would be useful to the people to become acquainted through such a medium with facts about science, the fine arts and trade. A Turkish weekly with the title of "The Register of News" was established in 1843 by an Englishman named Churchill. The Crimean war gave a impetus to the Turkish press. In 1858 a group of intelligent young men, headed by a Turkish general named Husein Pasha, joined together in a demand for a parliamentary system of Government. The attempt failed at the time, but the spirit of progress had taken root in Turkey.

The Young Turk party arose in 1908. Kemal Bey, whose leadership spirit of the movement. As Turkish newspapers now displayed a tendency to express revolutionary views, a law censoring the press was passed in 1908. As "the law had little effect, liberal papers were arbitrarily suppressed. The Young Turk propaganda stimulated a national consciousness which French sympathy sustained. The defeat of France by Germany in 1871 was a blow to Turkish progress. All Pasha, a great Turkish statesman of the old school, died in 1871. Russia interfered in Turkish affairs with unfortunate results. Reaction set in. However, Turkish states and seeds, formerly discarded, are now utilized, the former as "cattle food" and the latter as a source of oil suitable for soap making and for lamps.

Tomatoes in Italy. Italy harvests more than 20,000 acres of tomatoes yearly and wasteage amounts to practically nothing. The skins and seeds, formerly discarded, are now utilized, the former as "cattle food" and the latter as a source of oil suitable for soap making and for lamps.

GOLIOTTI THE FOX

He Has Been a Troublemaker In Italy.

That old fox of Italian politics, Giovanni Goliotti, is the strong man of Italy at the present moment, so it is said. He has been throughout the war, Goliotti was leader of the anti-war party, a stirrer-up of strife, almost looked upon as traitor. Nevertheless Rome has asked this old man of 75, premier in 1893, to save the country. Revolution is seething in northern Italy, where Goliotti is a power. The Bolsheviks rejoice, claiming to see in Goliotti another Lenin, though the former denies it. A Canadian newspaper correspondent tells his impressions of Goliotti, whom he saw in January, 1918. The newspaperman reached Turin one morning, where he saw Pietro Mascagni, composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," conducting a superb orchestra of eighty pieces playing in a movie show, whose trashy pictures would have been hooted off the stage of even the most suburban theatre in Toronto. At Turin he also came across Goliotti.

Our General Headquarters will not like to send you to this hotel, but what can I do, everything else is filled," quoth an Italian officer. Goliotti is a man of great energy and the Canadian to a lodging while they waited for their passports to Padua. This place is hot-bed of intrigue against our Government. All manner of disaffected politicians gather here, and the proprietor is a particular champion of Goliotti, that old mischief-maker. But (with a smile) I don't think you will be contaminated—you English.

A stocky, fat old man, the padrone or proprietor, greeted us suavely as we entered his hostelry, eyes and complexion nevertheless as he found rooms. During the lunch of omelette and red wine he plied us with questions, what we thought of the war and when it would end. Noncommittal shrugs were his sole replies to our interrogations. Just as we were about to leave he remarked seriously and remarked sotto voce: "Ah, Goliotti come to-night. Perhaps you see him; perhaps you speak with him."

At dusk a commotion suddenly arose in the little rotunda. The fat padrone snatched up a cane, the elegy porter hustled out to the cab, while waiters and maids appeared all at a lull to do some service. Out of the rotunda a small, white-haired, old man, a striking-looking old man whose black eyes and eyebrows of jet contrasted with the snow patches on his once raven locks. It was Goliotti. Greeting the padrone like a brother, he spoke a few words with him, and then, and so nodded to the assembly. They vanished into a tiny private dining room, wherein Goliotti remained alone, receiving visits from the faithful, who popped in and out all evening.

Since that time this man should now be called upon to form another Cabinet, to save Italy. A very great British statesman in the summer of 1917 told some newspapermen in confidence that Italy was by no means heart and soul in the war, and that Baron Boncompagni, minister, son of an English mother, had been directly responsible for Italy's participation, forcing a wavering Cabinet to take the perilous step. Goliotti strenuously opposed the war from the start and carried his opposition all the way to the point of treason during its progress. But though he was still a thorn in Rome's side and still reckoned a danger to the state, after the terrible defeat at Caporetto in October, 1917, Goliotti showed the patriot spirit, proclaiming that henceforth Italians must bury their political differences, stand together, and repel the foe.

Ammonia by New Process. An enterprising American, has secured from the Italian Government a concession for the utilization of 800 horsepower of the Maxmore Cascades near Terni, about 70 miles from Rome, and maintains that he can turn out nitrogenous plant food for the Italian farmer at a cost as low as 1 lira per kilo (equivalent to $0.88 per pound, with the lira taken at its par, exchange value of $0.193). It is said that the falls are capable of generating not less than 150,000 horsepower.

These are the cascades over which Byron waxed so eloquent in "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage." Alfred P. Deane, who has been acting as U. S. Embassy in Rome, reports that the only ingredients in the ammonia are water, air and electric energy.

Flying. Flying is one of the safest pastimes in the world. Judge for yourself. When the Allied forces training here to fly in France it was found that one man lost his life for every 3,400 flying hours spent aloft, says a correspondent. If you count that the speed in flying is something like seventy miles an hour on the average, it will be seen that only one life was lost for about 240,000 miles actually flown. In other words, a man while learning to fly would be training as a pilot, could fly about ten times around the world to every fatal accident. To put it another way, suppose a man could fly a motorplane one hour a day every day in the year for nearly ten years. The distance covered would be less than the distance lost in flying. There are few if any pastimes so safe as flying.

Tomatoes In Italy. Italy harvests more than 20,000 acres of tomatoes yearly and wasteage amounts to practically nothing. The skins and seeds, formerly discarded, are now utilized, the former as "cattle food" and the latter as a source of oil suitable for soap making and for lamps.

Ammonia by New Process. A missionary preacher from the far northwest makes his visits to remote communities by airplane. Unless the weather is unquiet he needs no pilot, for he makes use of the cockpit of the machine for this purpose.

OLIVEINE EMULSION
THE GREAT HEALTH RESTORER

South Brookfield, Queens Co., N.S., Oct. 1919.
"Our little girl was very sick with Stomach Trouble and different foods were recommended, but everything failed until a nurse told me to give her OLIVEINE EMULSION. She is now a big, healthy baby and I would not be without it in the house. For coughs and colds and as a health builder, it is the best for her. We recommended OLIVEINE EMULSION to quite a few who were suffering from the effects of Influenza and they used it with good results." (Name on request)

OLIVEINE EMULSION is more than an ideal cough remedy; to pave the way for a quick recovery from heavy colds and deep-seated coughs. It is a body builder—gives strength to the weak—tones up and invigorates the whole system. It is pleasant to take and is agreeable to the most sensitive stomach.

INTERESTING FACTS REGARDING FOX RAISING

Some interesting facts regarding fox farming are forthcoming from the Veterinary Director, General Dr. Torrance. In an article in The Agricultural Gazette of Canada for November he tells us that the main difficulty connected with the raising of foxes in captivity is the protecting of them from disease. It is noticeable that the female instead of giving birth to a litter of four or five at a time, as she does when free, rarely produces more than two, the average for the farms in Prince Edward Island being at the rate of one and a half. Individual fox ranchers, however, by care and improved methods do succeed in securing an increase of three or even four per pair. With a view to making this success more general, under the direction of Dr. Torrance, research work has been undertaken. Land and equipment have been acquired, two scientific experts from the Health of Animals Branch employed, six pairs of foxes from the Island ranches furnished, and a small laboratory fitted up for the studying of the diseases and parasites that affect the animals.

HOW HAIL INSURANCE WORKS

Hail insurance is practically only a term in Eastern Canada, but in the West it signifies something of vivid importance. Measures known as Municipal Hail Insurance Acts provide a system of mutual insurance under which rural municipalities can operate to tax each other for the granting of compensation to individuals for losses incurred by hail, which are often very serious. How the system works out and the extent to which it operates in Saskatchewan and Alberta are set forth in the November number of The Agricultural Gazette of Canada. Each claimant is entitled to receive not more than 5 cents per acre for every acre per cent, of damage from hail he has sustained. To some this may not appear very liberal provision, but when it is understood that the number of claims filed in 1919 in Saskatchewan were 7,838 and that the total indemnity paid amounted to $1,911,776 a different picture will obtain. For one storm alone that occurred in July of the year referred to claims amounting to $1,100,000 were satisfied. In Alberta the total losses for the same year were $506,000 against a valuation of $12,000,000 insured. Besides the system under Government sanction there are 36 companies in Saskatchewan that accept hail insurance and that paid out $1,750,000 in 1919 for losses caused by hail.

W. H. Dunkley runs a large carriage factory at Winnipeg, Man., in which he employs only one armed soldier. He claims that, properly trained, an unfortunates can do almost as much as a perfect man.

Three persons, Miss Louisa Zanders, a school teacher, Arthur Delbridge and Clement Deuil, all of Gardiner, Wis., are dead as a result of their motor car plunging off a bridge, striking a wire carrying 23,000 volts. All three were electrocuted.

Thomas Hardy, the English novelist, has a habit of invariably wearing two waistcoats. Indeed, in a severe winter, he has been known to don as many as four, but even on the hottest summer day he sticks to his two, the outside one being generally of the old-fashioned knitted sort.

An old shepherd who has just died in an English village was unable to count beyond three. Nevertheless, he had charge of large flocks of sheep and could tell not merely when one was missing, but which particular animal had disappeared. The old man was unwilling to explain how he did it, and the secret died with him.

A BIRD'S EYE VIEW OF LOCAL HAPPENINGS

It was recently my privilege to spend a week or so in a small country town and it was good to see the real fellowship and community spirit that existed between the people. Being an "old timer" I was entertained in every home possible during short a visit and the friends of my childhood rallied around me constantly extending the glad hand until once more I felt that this world was not a bad place to live in after all.

It is a grand and glorious feeling that feeling of being welcome and being a part of the things that be. But did you ever go into a strange town screw up your courage to attend a strange church all by your lonesome? Did you ever walk up the strange aisle of that strange church sit in a strange pew beside a strange lady who ever and anon turned a strange eye upon you and strange clothes and did you ever hear the other strangers ask in a strange whisper who that stranger was? And didn't you have a strange feeling? Wasn't it a grand feeling of being welcome and being a part of the things that be.

A case of that rare disease, Malta fever, has been discovered in Toronto. It should not be confused, says an exchange, with malt fever, which is anything but rare.

I knew a young man once who experienced all those strange feelings. To be sure he was not a handsome young man, nor was he very handsomely dressed. He did not even wear his hair parted in the middle but he was one of the finest of his kind never the less. I also knew a perfectly nice young lady who found employment in just such a strange town. She had been accustomed to doing things and not to standing still and watching the world go by. Soon strange whispers began to reach her ears of what the strange people in that strange town were saying about her, a stranger. It is wonderful how swiftly such whispers fly and how quickly they reach the ears of the person concerned. It is wonderful, too, how rapidly a story increases in volume and vim as it progresses from one mouth to another. So it is to be expected that the whispered suggestions reflecting on the character of this strange young lady who had come to that strange town, soon bore fruit and she who had come to them warm hearted, pure and sweet, found herself standing alone and wondering why she could not win the friendship and confidence of those with whom she came in contact. Was it jealousy that had started the ball of ill report a-rolling or was it merely the smallness of the people in that strange little town who could find nothing more interesting to talk about than the doings of a stranger among them.

I heard a rather amusing little incident last week. A lady was passing one of the grocery stores and noticed in the window a quantity of prunes reduced in price. Turning to a gentleman standing near she remarked, "I suppose soft coal will be coming down next—I see prunes are down." "I don't see that soft coal stands much chance of dropping," came the answer. "Why not?" remarked the lady, "both prunes and soft coal are half stoues, are they not."

The transportation companies have found that raising the passenger and freight rates has not increased the revenue. People are simply not travelling unless compelled to and the revolt which has set in all over America against high prices has cut down the output of factories to such an extent that freights have been seriously affected. The trains and boats are really up against it and here in Digby many of the employees are living in daily expectation of being laid off or put on half time.

WOMEN OUST THE MEN FROM ALL CITY OFFICES

Under a general indictment of inefficiency, the women, of Yoncalla, Ore., organized a campaign against the men office holders and carried it on so quietly that their opponents did not realize what was taking place until the votes were counted.

At pre election meetings, attended solely by women, charges were made that city officials were permitting broken sidewalks to go unrepaired, that speeding automobiles were uncontrolled, that streets were insufficiently lighted, and that general slackness in municipal affairs prevailed.

As a cure of these alleged ills, the women were urged to elect a set of city officials of their own sex. The count of the ballots showed they did so.

Nova Scotians have enjoyed a wonderfully fine autumn so far. In Toronto on November 15 and 16 more snow fell, says the Toronto Globe, than "on any day in November prior to the 16th as far back as 1848."

"Queer thing about metals," says the Quebec Telegraph, "most men spend their lives striving for silver and gold, but their brains are leaden and they don't have much luck. They go to the doctor and he probably prescribes iron, and in the final analysis it is sometimes discovered that they develop more brass than any other kind of mineral."

MISS MILLER'S TRIP TO THE BATTLEFIELDS

Miss Annie Miller, former Bear River girl, now of Yarmouth, has just returned from an extended European tour. Knowing Miss Miller's keen appreciation of such an experience, the Bear River Institute asked her for a description of the trip, especially her visit to the battlefields of France for publication and the following interesting letter has been received.

OKADENE SCHOOL.

An adjourned school meeting was held in Okadene school on Monday evening to hear the report of the Committee on the advisability of installing fire escapes. The report was submitted and after discussion the secretary was instructed to obtain estimates of cost of the various kinds of fire escapes, and submit same to an adjourned school meeting to be held Monday evening, Dec. 13th, at 8 p. m. The conclusion of opinion was that two iron escapes should be erected one on the east and one on the west side of the building. Final action will be taken at the adjourned school meeting. As this is a matter of vital importance to those having children in the school all rate payers should be present to take action.

On account of the crowded conditions of the primary department the advisability of securing an additional teacher or assistant is being considered by the board of trustees.

Obituary

MRS. JOHN LECRAIN.

Mrs. John Lécraïn died a few days after her husband's death, aged eighty-six years. Funeral services were held from her late home Saturday afternoon, conducted by Rev. R. E. S. Gordon, interment at Clemensport, her birthplace home. She is survived by her husband, two sons and one daughter.

MRS. SOPHORA PARKER.

Again it is our duty to pay tribute to the memory of one of our aged residents. Mrs. Sophora Parker, at the age of eighty-six years, wife of Capt. James Parker, who predeceased her some twenty-five years, passed peacefully to the great beyond last Wednesday. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Wakeling, Melrose, and Miss Gertrude, in Boston. Also sister Mrs. Fletcher Milbury of this town. The funeral took place from the home of Mrs. F. Chalmers, Thursday afternoon conducted by Rev. R. S. Gordon.

PRESTLEY LONG.

On Thursday, Nov. 24th, the community was shocked to hear of the very sudden death, while partaking of a noon day meal, of Priestley Long, of Bear River East. Earlier in the day he had been instructed to look after the house of a friend, but nothing more serious was anticipated by his family, to whom the sympathy of all was extended. He was in his sixties, but 72 years of age, and leaves his wife, formerly Miss Milbury, to mourn; also the following children: Eva (Mrs. McKinnon) living in New York; Jasper in the West, Howard and Pearl at home. Six brothers are living: namely, Corry, Jacob, John, Fletcher, Manning and Emerson, and one half brother, Charles Long, of Clemensport. He was for many years a supporter of the Methodist church and always interested in its welfare. In politics a life-long Liberal. His funeral took place on Sunday afternoon and was conducted by the Brethren of Masonic Lodge. There was a large attendance of mourners from Deep Brook, Clemensport and Bear River.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Readers of the Courier will doubtless be looking for a further announcement concerning the lecturer and entertainer, Mr. Walter McKaye, assisted by Miss Nancy Ford, who are to appear in Bear River under the auspices of the Woman's Institute, on Thursday evening, December 9th, at 8 p. m., in the Green Lantern hall.

The Institute has been most fortunate in securing the services of so able and attractive an entertainer. Mr. McKaye is well known throughout the cities and larger towns of Canada, he being one of the finest speakers of the Western Chautauqua. Press comments assure us that all in Bear River, who avail themselves of this opportunity, will hear a most interesting address. Mr. McKaye's subject "The Soul of a Nation," deals with the Canada that shall arise from the ashes of the war. In addition to the address of the evening by Mr. McKaye, various vocal selections will be rendered by Miss Nancy Ford accompanied by Mrs. Reginald Goodday. From the flattering comments of the press on her rendition, we are assured that all music lovers will enjoy a rare treat. Mr. McKaye is giving us an evening between his appearances before the Canadian clubs of Halifax and Yarmouth. No one should miss the opportunity of hearing this inspiring address and splendid musical program.

The L.A.G.W.V.A. Tea Room

Pointney, Lawrenceston, G. D. Deaton, Halifax.

Card of Thanks

Mrs. J. E. WAKELING and MISS GERTRUDE PARKER wish to thank the many friends who rendered assistance and sympathy during the recent illness and death of their mother, Mrs. S. Parker, who passed away on November 2, 1920.
Bear River, N. S., Dec. 2, 1920.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mr. and Mrs. V. W. Clarke left on Tuesday for a short visit to Halifax.

R. E. Felius, of Lawrenceston, made a short business trip to this town on Thursday.

Ray LeCraïn is home for a few days being called home by the death of his mother.

Mrs. Chipman Chisholm, who has been an invalid for some time, is able to be out again.

Miss Louise Jones, one of our young ladies, is on the staff of the Mount Allison paper the "Argosy".

We are glad to see Mrs. J. A. Rice out again, after being confined to her room for some days on account of illness.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Macleod, and little son and daughter, Billy and Nancy, left last week for New York where they will spend several weeks.

Mrs. George Peck, who has been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism, is under the careful treatment of Dr. Lovett slowly convalescing.

Mrs. Arthur Wakeling, who has been in town the last few weeks, kindly caring for her mother returned to her home in Melrose, Mass. on Saturday.

Rev. W. J. Whitton has accepted a call to the Methodist Church at Parrboro, subject to the approval of Conference, which meets at the close of the ecclesiastical year in June next.

Local and General

Lovett Frizale, while working in Yarmouth had the misfortune to cut his foot quite badly and has been home for two weeks.

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Wade on Saturday evening when their daughter Gladys was united in marriage to James Edgar Smallie of Digby. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. S. Gordon.

The ladies of the Methodist Aid Society with much fancy sale and a glass supper in the vestry of the church on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 7th. Supper for adults 50 cents, children under 12 years, 35 cents. Everybody will be welcome and a good time may be expected.

An interesting article on "Citizenship and Community Life," by R. E. Thurber, is unavoidably held over on account of shortage of help in the composing room. It will probably be run as a first page article next week.—Editor Courier.

The Financial District meeting of the Methodist Church convened on Tuesday and Wednesday last week, but owing to the very stormy weather, the attendance was much smaller than expected. Those who were present enjoyed the interesting addresses given by several of the visiting clergymen.

The members of the Methodist church, as well as the citizens of Bear River, generally sympathize with Mrs. (Rev.) Alban Daniel, now of Parrboro, in the death of her mother, the late Mrs. James McCabe, which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. M. Ferrard, Amherst, a few days ago.

Local and General

The pie social held by the members of Royal Division on Monday evening was a big success, a good time being enjoyed and the sum of $78.55 raised toward building roof of Temperance Hall.

The Ladies Circle, on account of the inclemency of the weather, had no meeting last week, but met on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Harry Moore.

A large number was present and a very pleasant evening spent.

Invitations will soon be issued to all members and friends of the B. Y. P. U. for a grand rally, to get it back to its original basis, and doing the work for which it was organized—that of teaching the young people to be more efficient workers, and to fill their places in the different spheres to which they may be called.

During the past few days the attraction at the Grand Central sample room has been the tempting display in the culinary art, given by Mrs. Salvage, of Montreal, demonstrator for the firm of E. W. Gillet Co., showing the benefits resulting from the use of Magic Baking Powder in the production of these dainties.

The ladies of the town have enjoyed meeting Mrs. Salvage and hearing her very practical talk on a subject that is always an interesting one to the fair sex.

Different varieties of cake were served during the afternoon of each day, and everyone given an opportunity to judge for herself of the quality. The charming personality of the demonstrator has won for her many friends, who will wish her success personally as well as in the interest of her business.

Local and General

Methodist Ladies Aid met on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Albert Yarrille.

Spencer Bear River, Capt. A. Moore arrived from St. John with general cargo on Friday.

Two cow loads of granite were towed up the River on Friday for Thelbert Rice and taken to the granite works at the South End where Mr. Rice is doing a hauling business.

The scholars of Oakdene School are making preparations for their annual Christmas Concert, under the management of the teaching staff. We always get the best when Oakdene comes before the public.

After the close of a short session of Friendship Lodge, I. O. O. F. on Thursday evening, Nov. 25th, by special invitation the ladies of this Lodge met with the brethren for the purpose of perfecting arrangements for celebrating the anniversary of the institution of Oddfellowship in our town. A very pleasant and profitable evening was spent, active committees were formed, and a general plan of work laid out. At the close of the business session a social hour was enjoyed during which lunch was served. When the time rolls around it is expected a real treat will be offered to the public, from which great financial gain is hoped for, same to be applied to the building fund for the proposed I. O. O. F. Hall.

Thomas A. Edison Wants To See An Amberola In YOUR Home This Christmas!

Dainty Little Christmas Gifts in Cretonne

By DOROTHY PERKINS

(Copyright, by A. Neely Hall.)

Dainty gifts covered in cretonne are certain to find a welcome in any household, and such a variety of things can be made that you will have no difficulty in filling a wish of each one whom you wish to remember on Christmas day.

The unique pair of book ends in Fig. 1 are made of strip cane. The secret of making satisfactory book ends is to properly weight them so they will not upset, and the book ends illustrated are weighted by filling the cane with sand.

Cretonne with small patterns is the most desirable for small articles, and patterns with dark backgrounds are preferable for articles such as the book ends, which are likely to soil through much handling. Sew a piece of cretonne around the sides of each can, then by means of a gathering string gather the cloth as indicated in Fig. 1. Sew a fancy button, or a cretonne covered button, to the center of the top.

Fig. 2 shows a handy twine holder made of a strip cane. A hole must be placed through the exact center of the cane bottom as an outlet for the string (A, Fig. 3), and holes one-half inch apart must be placed through the top rim to provide a means of fastening the top edge of the cretonne. The holes can be perforated by means of a nail and hammer. Gather the cretonne on the bottom, and turn the top edge over the rim and sew through the perforations in the rim.

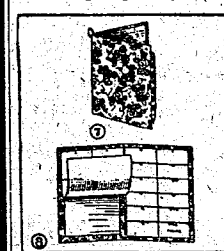

Make a hanger for the twine holder out of cretonne or ribbon.

The hanging workbox in Fig. 4 requires a square cardboard box. Remove two adjacent sides of both the box and cover (Fig. 5), then stitch the cover to the box (Fig. 6). The cretonne may either be stitched over the open edges of the box, or be glued to the cardboard. Sew a doubled strip of cretonne, or a ribbon, to the open corners for a hanger.

The dainty telephone book in Fig. 7 provides a handy directory for numbers used frequently, and numbers which may be wanted quickly in cases of emergency. The covers are of cardboard 6 inches wide and 8 inches long, and are hinged together by the cretonne covering. Lap the cretonne over the edges as indicated in Fig. 8, and glue it to the cardboard, and make a pocket on one edge, to hold a pencil. Cut sheets of writing paper of the right size to extend a trifle over the lapped edges of the cretonne, and glue them in place; then divide the paper into spaces, and insert the spaces (Fig. 9). A handy way of making a basket is shown in Fig. 10.

Pretty Christmas Gifts That Any Girl Can Make

By DOROTHY PERKINS

(Copyright, by A. Neely Hall.)

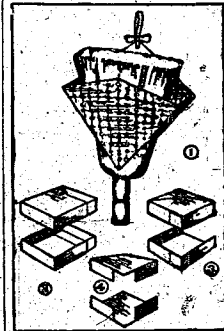

Most of the material required for the gifts in the illustrations can be picked up at home, which will be appreciated by every girl who has many to remember at Christmas time and small means to procure gifts with. Besides, these gifts are quickly made.

A Fancywork Basket.
You will not make a mistake in providing a handy workbasket like that in Fig. 1, for mother. Its pockets for needles, thread, scissors and other small articles, are constructed outside of the basket, which leaves the entire inside space for work. A grape-basket, or any basket of about its size, may be used. Figure 2 shows the start of an end pocket. Cut a piece of cardboard of the shape of A (Fig. 3), and hinge it to the basket bottom by means of strip B. With both pockets started, cover the basket with cretonne, running it around the cardboard ends to provide a pocket (Fig. 3). Conceal the handle by wrapping a strip of cretonne around it.

A Whisk-Broom Holder.
Either a man or woman will appreciate this convenient article. A stationary box forms its foundation.

Such a box usually has the proportions shown in Fig. 2. The first thing to do is to remove one end, and enough of the top, bottom and sides, to make the box square. The dotted line in Fig. 2 shows where to cut. The second step is to remove a side adjoining the top to the shape of the finished front, and cut away one corner to form the open bottom of the rack. This cutting is shown by dotted lines in Fig. 3, and Fig. 4 shows the pieces thus prepared. Sew together what remains of the box and cover, then conceal the surface with cretonne and fasten a small bow and loop of ribbon through a hole punched through the upper corner of the back, for a hanger.

This unique holder may be used for either crocheted-cotton or twine. It requires the head of a small doll (Fig. 3), and a small "cat" basket (Fig. 5). The doll's head must be fastened to the basket in such a way that it can be removed easily for putting a new ball inside of the basket, so the best method of attaching it is with bands of ribbon, passing these around the doll's neck and shoulders, and around the basket, and tying the ends in bows. Cut a strip of pretty colored silk of the shape shown in Fig. 4, run a thread through a hem made on one edge, for a gathering string, and by means of this thread gather the silk about the doll's head to form a rim, and sew it. Add a neck ribbon. Figure 5 shows how the twine or crocheted cotton is pulled out through one of the small openings.

G. R. CONDON

Copyright, 1915, 1916, by Metropolitan Magazine.

Mr. Baxter stared.
"Well, I'll be darned!" he said.
"When you were young," the Baxter repeated, with considerable irritation. "How old do you think you are?"
"I'm going on eighteen," said William firmly. "I know plenty of cases—cases where the boy began shaving into lethargy."
"What's the matter with him?" Mr. Baxter inquired heatedly of his wife.
"William again came to life." "I was saying that a person's age is different according to circumstances," he explained. "You take Genesis' father. Well, he was married when he was sixteen. Then there was a case over in Iowa that lots of people know about and nobody thinks anything of. A young man over there in Iowa that was seventeen years old began shaving when he was thirteen and shaved every day for four years, and now—"
He was interrupted by his father.
"And now, I suppose, he's got 'whiskers' he burst forth. 'There's an ambition for you! My soul!'"

CHAPTER XL

It was Jane who took up the tale. She had been listening with growing excitement, her eyes fixed piercingly upon William. "He's got a beard!" she cried, alluding not to her brother, but to the faded Iowa. "I heard Willie tell Mr. Genesis about it."
"It seems to lie heavily on your mind," Mr. Baxter said to William. "I suppose you feel that in the face of such an example your life between the ages of thirteen and seventeen has been virtually thrown away."
William had again relapsed, but he roused himself feebly. "Sir?" he said.
"What is the matter with him?" Mr. Baxter demanded. "He's the child, lately he seems to be hibernating and only responds by a slight twitching when poked with a stick. The other half of the time he either behaves like I don't know what or talks about children growing whiskers in Iowa. Hasn't that girl left town yet?"
William left the table. Mr. Baxter looked distressed. As for Mr. Baxter, he felt a little remorse undoubtedly, but he was also puzzled. He referred to his mystification a little later as he sat with his evening paper in the library.

"I don't know what I said to that tetchy boy to hurt him," he began in a tone of self-defense. "He's the child that there was anything too rough for him to stand in a little sarcasm."
"I think he's married," said Jane.
"What?" And her parents united their hilarity.

"I do think he's married," Jane insisted, unmoved. "I think he's married with that Miss Pratt."
"Well," said her father, "he does seem upset, and it may be that her visit and the idea of whiskers, coming so close together, is more than mere coincidence, but I hardly think Willie is married, Jane."
"Well, then," she returned thoughtfully, "he's almost married. I know that much, anyway."
"What makes you think so?"
"Well, because, I kind of thought he must be married, or anyone would be, when he talked to Mr. Genesis this morning. He said he had been married eleven years old. He said so, and I heard him. And he said there were eleven people married that were only seventeen, and an' this boy in Iowa, got a full beard and got married too. And he said Mr. Genesis was only sixteen when he was married. He talked all about getting married when you're seventeen years old, and he said how people thought it was the best thing could happen. So I just know he's almost married."

"You haven't any other reason, have you, Jane?" the mother asked.
"Yes," said Jane promptly. "And it's a very good reason, too. Miss Pratt calls you 'mamma' as if you were her mamma. She does it when she talks to Willie."

"Yes, I heard her. And Willie said, 'I don't know what you'll think about mother.' He said, 'I don't know what you'll think about mother,' to Miss Pratt."

Miss Baxter looked a little startled, and her husband frowned.
"Yes," went on Jane, "an' when they were walking they stopped and an' talked to me, an' Miss Pratt said, 'it's our little sister.'"
"Did she really?" Mrs. Baxter asked.

"Why, you can ask Willie," she said. "It's that funny way. Our little sister, that's what she said. An' Miss Pratt said, 'Everybody would love an' little sister if mamma washed her in soap an' water.' You can ask Willie."

"Hush, dear," said Mrs. Baxter. "All this doesn't mean anything at all, especially such nonsense as Willie's thinking of being married. It's your bed-time."

"Well, but mamma—"
"Come along, Jane."
"He certainly seems to be a queer state," said Mr. Baxter when his wife returned.

At this his wife's tone became serious.

She said, "You would do as crazy a thing as that?"
Mr. Baxter laughed. "Well, I don't know what he'd do it on. I don't suppose he has more than a dollar in his possession."

"Yes, he has," she returned quickly. "Day before yesterday there was a secondhand furniture man here, and I was too busy to see him, but I wanted the store in the cellar cleared out, and I told Willie he could have what ever the man would pay him for the junk in there if he'd watch to see that he didn't take anything. They found some old pieces that I'd forgotten underneath things, and altogether the man paid Willie $9.85."

"But, mercy me," exclaimed Mr. Baxter, "that's not a bad lot, but she wouldn't run away and marry a boy just barely seventeen on $9.85!"

"Oh, no," said Mrs. Baxter. "At least I don't think so. Of course she does as crazy things as boys sometimes do in their way. I was thinking—"

She paused. "Of course there couldn't be anything in it, but it did seem a little strange."

"What did?"
"Why, just before I came downstairs Adella came for the laundry, and I asked her if she'd seen Willie, and she said he'd put on his dark suit after dinner, and he went out through the kitchen, carrying his suitcase."

"He did?"
"Of course," Mrs. Baxter went on slowly. "I couldn't believe he'd do such a thing, but he really is in a prepossession way over this little Miss Pratt, and he did have that money."

"By George!" Mr. Baxter got upon his feet. "The way he talked at dinner, I could compute near believing he hasn't any more brains left than to get married on $9.85! I wouldn't put it past him. By George, I wouldn't!"

"Do you think we'd better go down to the Parachers? We'd just say we came to call, of course, and I—"

"Get your hat on," he said. "I don't think there's anything in it at all, but we'd just as well drop down there. It can't hurt anything."

"Of course I don't think," she began. "Neither do I," he interrupted abruptly. "But with a boy of his age crazy enough to think he's in love how do you expect him to get on? We're only his parents. Get your hat on."

But when the uneasy couple found themselves before the house of the Parachers they decided that in the darkness and present darkness it was all right. Of course I knew it would be.

"Why, certainly," said Mr. Baxter as they turned. "Even if Willie were as crazy as that, the little girl would have more sense. I wouldn't have thought anything of it if you hadn't told me about the suit case. That looked sort of queer."

And when they came to their own house again there was William sitting alone and silent upon the steps of the porch.

"I thought you'd gone out, Willie," said his mother as they paused beside him.

"Mamma?"
"What said you went out, carrying your suitcase?"

"Oh, yes," he said languidly. "If you leave clothes at Schwartz's in the morning, you said I looked damp at dinner, so I took 'em over and left 'em there."

"I see," Mrs. Baxter followed her husband to the door, and she stopped on the threshold and called back. "Don't sit there too long, Willie. The dew is falling, and it rained so hard today, I'm afraid it might be damp."

"Mamma?"
"Come on," Mr. Baxter said to his wife. "He's down on the Paracher's porch, not out in front here. Of course he can't hear you. It's three blocks and a half."

But William's father was mistaken. Little he knew. William was not upon the porch of the Parachers, with May Parcher and Joe Bullitt and May Parcher. He was home. It was all right. Of course I knew it would be.

"Why, certainly," said Mr. Baxter as they turned. "Even if Willie were as crazy as that, the little girl would have more sense. I wouldn't have thought anything of it if you hadn't told me about the suit case. That looked sort of queer."

And when they came to their own house again there was William sitting alone and silent upon the steps of the porch.

"I thought you'd gone out, Willie," said his mother as they paused beside him.

"Mamma?"
"What said you went out, carrying your suitcase?"

Make It A Xmas Gift

Digby Weekly Courier Unparalleled Subscription and War Book Clubbing Offer, Good From Now Until Dec. 31st, 1920

Everybody will want "Nova Scotia's Great War Record," the new book just issued from the pen of Capt. Huat, and which has been reviewed so favorably by distinguished critics such as Lieut.-Governor Grant, Premier Murray, J. D. Logan, Dr. Hayes and others.

In order to give our subscribers and others the opportunity of obtaining it on easy terms, J. J. Wallis, the editor of the Courier, has agreed to act as agent for the Nova Scotia Veteran Publishing Co., Ltd., for Digby County, and to offer the book at a clubbing rate with the Weekly Courier, until Dec. 31st, as follows:—

Weekly Courier to Dec. 31st, 1922 and "War Record"

$5.00 Cloth Edition and Courier	$5.50
$3.50 Board " " "	$4.50

This offer holds good until Dec. 31st, 1920, and is a splendid opportunity for subscribers and others to get the Book and Courier at a very much reduced rate.

War Records Sold Separately as Desired

The "War Record" will also be sold at its regular prices, $5.00 and $3.50, at the Digby Weekly Courier Office, the Book Stores and by agents throughout Digby Co.

General Agent for Digby County

It was the morning of the great day when a trolley ride and picnic were to be given in honor of Miss Pratt. Willie had a "spired" argument with his mother on the time honored subject of taking an overcoat and finally submitted to her arguments.

She hung the garment upon his arm, kissed him, and he departed in a deprecate manner.

However, having worn his tragic face for three blocks, he halted before a corner drug store and permitted his expression to improve. He gazed upon the display of "My Little Sweetheart All Tobacco Cuban Cigarettes, the Package of Twenty For 10 Cents." William was not a smoker that is to say, he had made the usual boyhood experiments, finding them discouraging—and, though at times he considered it humorously man about town to say to a smoking friend, "Well, I'll tackle one o' your old coffin nails," he had never made a purchase of tobacco in his life. He was, however, now to take himself with a package of Little Sweethearts upon the excursion. And the name! It thrilled him incessantly, bringing a tenderness into his eyes and a glow into his bosom.

He entered and managed to make his purchase in a matter of fact way, as he was doing something quite unemotional; then he said to the clerk:

"Oh, by the bye—ah, there's something I wanted to 'tend to, now I happen to be here. I was on my way to take this overcoat to—to get something altered at the tailor's for next winter. 'Course I wouldn't want it till winter, but I thought I might as well get it done." He paused, laughing carelessly, for greater plausibility. "I thought he'd probably want lots of time on the job—he's a slow worker, I've noticed—so I decided I might as well go ahead and let him get at it. Well, so I was on my way there, but I just noticed I only got about six minutes more to get to a meeting, important engagement I got this morning, and I'd like to leave it here and come by and get it on my way home this evening."

"Sure," said the clerk. "Hanging it on that hook inside the prescription counter. There's one there already. B'longs to your friend, that young Bullitt fellow. He was in here awhile ago and said that's his coat."

It was with a lighter heart that he left his overcoat behind him, and stepped out of the drug store. That brought him within sight of the young people, about thirty in number, gathered upon the small lawn beside Mr. Parcher's house. Miss Pratt stood among them in her blue dress and white flouffe nestling in her arms.

She saw him. The small blond head and the delicious little frown above his chin came into his mind. His mouth fell unconsciously open, and his eyes grew glassy with the intensity of meaning he put into the silent response he sent across the picket fence and the interstices of the laughing group.

Bull In a China Shop

There are all kinds of Bulls, good and bad, just like men. There is John Bull for instance, pretty fair chap, when bothered too much will sometimes flash fire from his eyes, but is one of the best animals in the world. But it's not about John that we wish to speak, but Peter Bull, half brother to John, he lives out on one of the roads leading into Digby, pretty good critter is Peter, says little but thinks a great deal. His master has a neighbor who is ever bothering him to make bets, they bet on the most trivial things, often betting on how many flies would get into the molasses during dinner hour. "Yes sir, think of that. Well one day this man offered to bet $10.00 that Peter Bull, if taken to Letteney's China Department, would butt the dishes all to pieces. Taken, said Peter's master. So the day was arranged to take Peter in to Letteney's Store. His master had him by the head and the other man by the tail, and you can just feel sure there was some twisting done. It was a queer sight to see them marching past the counter back to China Department; Peter feeling ugly but when he saw the beautiful Crockeryware, beautifully fashioned and coloured, his anger was gone and he stood upon his hind legs and slapped his fore paws together with delight and the man lost his ten dollars.

MAXWELL

Has Won Its Following Through Its Quality

THE metals used in the Maxwell chassis compare favorably pound for pound with those in the best cars that the world has produced, according to metallurgists.

There is a real reason for this quality in a Maxwell.

The fundamental purpose of the Maxwell is to carry the same passenger load over the same roads and at the same speeds as larger and more expensive cars.

But it must perform this mission in an extremely economical way.

Therefore the Maxwell has to be light. But to make it strong as well as light only the very best of materials can be employed.

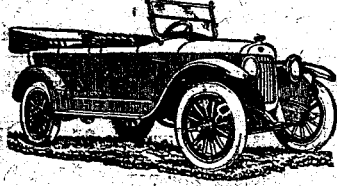

Hence, the quality metals.

And it is through the quality of its metals that Maxwell has developed its following.

This is a following that began five years ago with a foundation of 5,000 and now reaches a mark of 100,000 new Maxwell enthusiasts in 1920.

300,000 Maxwells now on the highways of two continents are a daily endorsement of the merit of this great car.

For a Man's Desk

If there is anything a man appreciates more than another it is a waste basket to hold things that he doesn't want or a case to hold things that he does want. Here are both these desirable gifts, made to match, and happy is the man who will receive them at Christmas time.

The waste basket has a foundation of very light wood, covered with a dull rose-colored tapestry and finished with dark green braid. Handles with tassels to match prove convenient. A medallion of figured tapestry bound by braid completes this practical and handsome gift. The case for papers is made to match the basket.

Something New in Bags

A basket crocheted of twine and dipped in shellac, is allowed to dry, after being shaped to suit the fancy of its maker. It is then adorned with odd flowers as shown in the picture above, and converted into a pretty bag by lining it with silk and extending the silk above the top of the basket. The silk gathers up at the top on a ribbon. If one goes to present a friend with the ultimate in luxurious laundry bags, this affair will answer, for it will grace any dressing room and serve to catch soiled handkerchiefs and neckwear.

Some machines have automatic attachments and some have sherriff's attachments.

Baccart has been unusually profitable this year to the Casino at Deauville, France. It is calculated that more than $35,000,000 changed hands. The Casino authorities made $3,400,000 on their tables.

According to the advertisement of a Guarantee Company in a New York newspaper, recently, there is a crime wave covering the world. "We believe," says the advertisement, "that never before in the history of the world have there been so many pay-roll, hold-ups, murderous attacks, burglaries, bank robberies and hold-ups and mercantile hold-ups, and defaults on the part of trusted employees such as has been experienced during the past eighteen months."

A CHRISTMAS MAGNIFIED 52 TIMES

So why the world is growing more sensible about Christmas giving. Small boxes and plush albums are growing scarce because givers are growing wiser. It is wise giving only that pleases permanently. You cannot do a better thing for anyone, anywhere, at Christmas, than to make a present of a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion. For 32 weeks it will delight a whole family—very age—all wholesome tastes.

Great Serials, excellent Short Stories, Editorials that father cannot equal elsewhere. Family Page, Boys' Page, Girls' Page and—well, 32 crowded issues. You cannot do better for your friends or better for your money. And a beautiful Christmas Gift folder to announce the gift, if you wish it.

Still $2.50 for a year of 52 issues, but this price not guaranteed beyond January 1, next.

New subscribers for 1921 will receive:

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues in 1921.

2. All remaining weekly 1920 issues of The Youth's Companion.

Cause of Early Old Age

The celebrated Dr. Michener, an authority on early old age, says that it is caused by poisons generated in the intestine. "When your stomach digests food properly it is absorbed without forming poisonous matter. Poisons begin in early old age and premature death is the result of 'early old age' after the 'early old age' is made your digestion sound."

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

By Prof. C. C. Laughlin, Mus. Bac., Sarnia

NO. VI.—MUSICAL PECULIARITIES.

A musician on being introduced to a stranger said, "I hear you are a music writer." "I am, sir," replied the stranger. The first music added—"I am glad to make your acquaintance as I am afflicted in the same way."

One of America's most noted song writers was Stephen Foster whose title to fame is "The Old Folks at Home," "My Old Kentucky Home." Stephen Foster would often ride up and down Broadway on a 5c bus seeking inspiration for a song.

Theodore Thomas, the pioneer conductor who did more to educate the American public than any other musician, was wise in his day. He was always on the lookout for dainty tidbits of music, and would take infinite pains to make them effective. He arranged Schumann's "Träumerei" and with its tinkling strings to descendero in the extreme and instructed the strings to continue drawing the bow across the strings without making a sound. The audience imagined it still heard the sounds floating off to an immeasurable distance. Till Thomas broke the spell by quietly laying down his baton.

Regarding singing classes, I read a most interesting account of one of the first singing classes and how it was conducted. Mr. Cheney says, "I was one of the class in 1790 in New Hampshire, the session being held at the home of one of the members and sometimes in the school house, boards being placed across the kitchen chairs to answer for seats, in form of a circle, with the singing master in the center. The master commenced by saying now follow me up and down; he would then sound the note and we would sound the note after him. At the close of the session the singing master agreed to give instruction for one shilling and six pence per night and take his pay in Indian corn. The men members paid for the tuition while the girls supplied the candles for lighting purposes."

It has been said that musical inspiration does not attack musicians in the same way. Here is one that I think is the strangest origin of any composition that I can recall. It is that of Scarlatti in his "Cats Fugue." The composer often had his favorite cat on his shoulder as he sat at his desk. One day the cat became scared at something and springing from his shoulder ran across the key-board and away, but in her flight she struck several notes on the key-board which Scarlatti afterward made into a fugue in her honor.

Brahms, the great music master, hated lionizing but he certainly possessed a high sense of humor. Once when being entertained by some of his friends in a Vienna restaurant the landlord brought on his best wine with this remark: "Here is a wine that surpasses all others just as the music of Brahms does all other composers." Well," said Brahms, "take it away and bring me a bottle of Bach."

In a recent article in the Musical Quarterly, the writer tells of some strange methods for inspirations such as—Haydn took refuge in prayer and rosary; Beethoven in the open air and nature; Mozart, in paper and ink; Wagner depended on costly robes of silk and velvet saturated in rich colors. Brahms declared that a fine quality of paper was a real source of inspiration to him; Tschakowsky needed air and trees; Halsey the noise of the tea kettle; Strauss wine and cigars, or a game of tarot; Suppe a good dose of snuff; Debussy, Donizetti was at his best when fixing his eyes at a distant point; Thomas when lying in bed; Balzac when clothed in a monk's cassock; and Gluck when at his piano placed in the midst of an open field in the sunshine.

L. C. Thornton, ex. California, who, without arms, operates a motor car by the use of slings and hooks also has the distinction of being the world's only armless aviator.

A. N. Lawrence, foreign sales agent for a large motor company, told the Windsor, Ontario, Chamber of Commerce the other day that during a trip of 62,000 miles around the world, he had not seen one Canadian salesman. United States salesman, he said, are monopolizing the export trade of the British Dominions.

As an act of courtesy it is proposed that Mr. E. M. McClellan, of Kansas City, one of the Republican Presidential electors from Missouri, be delegated to carry to President-elect Harding the official notification that he carried Missouri. It would be the first time in the history of the United States that a woman presented to the successful candidate the notification of his election.

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

VII.—CHAMBER MUSIC.

The term "Chamber Music" may be said to be any music suitable to be performed privately, in a room or small concert hall, orchestra music or opera.

Chamber music includes many varieties of compositions. It is one of the branches of music which is still most vigorously alive, consisting mainly of such combinations and varieties as solos, duets, trios, quartets of strings and wind instruments, also songs, glee, piano-forte solos and duets.

The earliest instrumental Chamber music of which anything certain is known, was that composed for the set of viols by such composers as Dowland, born 1562, who was a famous lute player in London, England. Dowland composed music for the six instruments comprising the Chest of Viols.

John Jenkins is said to be the first musician who specialized in instrumental compositions. He wrote fanciful little pieces of the Chamber music class for viols and organ.

Chamber concerts are still very much in vogue. The Chamber band consists of musicians who play only Chamber music adapted for private or small halls.

The modern compositions of the Chamber music class from the duet to the octet, are usually written in sonata form for several instruments in concert with this added distinction that each instrument will play an individual part, but a mere part to complete the harmony.

Chamber music originated during the middle ages to add to the pleasure and entertainment of the banqueters; but not until the violin became a prominent instrument did Chamber music take a definite form.

One of the first to compose Chamber music in a definite form was Sammartini, born 1705 (Milan). He produced over a thousand works among which was much Chamber music. He is known also as the teacher of Gluck and was the predecessor of Haydn in the department of this class of music.

Haydn's mother had set her heart on making him a priest, but through the persuasion of his father and others interested, overcame her objections. Haydn's life, as many of our great musicians, was a life of ups and downs. When he was eight years of age Rutter of St. Stephen's Cathedral, Vienna, who was searching for boy singers, was so pleased with Haydn's voice, and ability that he at once took him to Vienna. At seventeen Haydn found himself on the street, homeless, and money, and in the shabbiest of clothes. A friend took him in till he could rent his own attic.

Haydn's great aim in life was to become a really great musician. A publisher living in the same town loaned him some volumes of music, these Haydn read and re-read, also copied and analyzed them all and at twenty-three years of age his great opportunity came. Earl von Furstburg invited Haydn to his country house. Haydn found there the usual country house orchestra, consisting of a few strings, a couple of horns and oboes. Haydn saw his opportunity and made use of it, and applied his knowledge to the miniature orchestra. For this organization, he wrote his great string quartets, and other important Chamber music. From this time on, Haydn read and re-read, also composed his music without interruption.

Haydn started life as the son of a poor peasant and for years struggling against poverty and want, becoming a rich man and devoted himself to his work.

Father or Papa Haydn, as he was affectionately addressed by younger contemporaries, was the father of the sonata form and of modern instrumental music and modern humor, but he was most happy in his compositions for quartets and Chamber music.

TOWN COUNCIL, CITIZENSHIP AND COMMUNITY LIFE

The regular meeting of the Town Counciling report, The leaves gathered, and Councillors McPhee, S. A. Keen, George Keen, Read and Smallie.

The minutes of the regular meeting of the council held on Oct. 25th, and of the special meeting of the council held on Nov. 18th, were read and approved.

The monthly report of G. A. Vye, Superintendent of Streets and Water, was read as follows:

To His Worship the Mayor and Council:
Gentlemen:—I beg to submit the following report. The leaves gathered from all the streets and hauled away. Shutters put on the pavilion. Trees trimmed on First Ave. Cross drains all flushed and general repairs made to streets.

On the 1st of March, a water pipe on Town Hill taken up and deepened to a depth of five feet and six inch pipe put in. Also two hydrants taken up and repaired with new valves. On the 1st of May, a water pipe on Prince William and Maiden Lane and a four inch valve put in on Maiden Lane. On the 1st of June, a water pipe made with D. A. R. water pipe (tank north end of street, looking at Racquette street) was replaced.

Mr. Alcorn has 234 ft. of the stone Breastwork finished according to Specification and considerable work under way. I would recommend that the work be finished work less than the two hundred paid last month.

G. A. VYE.

On motion the report was received and adopted.
The quarterly report of E. DuVerne M. D. Medical Health Officer was read as follows:

To The Mayor and Town Councilors of Digby:

Gentlemen:—I beg to submit my report for the quarter just ended. During the latter part of September many complaints were received from householders that the water supplied to them was unfit for use. In conjunction with the water committee the whole system was thoroughly inspected but no cause for such complaints could be found. It was recommended that the system be flushed and a sample of the water be sent to the provincial bacteriologist for analysis. These recommendations were carried out, and the report of the bacteriologist which was published in the Digby Courier was very satisfactory indeed and the citizens can feel that the water they are getting is of good healthy supply of water free from any contamination whatever.

The town has been free from infectious diseases during the past three months. I would recommend that the house occupied by the late Robert Spavill be condemned by the Board of Health as unfit for human habitation.

E. DUVERNE M. D.

On motion the report was received and adopted.

Letter of G. F. Freeman was read replacing of telephone posts on water street (east side) from telephone building to Birch Street.

Coun. Read reported that he had seen A. D. Daley and discussed the matter of allowing the telephone company to place posts on Water Street, and having the electric light wires placed on the telephone posts and do away with the electric light posts now on that portion of Water Street but Mr. Daley would not consent to this being done. Mr. Daley, being present, was asked by the Mayor if he would consent to this arrangement, and he stated that he would not consent.

Letter of R. M. McQuarrie, resident engineer of the D. A. Ry. regarding and drainage of railway yard was read.

Coun. Read reported that the street committee had held a conference with Mr. McQuarrie and as a result the sidewalk from First Ave. across the tracks to the station had been completed. The matter of the loading siding had also been adjusted. No decision had yet been come to in reference to draining the railway yard and would have to be considered by the council.

Moved and seconded that the Dominion Atlantic Ry. be privileged of laying an 18 inch water pipe across Water Street to carry off the water from the railway yard. Carried.

The following bills were reported up by the finance committee:

J. P. Rice $127.00
Lee Peck 3.00
Glad Alcorn 388.00
Glad Alcorn 388.00

Firearms Allowance 250.00
Pay Roll (Street & Water) 311.50

On motion the accounts as read were ordered to be paid.

Councillor Read reported that the old water tank at the South end of Queen Street was in a very dilapidated condition and should either be repaired or filled in.

On motion the matter was referred

(Read before the N. Y. P. U. at their River)

The subject naturally suggests the duties of the citizen to the community in which he lives. It was the call of "Duty" that took so many of our bravest and best men over to Flanders to fight for liberty, justice, and fair play. While we need men who are willing, if need be, to lay down their lives for our country, we also need men who are willing to live for it. I shall divide the citizens duty to the community into three classes: political, social and religious.

We find too many men to-day who are unwilling to devote a little time and attention to the public good. They sacrifice public for private gain. The men who wash their hands of public concerns are as truly responsible for municipal misdeeds as the men who are in politics for their revenue only. The former neglect policies for private interests, while the latter manipulate politics for their. In Canada we have, that has been called by a candid critic, the most perfect of man-made constitutions ever devised by man, but constitutions are not worth the paper they are written on, if the citizens do not take an interest in affairs of the State. The same is true all the way down from national government to the management of the public business of a community.

If our best citizens do not take an interest in politics then the affairs of our country will be badly mismanaged.

Various business enterprises are ready to supply the money lavishly to election funds if they have hopes of thereby securing favors from parliament.

Therefore every good citizen should try to discover and oppose all tendencies to evil-doing in the party which he follows.

To-day the human race is coming to a social self-consciousness, and men are discovering that they are social beings; they are gaining what has been called the sense of humanity, and they are learning that the race is one great unit.

Our people are rooted and grounded in the life of humanity, and it flourishes in that soil, deriving its richest nourishment from it, and living itself because others live. Thought is unable to conceive of any such thing as an independent human being.

We begin life as sons, continue it as brothers, fathers, neighbors, friends, and citizens.

No man lives unto himself and no man dies unto himself, man is by nature a social being. Life is a matter of right relations, and right life is right relations.

According to St. Paul, society is the body, and man is a member of that body; and if one member suffers the whole body suffers. But we must do far more than keep the sickly alive, and preserve the weak from inevitable destruction. We must begin to share the work of charity, such as feeding the hungry, nursing the sick, and etc. We must see to it that every life shall begin its existence well endowed, capable, and strong. We must create such conditions in society as shall make it possible for every life to grow up strong, and pure, and fit.

In other words we must learn how to appraise all the factors that enter into the life of man, hereditarily, environment, personal will, and divine grace; and must use these factors that together they form the basis for man's progress and perfection.

The fact that here duty determines much in life is often lost sight of. It determines whether life shall begin its journey with tainted blood and weighted will; it determines the largeness of the work of the soul to see visions and dream dreams. Then from the hour of birth, environment begins to color and influence the life, and to decide whether one shall have a bent to hard work or evil, and shall find it hard or easy to do right. From the cradle to the grave, environment acts and reacts upon the life, to move it and mould it.

The best authorities claim that man's life has its bent and direction, its color and tone, before it has begun to reason and choose. Men's ideas of justice and right, of honesty and integrity, are all determined by the street committee to investigate and report to the Council.

A. D. Daley asked the consent of the council to his shutting off the electric lights at 12 o'clock instead of 1 a.m. as at present.

His Worship the Mayor, it was a matter about which the public should be consulted and said he would call a special meeting of the council to discuss the matter and give the public an opportunity to be heard.

and goodness, are colored and determined by their particular atmosphere. The most fundamental factor of environment is the home. It furnishes the sole environment of the little child, and exerts a powerful influence on most lives. It is primarily the houses of a community that determine its physical health and moral character.

The home furnishes the seed and soil for such evil growths as intemperance, pauperism, lust, crime, and every form of selfishness. It is the family which furnishes the highest ideal for humanity. It is the most sacred, durable and potent of human institutions and through it must be sought the replenishment and improvement of society. A good citizen will plan to have a good home. The voice of song and prayer will be heard in it, and its work will be so divided as to give each one tasks according to their several abilities, and each some time for relaxation and pleasure. Good homes are the bulwarks of the nation. Outside his home the citizen should strive to build up a good clean christian society, as

FULL FLEET IN SERVICE NEXT JULY

The Canadian Government Merchant Marine expected to have their full fleet of sixty-six vessels, representing 390,000 tons, in service next July, and next January they proposed putting two vessels, Canadian Fisher and Canadian Forester, on the passenger service to the West Indies, announced R. B. Peck, at the Electrical Luncheon. Mr. Peck is manager of the C. C. M. M., and gave some interesting facts.

The people of Canada owed these ships, he said, and they should take interest in them. The company operating them was simply the agent of Canada, and was doing all in its power to make the Marine known the world over.

Canadian Government ships were of several types ranging from 2,500 tons to 10,500 tons, carrying as their permanent crews at least 80 per cent. of Canadians. The ships were all steel and well furnished with all the latest improvements. Altogether they had crews totalling 11,700 men. Very shortly, he stated, they would put into operation several convertible coal-burning steamers, operating at expenses, as well as allowing of better service being made, by keeping up a steady head of steam.

In the latest steamers they were setting aside a certain amount of insulated space for perishable goods. This would, he felt sure, make for increased traffic.

Today the people's ships were covering the United Kingdom, South America, the Mediterranean, India, Australia and New Zealand. By means of connection they could now accept freight for India, via Vancouver, and carry it back from India in Government vessels. Canada is now in the unique position of being absolutely independent of outside interests in the transportation of her cargoes.

As to organization, they had endeavored to secure for their positions, either at home or in foreign agencies, only those men who by experience and technical knowledge were best fitted.

In conclusion he would say to the people of Canada. "These are your ships; support them, and in one year you will have the greatest mercantile marine in the world."

Two women were married to musicians. The one, the bride of a year, was pushing a baby carriage in which were three fine babies—triplets, all girls. The other woman had been in the bonds of matrimony a couple of weeks.

"What beautiful children!" exclaimed the newly married one. "Yes," replied the proud mother; let me tell you the funniest coincidence. At our wedding supper the boys who played with my husband in the orchestra serenaded him, and they played "Three Little Maids" from the Mikado. "Isn't that funny?" At this the other bride turned pale, "Mercy!" she gasped. "At our wedding supper Tom's friends serenaded him, too, and they rendered "The Sextet" from Lucia.

"For Home and Country"

ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING.

The annual business meeting of the Bear River Women's Institute was held in Temperance Hall on Monday afternoon at 3:30 p. m. 37 members being present. The minutes of the last meeting were read, followed by the annual report of the Secretary which was adopted as follows:

Miss MacDougall, superintendent of the Woman's Institute addressed a meeting in the Methodist Vestry on March 3, 1920, and organized the Bear River Woman's Institute.

The officers appointed were:
President—Mrs. (Dr.) L. J. Lovett.
1st. Vice Pres.—Mrs. Bone.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mrs. W. J. Wright.
Secretary—Mrs. J. A. Rice.
Treasurer—Mrs. A. B. Marshall.

During the year, we held twelve meetings, including three special. Among the many things the Institute interested themselves with was the sanitary conditions of the public schools. Through the efforts of the trustees of the school had drinking fountains installed and the conditions very much improved.

During the last few months we have had the benefit of the McGill Travelling Library, which has been much enjoyed by the members. We also had an open night in Oakdale Hall, all members invited, and the heads of each society in the area, being invited.

A small play was put on, called "Miss Pringles Leap Year Party" and was much enjoyed by all. Refreshments were also served.

Our Institute was requested by the Soldiers Settlement Board to take the new settlers with the new settlers.

On July 5th we invited them to meet in our rooms where we entertained our effort with music and refreshments.

A very instructive demonstration was given through our efforts by Miss Routh on the canning of fruit and vegetables.

Mrs. Lovett and Mrs. Marshall attended the Institute Convention at Truro and gave very interesting reports. The Institute held a Lawn Party in August on the grounds of Mr. W. G. Clarke, which was a great success.

We were requested to join the Canadian Federation of Women's Institutes which was held in the community. Transportation was provided to all who were unable to walk.

The Editor of the Digby Courier gave the Woman's Institute of Bear River a page of his paper and through the efforts of our committee, we have a very interesting page.

ANNE E. G. RICH, Secretary.

The report of the treasurer was received and adopted as follows:

The St. John's Guild met on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. W. M. Romans.

Mr. Carrol Clarke who is taking the Normal Course at Edmonton, Alberta, has been taken into the office of the acting principal of the college and is making examinations for him. Mr. Clarke being a B. A. of Acadia is qualified for a B. A. diploma.

Last spring R. C. Benson purchased that beautifully situated lot of land familiarly known as Clarke's Flat, erected thereon a large two storey building 125 ft. long by 40 ft. wide with annex 35 ft. wide by 35 ft. long. The large building will be used for a rotary saw mill, shingle and lath mill, and door factory, and for the making of hardwood flooring and the marine building for a power house. Next spring Mr. Benson expects to put in a smaller ship, when he will be in a position to attend to all repairs required by shipping.

During the past summer the S. S. Springhill has been repaired here, in fact practically rebuilt and the job has given entire satisfaction. The kind of labor from this particular spot is like an echo from the past; for it was here that the first marks of civilization were made in French vessel to France. They also operated the first tannery, and it is only lately that the marks of the first dwelling house has been obliterated. Tradition says that the famous Capt. Kidd buried a large part of his ill gotten treasure here and so firmly believed that many attempts have been made (under cover of night) to find it.

The latest story was made only a little more than a year ago. Clarke's Flat has a pleasant sound for many of the "girls and boys" as it was the regular place of meeting for many years, the large oak trees lending themselves easily to the old pastime of "cutting" and for nearly thirty years the Tennis Club has used it for a court. We bespeak for Mr. Benson a cordial public support, and hope that while we lose a pleasure ground, he gains a good business.

The Editor of the Digby Courier gave the Woman's Institute of Bear River a page of his paper and through the efforts of our committee, we have a very interesting page.

The Ideal Family Gift

Why Not COMBINE Your Christmas Giving In ONE Wonderful Present?

In other years Father and each of the children, as well as other members of the family, have given Mother individual Christmas presents. These gifts, especially the children's, have probably been small presents, very likely of perishable nature. While Mother has prized them all, she has had no big, lasting, handsome token of her family's love and esteem. This Christmas let all the family combine to give Mother one, big, splendid present that will last a lifetime—

EDISON'S NEW DIAMOND AMBEROLA

Think of Mother's surprise and delight to find a handsome, new Amberola Phonograph in the parlor on Christmas morning, with a card saying, "To Mother, from Dad and the children!" Or perhaps Mother and the children will put their gift-money together to surprise Father in this practical, sensible way!

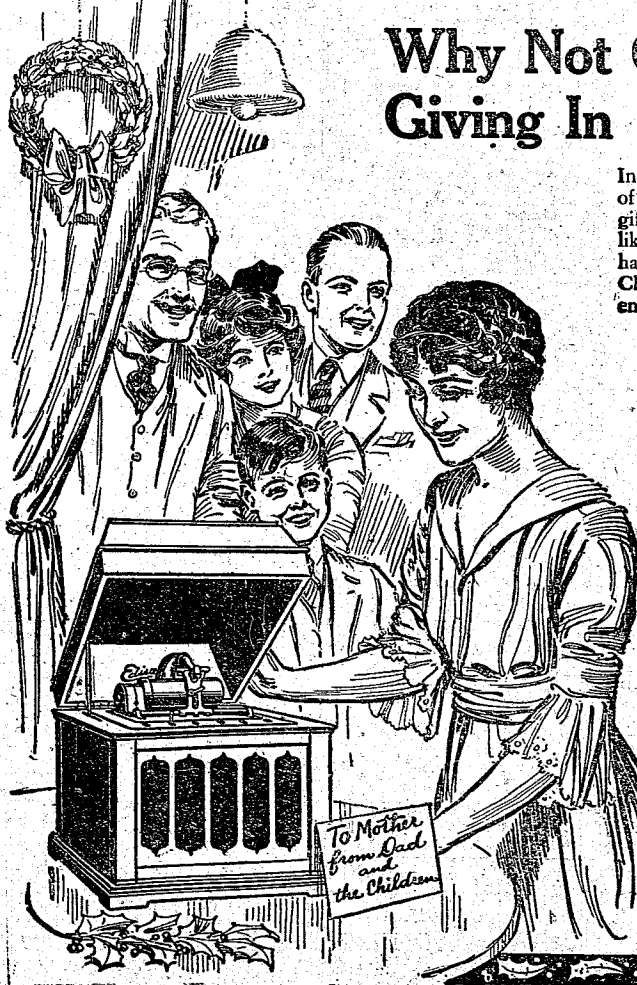

Just a little from every member of the family will bring an Amberola Phonograph into your home on Christmas morning, because as a result of Mr. Edison's expressed wish we can offer you this ideal Family Gift on the easiest possible terms!

Remember—you're not giving an ordinary phonograph—but Edison's New Diamond Amberola, the greatest phonograph value in the world! The Amberola has proved its marked superiority over "talking machines" and ordinary phonographs in numerous public tests. It's a gift worthy of Mother or Father, who deserve the best. And a gift the whole family will enjoy for years and years!

You haven't a minute to lose. Come at once, before our Christmas stock of Amberolas is exhausted. Select your Amberola and Amberol Records and we'll deliver them to your home before Christmas day. As to terms—you'll be surprised how easy we'll make it for you to give Mother or Father this wonderful Christmas present.

Obituary

OLIVE M. KINNEY.

Olive Marion Kinney, of Ashmore, died last Monday, at the age of nine years. The funeral took place on Wednesday and interment was in Riverside cemetery, Weymouth. Rev. J. H. Copeland officiated.

MARGUERET SAULNIER.

Margaret Saulnier, the little four-year old girl who was so severely scalded at Weymouth about three weeks ago, died in the Weymouth hospital on Tuesday. The funeral took place at Weymouth yesterday, interment being in St. Joseph's Cemetery.

THOMAS CROWLEY.

Thomas Crowley, one of Digby's well known residents, died last Friday after a short illness, at the age of 73. Mr. Crowley was born in Digby and had lived here all his life. He leaves a widow, who at the present time is quite ill, and one sister, Mrs. Thus of this town. The funeral took place on Wednesday, interment being at Port Wade.

CHARLES H. JONES.

There passed away at Weymouth on December first Charles H. Jones, of Weymouth. He was a familiar figure in the town, who was the first report of the battle at Lexington to General Gage. Charles Jones was a familiar figure in the town, who was the first report of the battle at Lexington to General Gage. Weymouth, he was very prominent in the social life there up to a few years ago. He was a great churchman and until his death gave out was always seen in his place at services either Sunday or weekday. Mr. Jones was in his 90th year and his familiar figure will long be missed.

MRS. EMMA A. JOURNEAY.

The remains of Mrs. Emma A. Journeay, who passed away at the home of her son, Dr. W. W. Journeay, Boston, on Friday morning, arrived in Weymouth Tuesday, and were sent forward to Weymouth. The deceased was a native of that place and always resided there until about twelve years ago when she went to Boston to make her home with her son. Mrs. Journeay was one of Digby County's most estimable ladies and by her very kindly traits she will be held in loving remembrance by many of our people for years to come. She is 80 years of age and her death followed a brief illness of pneumonia. Besides Dr. W. W., she is survived by one other son, Herbert N. Weymouth, and one daughter, Miss Emma, of Boston, who with the Doctor accompanied the remains. The funeral took place at noon, Tuesday from St. Thomas Episcopal Church, of which during all her life Mrs. Journeay was a most regular adherent and a liberal supporter.

MRS. ALFRED C. PINE.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pine, wife of Alfred C. Pine, formerly of Richibucto N. B., died at her residence, Montague Street, on Friday last, aged thirty-nine years, after a long illness. The funeral was held from her late residence on Sunday, burial taking place at Bay View cemetery. Rev. Arthur Hodge, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, officiating. Mrs. Pine's father died only six weeks ago. The following relatives are left: Her husband, one son, Harry; four brothers, Albert B. Hayden, of Wakefield, Mass.; James M. and Hart Hayden, of Bay View; and Edward E. Hayden, of Digby; two sisters, Mrs. Augusta Hayden, of Salem, Mass., and Mrs. Arthur H. Turnbull, of Digby.

PERCY COVERT

Kensdale "read with sorrow on Saturday morning that Percy Covert had passed away at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Covert, at that place. Deceased was a victim of the dread disease Consumption from which he had suffered for a long time. He was a young man very highly respected and a member of a generous nature and kindly disposition, he was a general favorite. The sympathy of the neighborhood goes out to the bereaved ones. He leaves besides surviving parents and brothers and sisters, a great stricken widow and little son. ### CHAPTER XII.

The Big Fat Lumox. Mr. Joe Bullitt met him at the gate and offered him hearty greetings. All bickering and dissension among these three passed. The lady was so wondrously impartial that as time went on the sufferers had come to be drawn together rather than thrust asunder by their common feeling.

Johnnie Watson had with him today a visitor of his own, a vastly overgrown person of eighteen, who at Johnnie's beckoning abandoned a fair companion of the moment and came forward as William entered the gate. "I want to introduce you to two of my most intimate friends," said Johnnie, with anxious gravity. "Mr. Baxter and Mr. Bullitt let me introduce my cousin, Mr. Cropper. Mr. Cropper, this is my friend, Mr. Baxter and my friend, Mr. Bullitt."

The gentlemen shook hands solemnly. Mr. Cropper became more informal. "Johnnie wrote me to come over for this abiding, so I thought I might as well come." He laughed loudly. "Yes, sir," he added, "because I'm pretty apt to be on hand if there's anything 'foul'."

"Well, that's right," said William, and while they all laughed again Mr. Cropper struck his cousin a jovial blow upon the back.

"Hi, old sport," he cried, "I want to meet this Miss Pratt before we start. The car'll be along pretty soon, and I got her picked for the girl I'm going to sit by."

The laughter of William and Joe Bullitt, designed to express cordiality, suddenly became facetious and died. The careless loudness—almost the notoriety—with which he had uttered Miss Pratt's name, demanding loudly to be presented to her, regardless of the well known law that a lady must first express some wish in such matters—these were indications of a coarse nature sure to be more than ungenial to Miss Pratt. Both William and Joe Bullitt began to wonder why on earth Johnnie Watson didn't have any more sense than to invite such a big, fat, lumox of a cousin to the party.

This severe phrase of their, almost simultaneous in the two minds, was not wholly a failure, as a shrewd sketch of Mr. George Cropper, and yet there was the impressiveness of size about him, especially about his legs and chin.

At seventeen and eighteen growth is still going on, sometimes in a sporadic way, several parts seeming to have sprouted faster than others. Voices, too, often seem misplaced. One hears outside the door the harsh rumble of a stouter giant, and a mild boy, thin as a cricket, walks in. The contrary was George Cropper's case. His voice was an unexpected piping tenor, half falsetto and frequently girlish, as surprising as the absurd voice of an elephant.

His chin had so distanced his other features that his eyes, nose and brow seemed almost babylike in comparison, while his mountainous legs were the great part of the rest of him. He was one of those huge, bottle-like boys who are always in motion in spite of their cumbersome.

"When do I get to meet that cutie?" he insisted to Johnnie. "You introduced us to about her, and I'd do much for, but I want to get the howdy."

business over with this Miss Pratt, so I had she on my mind. I can't do it, I'm going to keep her busy all day." "Well, don't be in such a hurry," said Johnnie, "You can meet her when we get out in the country. I got a chance, George." "No, sir," George protested jovially. "I guess you've said this over in this town, but look out! When I slip a word it don't take long till they all hear something 'bout it! You know how I am when I get started. Johnnie! He turned upon William, tucking his fat arm affectionately through William's thin one. "Hi, sport! Ole Johnnie's so slow, you told me later and get me fixed up with this Miss Pratt, and I'll tell her you're the real stuff—after we get engaged!"

He was evidently a true cloud compeller, this horrible George. "Oh, that's a good idea," said the young people poured out through the gate and, as the car stopped, scrambled aboard. William struggled anxiously to push through to Miss Pratt and climb up beside her, but Mr. George Cropper made his way into the crowd in a beaming though bull-like manner, and a fat back in purple and white "blazer" flattered William's nose while ponderous heels damped William's toes. He was shoved back and just managed to clamber upon the foot-board as the car started.

The friendly hand of Joe Bullitt pulled him to a seat, and William found himself rubbing his nose and sitting between Joe and Johnnie Watson, directly behind the smiling Cropper and Miss Pratt. Mr. Cropper had already taken Flopfit upon his lap.

"Dogs are always crazy 'bout me," he heard him say in his high boyish voice and children. "I dunno why it is, but they always take to me. My name's George Cropper, 3d, Johnnie Watson's cousin. He was trying to introduce me before the car came along, but he never got the chance. I guess as this shindig's for you, and I'm the only other guest from out of town, I'd like to introduce ourselves. The two guests of honor, as it were."

Miss Pratt laughed her silvery laugh, murmured politely and turned on freezing glance upon her neighbor. "Flopfit took me 'round," she was heard to remark. "Flopfit look so 'foul' on dry, big, 'horrible' man's lap."

Mr. Cropper laughed deprecatingly. "He was looking at you, and I was with the good ole man that's got charge of him now. Well, I always was a good deal bigger than the fellows I went with. I dunno why it is, but I was all right of quicker, too, as it were, and the strongest in any crowd I ever got with. I'm kind of muscle bound, I guess, but I don't let that interfere with my business any. Take me in an automobile, now! I got a crack car at home—and I keep my head better than most people do, as it were. I can kind of handle myself better. I dunno why it is."

"My brains seem to work better than other people's; that's all it is. I don't mean that I got more sense or anything like that. It's just the way my mind works. I'm kind of put me at an advantage, as it were."

"Well, for instance, if I'd been 'livin' here in this town and joined in with the crowd to get up this party—well, I would of been done a good deal different. I won't say better, but different. That's always the way with me—if I go into anything, pretty soon I'm kind of 'whole shebang' on it. I don't know why it is. The other people might try to run it their way for awhile, but pretty soon you notice 'em step out of the way for good ole George. I dunno why it is."

"Well, if I'd been running this party, I'd of had automobiles to go out in, not a trolley car, where you all got to sit together, and I'd of sent over home for my little racer, and I'd of taken you out in my myself. I'd like you to see that little car. Well, anyway, I bet you'd of seen something pretty different and a whole lot better if I'd of come over here to get up this party for you."

"For us," Miss Pratt corrected him smiling. "That's strange—party for us two—all boys!" And she gave him one of her looks.

Mr. Cropper flushed with emotion. He was gawped. He became serious. "Say," he said, "that's mighty smooth hat you got on." And he touched the fluffy rim of it with his forefinger. Her fat shoulders leaned toward her yambling.

"We'd certainly of had a lot better time a-sizin' along in that little racer I got," he said. "I'd like to had you see how I handle that little car. Girls over home they say they like to go with me just to watch the way I handle her. They say it ain't so much just the ride, but more the way I handle that little car. I dunno why it is, but that's what they say."

"That's the way I do anything I make up my mind to tackle. Just lemme make up my mind once, and it's all off. I dunno why it is. There was a brakeman on the train got kind of fussy. He didn't know who I was. Well, I just put my hand on his shoulder and pushed him down in his seat like this!" He set his hand upon Miss Pratt's shoulder. "I didn't want to fit him, because there was women and children in the car, so I just shoved my face up close to him, like this. I guess you don't know how much stock my father's got in this road. I say, did he tell? Well, you ought of seen that brakeman when I got through telling him who I was!" "Nasty ole brakeman!" said Miss Pratt, with unfailing sympathy. "Mr. Cropper's fat hand—see if it won't

I SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Paris, Ont.—"For five years I suffered from pain caused by displacement of my organs and in my back. At this time I was unfit for work and was taking different medicines that I thought were good. I saw the advertisement in the paper of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it faithfully. I am now in perfect health and do all my own work. I recommend it to others, and give you permission to publish this letter in your little books and in the newspapers as a testimonial."

Mrs. D. Cassady, Box 491, Paris, Ont.

Why women will continue to suffer so long is more than we can understand, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For forty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read, and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

KAISER BRONCHITIS IN EXILE

Thousands Liberated

What! Have you not heard the joyful tidings? Bronchitis has been exiled! Right out of society—and 100,000 Canadians liberated from the bondage of this disease. Every trace of bronchial trouble is blown to atoms by the powerful, invigorating, disease-destroyer, Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture. No wonder people are rejoicing! No longer do they dread the effects of colds, croup, asthma, etc., and so anxious are they that others should benefit also, hundreds of letters have been written proclaiming the merits of this wonderful medicinal remedy. Here is one letter—

"To Whom It May Concern: "This is to certify that I had been suffering for over three weeks with bronchitis and was advised to try Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture. I purchased a bottle and after the third dose I felt better and after the third dose I was cured. I was perfectly well. In making the above assertion I have no hesitation in saying it is the best remedy I ever came in contact with for heavy colds and bronchitis."

Don't Prod Your Liver to Action

RR Overcomes Bilelessness, Constipation, Sick Headache, Cuts, Hoarseness, Griping, Pains, Gas, etc.

The organs of digestion, assimilation and excretion are closely allied, and the health of the whole system is largely dependent upon the proper functioning of all these organs. When the liver is diseased, the whole system is affected. The liver is the largest organ in the body, and it is the seat of the most important functions of the body. It is the liver that filters the blood, and it is the liver that stores the food that we eat. If the liver is diseased, the blood is not filtered properly, and the food is not stored properly. This leads to a number of different ailments, such as indigestion, constipation, and a general feeling of weakness and ill health.

Get your liver into action with the help of the "Liver to Action" pills. These pills are made from natural ingredients, and they are gentle on the stomach. They will help to cleanse the liver, and they will help to restore the normal functioning of the liver. This will lead to a number of different benefits, such as improved digestion, improved assimilation, and improved excretion. This will lead to a number of different ailments, such as indigestion, constipation, and a general feeling of weakness and ill health.

Get a 75c box and try it with the understanding that if it does not give you greater relief and benefit than any other or better medicine you can buy, or no pay. Nature's Remedy (N.R.) is the best medicine for the liver. It is the best medicine for the liver. It is the best medicine for the liver.

MAXWELL

Has Won Its Following Through Its Quality

THE metals used in the Maxwell chassis compare favorably pound for pound with those in the best cars that the world has produced, according to metallurgists.

There is a real reason for this quality in a Maxwell.

The fundamental purpose of the Maxwell is to carry the same passenger load over the same roads and at the same speeds as larger and more expensive cars.

But it must perform this mission in an extremely economical way.

Therefore the Maxwell has to be light. But to make it strong as well as light only the very best of materials can be employed.

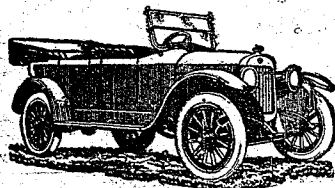

Hence, the quality metals.

And it is through the quality of its metals that Maxwell has developed its following.

This is a following that began five years ago with a foundation of 5,000 and now reaches a mark of 100,000 new Maxwell enthusiasts in 1920.

300,000 Maxwells now on the highways of two continents are a daily endorsement of the merit of this great car.

Gifts for Grandparents

Just what to get for grandparents seems to be the hardest question to decide at Christmas time. They like things that add to their comfort. In the picture above are two suggestions. One is a reading glass, which will prove useful, when ordinary spectacles fail to reveal to the eyes that are growing old. Below is something pretty and useful for grandmamma. It is a bouquet made of paper flowers, and in the heart of each flower is something needful for sewing or darning. The center of one flower is a small spool of black thread; in others are loops of tape, pins, needles, hooks and eyes.

Dainty Bonbon Boxes

There are many lovely bonbon boxes among gifts on display in the shops. Here are two of them—a round one covered with handsome cretonne which is glued to the foundation. The box is lined with a plain silk and the lid is edged with gold lace. It contains a small glass dish for holding the candies.

The square box is covered with silk and has a full of gilt painted china about it. Over this there is a tiny vase of very narrow ribbon formed into leaves with little roses set between them. Gold lace finishes the sides and top of this box and with the ribbon vine, makes an ornament for the center of the top.

Pretty Candle Shades

Both the pretty candle shades shown here are made of crepe paper cut to simulate flower petals. They are only two of many equally pretty designs. Two strongly contrasting colors are used for the shade at the left as red and white, or green and red. Three shades of rose appear in the pretty affair at the right in which small curly petals that look like sweet peas are glued to a plain foundation of pink paper. A gay paper butterfly is perched at the right side of the shade.

Handy Bag and Case

Among the examples of convenient belongings embodying beautiful work that makes a gift precious, there are handkerchief cases and darning or knitting bags, like those shown above. The darning bag is made of ribbons and may be carried with its contents, over the arm. The handkerchief case employs heavy linen, with a coarse linen thread for making its decoration.

"IT GAVE ME NEW LEASE ON LIFE"

That Is What Mrs. Robertson Says After Tanlac Freed Her Of Nervous Dyspepsia.

"I feel like I have a new lease on life since taking Tanlac, and I'll never stop praising it for what it has done for me," recently said Mrs. C. A. Robertson of 189 Agricola Street, Halifax, N. S.

"I had no appetite whatever," said Mrs. Robertson, "and I was in such a nervous run down condition that I could hardly drag myself about the house. My digestion was so poor that little I did manage to eat caused me to suffer with indigestion and bloating and simply made me feel miserable. I had violent headaches and such dizzy spells that at times I just had to sit down or catch hold of something to keep from falling. I was so nervous that the least little noise would upset me, and I couldn't even stand the children playing about the house. I was so restless I could hardly sleep, and many nights heard the clock strike every hour, and became so frantic that I just had to get up and walk the floor. Although I tried everything I heard of, nothing did me any good and my condition was becoming almost unbearable.

Finally I heard so much about Tanlac that I decided to give it a trial, and the way the medicine fixed me up was nothing less than wonderful. I have only taken four bottles now and am enjoying as good health as I ever did in my life. My appetite is just splendid and I can eat anything and everything without being bothered with indigestion. I never have headaches or dizzy spells, my nerves are so calm I can stand any amount of noise and at night I sleep like a child. Tanlac has built me up until I have gained twelve pounds, in weight and now weigh a hundred and eighteen pounds. I believe Tanlac is the best medicine ever made for troubles like I had, and I'm glad of a chance to recommend it.

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

THE FAMILY HERALD AND WEEKLY STAR

The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal has announced that after December 31st, 1920, the subscription price of that great weekly will be $2.00 per year, in Canada, England, Ireland or Scotland, and $2.50 to the United States. The recent heavy increase in the cost of white paper make the slight advance necessary, in fact it is only a small portion of the increased cost over pre-war prices of production. All renewals and subscriptions, the publishers say, mailed before December 31st, 1920, will be accepted at the old rate of $1.50.

Even at the advanced price of $2.00 a year, the Family Herald is regarded as the best value on the Continent. It is acknowledged to be absolutely without a rival, hence its enormous circulation.

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

VII.—EARLY TRAINING IN MUSIC.

All teachers are aware of the need for the best possible drill in life. The idea one so often hears expressed is: since my child is only beginning her studies, any teacher will do.

If such a man is about to build a house, shall he hear him say: since I am only laying a foundation, any kind of trashy material will do, but when I get to the roof I will engage the finest roof makers in the world.

Then we will agree that just as the husbandman carefully prepares the ground before he puts in the seed, so does the teacher, for the teacher will continue himself to one thing at a time.

A true teacher will think more of his pupils' mental development than of the class he is likely to obtain, it is certainly up to the teacher to make it interesting not amusing.

The child who is destined for a musical career should receive as much musical instruction in early life as is compatible with the child's health and receptivity.

Children learn far more rapidly than adults, the child's power of absorption in music study develops at the ages of eight and twelve is simply enormous, between twelve and twenty it is less, but still less than twenty and thirty and lamentably small between thirty and forty.

There are yet exceptional cases of astonishing development late in life to the enormous ambition and industry.

Someone separates a child's musical education thus: 20 per cent. teacher, 60 per cent. mother, and 20 per cent. plain child, in this it appears that mother controls the majority, if the mother exerts her majority, lucky will be the child.

It is plainly observed that to obtain dexterity of the hands and the mechanical side of the instrumental performance, one should start young and should certainly make the study of technique the most important.

Technic is like money in the bank, a good thing to draw on when you need it but it is unlike money in the bank in this respect, that you cannot exhaust it by drawing upon it freely and frequently.

During the period of practice the major and minor forms will be dealt with and it does seem strange that one should feel that the major and minor are opposite for they both present the same face, now more joyous, now more serious and a mere tone of the fingers to take the one into the other.

An examiner once said to a candidate, you play very nicely, but why did you omit the two measures in the second line, also the middle section of the second page? Oh, said she, I cannot hear the parts and I always leave out those bits in order not to distress him when he is tired.

It is needless to add that this is wrong, for the major and minor must be heard in contrast. Major and minor—contentment and discontent—joy and grief—light and shade. These things make variety in music and by them you may remember some one piece that stands out from all others.

Often some incident which happened in your young student life will have a lasting influence on you.

I remember reading of a little boy, who's first attempt at instrumental music was with the bass drum, for when as a boy Haydn was studying in Hamburg it happened that his boy friends were invited to church in a grand procession, but the drummer was missing; one boy suggested Haydn, so he was lined up and we can assume that he acquitted himself nicely.

In after years he often recalled that he never recalled a prouder moment than when scantily clad and half starved, he marched proudly among his boyish friends beating the bass drum.

Acquiring musical knowledge should be a pleasure, because it comes naturally and should help to cultivate and improve our affections.

A Kidney Remedy

Kidney troubles are frequently caused by badly digested food which overtaxes these organs to eliminate the irritant acids formed. Help your stomach to properly digest the food by taking 16 to 30 drops of Extract of Roots, such as Golden Seal, Oregano, and your kidney disorder will promptly disappear. Get the genuine.

WOMAN'S CANADIAN CLUB HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Woman's Canadian Club took place on Monday of last week in their rooms at the Court House.

The president opened the meeting. After the minutes of the last annual meeting were read, the secretary gave her report as follows:—Madam President and members of the Canadian Club:

At a meeting held on November 17th, 1919, it was decided to form a society to be known as the Woman's Canadian Club of Digby. Its object to bring before the club lectures on the various subjects of the day, and to take an interest in the social welfare of the town. It was also decided to ask the gentlemen to join as associate members, twenty-five cents being the membership fee, each receiving a membership card. The number of members enrolled during the year, 187.

During the past year we have held twelve monthly business meetings on the first Monday in the month with an average attendance of fifteen members.

At Christmas, 1919, twenty-five stockings and half a dozen boxes were filled, and these with blankets were given to children and sick in the town.

A contribution of blankets and sheets was received by the club from the Red Cross society of Halifax, also from the Altus house pajamas and towels to be used in our welfare work, and from the Continental Publishing Company, a Service Flag.

Socials were held for the members of the club in January, February, March, April and May. Lectures were given by Dr. Boyle, of King's College, in February; by Prof. Balam, of Acadia College, in March; by Rev. Dr. McKinnon, of Pine Hill College, in April; and by Rev. Wm. Driffield, in November. A picnic was held in July and in August a benefit bridge.

In April a constitution consisting of eight rules for reference was drawn up, voted upon and adopted by the club.

In June a subscription of twenty-five dollars was given to the "Red Cross Relief" in November one hundred dollars was pledged to the Memorial Fund, and fifty dollars given to the British Empire War Relief fund.

In March last the club was asked to help support a district nurse for the town, after discussing the matter it was decided that it would not be wise to undertake so large a proposition.

In our social welfare work, nurses clothing and comforts have been provided on several occasions in case of sickness, and great credit is due to the convenor and committee appointed for this work, for the interest they have shown in visiting, and in looking after the welfare of those in need, in the making of garments and raising money for the same.

An interest has been taken in our Public School conditions by members of the club.

The thanks of the club are due to the Digby Courier for courtesy and kindness in printing, and to all members who have contributed towards making the past year a successful one for the Canadian club.

MAUDE GREEN, Secy.

This was followed by the treasurer's report.

M. K. HARDING IS LEADER OF DIGBY GROUP

Announcement has just been made by the executive committee of the Mount Allison University Endowment Campaign, of the selection of the name of George Killam, of Yarmouth, to act as some chairman of the Yarmouth zone in the coming campaign to raise sufficient funds to enable Mount Allison to put into action some of the much needed improvements which have been under consideration for a number of years.

The campaign is to be carried into every quarter of the Maritime Provinces, and a campaign organization will be built up in practically every Methodist Church of the constituency. The provinces have been divided into zones and these in turn, have been sub-divided into groups. Although the intensive campaign does not take place until the second week of February, considerable work has already been accomplished in the way of securing the interest and co-operation of some of the leading business men, professional men, and ministers of the territory.

In the Yarmouth zone, the following group leaders have also been appointed; Barrington Group, Rev. F. Cornett; Digby Group, M. K. Harding; Lawrenceton Group, Dr. J. B. Hall; Berwick Group, B. H. Lee.

John James, survivor of the famous Charge of Balaklava in the Crimean War, has just died at the Chelsea Pensioners' Hospital of pneumonia, aged 86. There are still over 20 veterans of the Crimean campaign in the Chelsea institution. Their old-fashioned scarlet tunics and quaint peaked caps used to be popular with artists.

A firm in Harrogate, G. B., have succeeded in producing a soap from clay. It is being put on the market in the name of "Moorland" soap, and it is claimed for it that it has not only enormous possibilities in the industrial world for wool washing, etc., but it is an excellent toilet article for delicate and tender skin.

THE TOWN COUNCILLOR OF WOLFVILLE

(From "Woman's Century")

Mrs. Laura Halliburton Moore, at present Town Councillor of Wolfville, Nova Scotia, and also Chairman of its Board of School Commissioners, Mrs. Moore was the first in Nova Scotia to hold these positions, and she served her community so excellently, that now several women are holding municipal offices in the Maritime Provinces.

At the fifteenth annual convention of the Union of Nova Scotia Municipalities, which met at Windsor, N. S., last August, Mrs. Moore's address was a leading feature. She spoke on the need of Women's Education, and of the need of a Home or Institution for all the feeble-minded of her province, to prevent their adding to the number of the feeble-minded children to the country. In this connection we might say that it is estimated there are at least 120,000 feeble-minded in the Dominion, outside of those in institutions. These unfortunate as a rule are incapable of earning enough, so must live by theft or prostitution; but they are not incapable of the propagating of feeble-minded children, to add still more to the burden of the community. Why do we allow this?

There is no reason why anybody in this vicinity desiring to buy "Christmas wares" should have to go outside of Digby or Bear River to do so. If all departments in all lines are full and complete, goods are tastefully displayed and our stores are noted for having polite and attentive clerks.

It looks like a cheaper Christmas this year, particularly in the grocery lines. Christmas nuts and raisins and other holiday goodies will be cheaper this season, although shelled walnuts, almonds and filberts are scarce and difficult to secure. As early season orders were light, stocks are therefore low. Large quantities of Spanish raisins have been coming across the water for the first time in several years. These are from fifty to twenty per cent cheaper than the ones brought from California, but still much higher than in the pre-war days. The drop in the price of sugar has given an impetus to cooking.

Local stores never looked brighter or better than they do at the present time. The stocks are nicely displayed and the merchandise is of the highest quality. To induce early buying many specials have been placed on the counters of the different stores and are being disposed of at special bargain prices. Keep your money home by buying at home.

Do not wait until Christmas eve to do your buying, but purchase before stocks are depleted and you will be getting the most of your money. The stores are well worthy

CHRISTMAS ARRAY IN DIGBY AND BEAR RIVER STORES

The stores of Digby and Bear River are now in Christmas array and a walk around town will readily convince one that there is no better place in the Maritime Provinces to do your Christmas shopping than the towns of Digby and Bear River.

The leading places of business, whose ads you will find in other columns in the Courier, are bountifully stocked with seasonal goods and the display of staple and fancy goods, to say the least, is most creditable and is fully on a par with that carried by similar concerns doing business in the larger centres.

It has often been remarked by visitors that the dry goods departments in our different stores carried stocks of fashionable and more up-to-date goods than could be found in the stores of any other town of our size in Canada.

A noticeable fact in taking a walk through the "Toy Land" departments is the improvement in the quantity and quality of dolls on exhibition, and also the mechanical toys. During the war the dolls offered for sale were mostly of very crude construction and high in price, but this season the variety is greater, and the ruling prices considerably lower. Sleds, skates, toys and games of all kinds are on display in the "Santa Claus Room" and there certainly never was a better exhibit of this line than is now on.

There is no reason why anybody in this vicinity desiring to buy "Christmas wares" should have to go outside of Digby or Bear River to do so.

The Queen Mother Olga, who has been made regent of Greece, enjoys the distinction of being the only woman upon whom has been bestowed the rank of Admiral. This distinction was given her many years ago by the late Czar Alexander III, of Russia, partly in recognition of her skill as a sailor, and partly as a reward for her kindness to Russian sailors in the great hospital which she had founded in Athens.

THOUGHT SHE'D HAVE TO GIVE UP

Mrs. Kenny Had Suffered Eight Years Before Talking Tanlac—Is Now Well and Happy.

"I'll never stop praising Tanlac since it's helped me so much and I just feel like going out and telling everybody about it," said Mrs. O. R. Kenny of 75, Dresden Row, Halifax, N. S.

Eight years ago I was in a past eight years I suffered dreadfully with stomach trouble, and chronic indigestion. My appetite was poor, and for years I don't think I ate a good hearty meal. The little I ate soured on my stomach and caused gas to press up into my chest and throat until I could hardly breathe. I had awful headaches that kept me confined to my bed for days, at a time and left me in a terrible weakened condition. At night I was so nervous and restless I could scarcely sleep. I had no energy to do any housework, and I thought I would have to give up altogether. As I was getting worse all the time.

"I got a bottle of Tanlac one day and it gave me so much relief I kept on taking it until I had finished my seventh bottle and all my troubles disappeared. I thought I would have to give up altogether. As I was getting worse all the time. I was so nervous and restless I could scarcely sleep. I had no energy to do any housework, and I thought I would have to give up altogether. As I was getting worse all the time.

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

Analysis of 190 samples of "whiskey," seized by prohibition enforcement agents in 100 places in New York, failed to show one that was real whiskey. Knox B. Phagan, temporary supervising enforcement agent, said Saturday. All were adulterated mixtures, "over night" distillations, or compounds of colored alcohol, he declared. He said he did not believe there was a glass of straight whiskey being sold anywhere in New York.

AN ARGUMENT FOR STRENGTH.

Surely advertising is coming into its own as a recognized economic force when a manufacturing concern advances its investment in advertising as an evidence of its strength.

The Columbia Graphophone Company in support of an application for an issue of $7,500,000 of notes, stated to its bank that its investment in advertising during the last four and a half years exceeded $10,000,000.

Moreover, the bankers thought enough of the statement to display it in bold-face type.

GOOD HEALTH AND LONG LIFE

We boast a great deal about the wonders of the modern world. We put up like a poisoned pup and tell about the big things the medical profession is doing. Our physicians and surgeons are doing wonderful things, but they are powerless to do much unless we help them. They can lengthen out human life, and produce a healthier, happier, more handsome race—if we let them, but not otherwise.

Let's face the facts. One hundred years ago the average length of human life in this country was about 33 years. To-day it is somewhere from 40 to 45 years, thanks be to an energetic and brainy medical profession. But while that transition has come in an age of wonders, it is because we better understand the human body. We have saved their lives. But life insurance authorities tell us that the expectancy of human life after 40 is decreasing alarmingly. And why? Because people eat too fast, eat too much, move too fast, work too fast, and live too fast. They try to run their human dynamo at high pressure without banking their fires, or taking sufficient relaxation. The pace of modern life is too stiff. We can't keep it up.

The North American Indian followed trails through the forest. He swam the rivers. He lived in a tent or wigwam. He ate the simplest food. He took lots of exercise, and was thus able to endure much fatigue. And he didn't suffer much from indigestion, rheumatism, or a bald head.

Twenty years ago we had few automobiles. Thirty years ago we had few trolley-cars. We frequently walked five or ten miles a day; to and from our work. With modern improved modes of locomotion we have become lazy. We enjoy our luxuries, for they are comforts and time-savers, but are the American people as healthy on the whole as a few decades ago, and will the coming generation be as healthy as we are, if we continue to take little rest and exercise?

Yellow fever has gone. Malaria has nearly gone. Tuberculosis is becoming less frequent. Smallpox, scarlet fever, cholera, diphtheria no longer hold the terrors for us they once did. Some day the cause and cure of these diseases will be known. This progress combats disease, and makes life easier. But what's the use of this progress, if we won't help? Why should our doctors teach the laws of hygiene if we won't obey those laws?

What is the cause of most sickness? Germs? Oh, they are not so thick that you have to turn out from them when you meet them on the sidewalk, nor do you trip up over them every time you enter your home. Sickness is generally due to low resistive power of the body, inability to throw off disease when it is acquired. Exercise is the generator of resistive power.

We ought to get back to the first principles. If you are healthy and able bodied, thank heaven for that greatest of blessings. And spontaneously save your health, you would save your mother's life. Turn your back yard into a field for games. Walk five miles every day. Exercise and exercise, and again I say, exercise. Use all of the muscles of the body—use the limbs, back, neck, shoulders. Make these muscles go to your body, and it will serve you well.

The new Republic of Czechoslovakia has more women voters than men.

Montreal has grown so rapidly in recent years that it is now fifth among the cities of the American continent.

LAST WEEK'S LECTURE

On Thursday evening last the Green Lantern Hall was filled to overflowing with an appreciative audience to hear Mr. Walter McRaye in his patriotic lecture, "The Soul of a Nation." The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion by a committee of the Woman's Institute, under whose auspices the lecture was given. The first speaker, Mr. L. J. Lovett, presided in his usual charming manner and in a few graceful words introduced the speaker and the soloist Miss Nancy Forde.

Mr. McRaye stated in opening that he was not altogether a stranger in Bear River, having been here twice before and thus felt that he could almost address his audience in the familiar term of "friends," rather than in the usual formal salutation of "Ladies and Gentlemen." He was proud to say at the beginning that he was one hundred per cent Canadian, and quoted from an Englishman's beautiful poem, "Canadian Born," that "every man" is a millionaire if only he can brag that he was born in Canada beneath the British flag.

As Mr. McRaye visited Bear River about fifteen years ago in company with E. Pauline Johnson, and recited some patriotic recitals, we think it fitting to give the whole of this poem, "Canadian Born," which we all love so well, but too often, alas, we fail to give utterance to our deepest feelings of devotion and patriotism.

CANADIAN BORN

We first saw light in Canada, the land beloved of God;
We saw the pulse of Canada, its marrow and its blood;
And we, the men of Canada, can face the world and brag
That we were born in Canada beneath the British flag.

Few of us have the blood of kings,
But we are the rugged and the roguish of doubtful name and worth;
And all have one credential that entitles us to brag—
That we were born in Canada beneath the British flag.

We've yet to make our money, we've yet to make our fame,
But we have gold and glory in our clean Colonial names;
And every man's a millionaire if only he can brag
That he was born in Canada beneath the British flag.

No title and no coronet is half so proudly worn
As that which we inherited as men Canadian born.
We count no man so noble as the one who makes the stars
That he was born in Canada beneath the British flag.

The Dutch may have their Holland, the Spaniard have his Spain,
The Yankee to the south of us must south of us remain;
For not a man dare lift a hand against
That they were born in Canada beneath the British flag.

—E. PAULINE JOHNSON.

Mr. McRaye in glowing language reviewed Canada's glorious history from the time of the French settlement to the present, speaking of the self-sacrifice and devotion of the early settlers and the men of the days of Confederation.

At the present time one of the serious menaces to Canada's National Life is the audacious foreign element, such as the Menonites, Doukors, etc., and stated that no man had a right to live in our country who would not consent to be a loyal Canadian citizen.

He severely criticized the present method of birth registration by the government in which the parties registering are required to state their nationality as being that of the country in which their parents or grandparents were born. He contended that children born in Canada are Canadians, and beginning in the school and home should be taught to realize the worth of their birthright and the duties and responsibilities of their great privilege as Canadian subjects and citizens.

Here Mr. McRaye made plea for better salaries for our school teachers, whose work is of such a momentous character. In closing he spoke of the returned soldier problem which we are now facing, and also of the widows and children of those heroes who gave their life's blood for our security, and asked that at this Christmas season they may not be forgotten, but in the gladness and time of worldly enjoyment, our Canadian people shall issue that which after all is the soul of a nation.

Mr. McRaye on special request gave several selections from Dr. Drummond, which were much appreciated. Miss Ford's solos were also keenly enjoyed by all. She was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. (Capt.) Goodfellow.

MEETING OF BEAR RIVER "RED CROSS"

The British Empire "War Relief Campaign," has roused the public to a realization of the great need of prompt financial aid among the former workers of our town Red Cross. The feeling has been growing that funds in the treasury, who have the Society ceased to "War Relief" activities, should be donated to this cause.

Accordingly, all those who were former workers in the local "Red Cross" were requested to meet in the "Masonic Kitchen," on Wednesday afternoon Dec. 9th, and a large number were in attendance.

The following is a synopsis of business transacted:

Meeting called to order by the President, Officers present.

Vice-President—Mrs. Walter M. Romana.

Secy-Treas—Mrs. J. Arthur Rice.

Report of Secy-Treas. showed cash in Royal Bank one hundred eighty four ($84) dollars and fifty (50) cents. Also "on hand," yarn sixty-six lbs.

The meeting was asked to take action as to the "disposal" of the yarn and was moved by Mrs. H. Kenney, seconded by Mrs. J. Winchester, that a sale of yarn be held on Dec. 11th and 18th, in the Grand Central temple room, both afternoon and evening, and that a committee of ladies be appointed to conduct sale. Motion carried.

Moved by Mrs. W. Romana, seconded by Mrs. Arthur Rice, that the cash in bank, and proceeds of yarn sale be sent through our Secy-Treas. to the British Empire War Relief Fund. Before this motion was put to vote, the Secy. called for discussion, and each member present was asked to give her personal opinion as to the disposal of funds.

Could the public have heard the personal opinion in which each and every member expressed her belief, that the "Red Cross" fund was finding a logical outlet in alleviating the suffering in Europe (the direct consequences of the war), and therefore a special call to Red Cross workers.) It could not have doubted that the "Red Cross" spirit is not dead in Bear River.

It is only need to be aware by such an appeal as this, to again be the active agent in assuaging human suffering, that is, to give help to the war-torn world.

An enthusiastically unanimous vote was passed that the Secy-Treas. forward the societies funds to headquarters, as soon as possible, and that later on, if it is distress, disease and starvation continued among the orphaned waifs of Europe, special measures would again be taken by the society, to raise additional money for relief.

THE ROLL CALL

The Roll Call of the B. Y. P. U. was held in the vestry of the Baptist Church on Friday evening last. The meeting was opened by singing, responsive reading, and prayer. The roll was then called and the members responded with scripture texts, after this Mr. Gregg gave a very helpful address taking for his subject "Watch." After singing several hymns a social hour was spent and very much enjoyed by the young people. Following was the programme:

Reading—Selection from Drummond's "The Habitant" by Mrs. Gregg.

Vocal Solo by Lewis Clarke.

Reading—The Starless Crown, Miss C. Campbell.

Ice cream and cake were served and the meeting closed by singing The National Anthem.

An adjourned school meeting was held on Monday evening, when the board of trustees were authorized to decide on, and have installed at once the most suitable kind of fire escapes. Authority was also given the trustees to investigate and deal with the matter of the blacksmith shop which at present is very near the school house.

SHOWER

About forty members of the Ladies Circle and congregation of the Baptist Church met with pastor and Mrs. Gregg at the residence on Tuesday evening, making them a miscellaneous Xmas shower of household articles.

After the opening of the gifts the pastor and his wife expressed their thanks for making their first Xmas in our community so pleasant. A short time ago, each member of the circle was to earn 50 cents to help defray the expenses of repairing the parsonage, and many humorous verses were recited telling how this was accomplished. The pleasant evening was brought to a close with a sketch by Mrs. Gregg and several short speeches.

This Christmas Try Moir's Cooking

Moir's fruit cakes and plum pudding has been made from a rare old English recipe under Mr. James Moir for 30 years. Last year he made over three tons of plum pudding, yet every last order had to be turned away. And that's just a hint of how good they are!

You can still get Moir's plum pudding or fruit cake in 2 to 8 lb. sizes if you order now through your grocer, or write or wire us direct. State size, whether you want your fruit cake plain, frosted, almond pasted and frosted, almond pasted, frosted and decorated, or frosted and decorated.

Just think, Moir's fruit cakes have been selling for months and they will be sold the day before delivery, so they arrive in perfect condition.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS AND THEIR HOME TRAINING

Each generation finds its own predetermining cause for the irresponsibility of youth. Once every boy who broke from the domestic traces was supposed to find his inspiration in the dime novel. Such adventures as there portrayed by Nick Carter and Old Sleuth made the feeling of youthful unrest too strong to be resisted. The fiction which demoralized girls was of a different kind—the novels of Bertie M. Clay, for example or of Laura Jean Libbey. Now, according to many experienced uplifters, the deadly germ is to be found not between covers but on the screen. Devotion to the "movies" is the propelling reason why girls leave home. There is something in this, no doubt. Youth is impressionable, and "things seen are mightier than things heard." Few of the popular picture plays can justify being condemned as injurious to morals, though they may include crime, tragedy and hectic ideals of life. But unless we are prepared to become veritable Gradgrinds and deprive our young people of everything but "facts—facts—facts," we must take the risk that romance may pervert thought from straying beyond bounds. In the widening horizon of youth objects good and bad are bound to come into the line of vision. The theory—that either boys and girls are to be kept straight by any cloistered virtue has seldom worked. If there is too much youthful unrest today, the ultimate responsibility is in the home. No public guardianship can take the place of parental. To what degree are parents unmindful of doings of their off-springs? Neither the "movies" nor any other form of diversion will avail irretrievably to demoralize immature minds if home training and discipline are what they should be.

YE CHRISTMASSE LOGGE

In "Merrie England" the Yule log—never called that, by the way, but the Yule Clog, the Christmas Batch, or Block—was a great institution. The "clog" was laid in some time before Christmas, was generally of birch, barked and dried, and of no meagre dimensions. It was lighted on Christmas Eve, and what was not consumed by Christmas night was saved and burnt on Christmas Day. It was deemed very lucky to preserve a piece wherever to light next year's clog.

There was a custom that so long as the Yule clog burned the servants had a right to demand ale at their meals. This may or may not account for the super-sized clogs. One old writer says that they burnt for eight days!

The ecclesiastical authorities of the past did not look kindly on the burning of the Yule clog. "The blazes," in their opinion, were "foolish and vain." But their fulmination had no effect. Yule clogs were burnt until coal fires and smaller fireplaces gave them a mortal blow.

But in remote rural parts a big log is still set aside for Christmas, and in the North a big lump of coal. In Lincolnshire the natives still refer to the "Cule-block," and "oldest inhabitants" provide a link with the past by dubbing any big piece of firewood a "guller."

Some of the learned folk who go deeply into these matters say that the burning of the Yule log is a relic of paganism. Others, more prosaic, say the log was merely to provide extra light and warmth and cheerfulness.

CHINA'S PREMIER.

Now Figurehead Is Same Ship of State.

Does the appointment of a new Premier for China mean an era of change and progress? The news that Admiral Sah Chen Ping, Minister of the Navy, has been appointed Acting Premier and will probably succeed Gen. Chiun Yung as permanent head of the Cabinet at Peking cannot be received in any such encouraging light.

Admiral Sah Chen Ping is something of a dark horse—and therefore a candidate pleasing to the members of the Cabinet and of Parliament who as the real powers behind the Government in China want a leader, so-called, whom they can lead by the nose. Like Gen. Chiun Yung, whom he replaces, Sah is a member of the Chi-li branch of the Peiyang party, which simply means that he is a more or less progressive member of the North China clique in the particular branch of that clique which grew up in Chi-li Province. He has held the portfolio of the navy in a former two former Cabinets and has worked on good terms with the Anfu party, which is the group of militaristic officials at present influential at Peking.

The Anfu men have not dared since the vehement popular demonstrations of May 1919, when three of the leaders in office were hounded from the city by the mob, to put one of their own notorious members at the head of the Government. President Hsu Shih Chang has successfully acted as a buffer between them and public denunciation, being a mild and impotent scholar. They have tried to find a man for Premier who would fit the post as well as the name. China has failed to measure up, because he refused to nominate Anfu leaders to positions in his Cabinet. More than that, one of his first acts after coming to office, October 28, 1919, was to withdraw the allowance of $300 apiece to Anfu members of Parliament, which had been the accepted portion of Government funds allotted to the former Cabinets to men who would vote with the Government party. This act was partly excused by the extreme pressure for funds then existing in Peking.

Premier Chin was allowed to live six months in office, constantly opposed and thwarted by the Anfu party. Then having failed to bring about peace throughout China, or to hoodwink the foreign powers into loaning money to his Government on any pretext, he gradually lost prestige, took a leave of absence, and, as the Chinese way, he saved everybody's "face," being gently shoving out of the way to make room for a new candidate.

Sah Chen Ping, his successor, is not a leading figure in politics. He is a native of Kurlen, and has led a career mostly restricted to the navy in which branch he has risen to great heights. Under the old empire he held a position as an official in land and sea affairs, and in 1908 was a member of the Commission of Naval Reorganization. In 1909 and 1910 he visited Great Britain, the United States and Japan, to study naval affairs in these countries. During the revolution he held a land office, and under the republic was appointed to various positions of responsibility in the naval posts at Shanghai and Tientsin.

Admiral Sah is generally considered as a progressive and well-educated man, with modern ideas and sympathetic to foreigners. It is perhaps this last characteristic that makes him a promising candidate for the Premiership just at this time, when China is in such pressing need of foreign assistance in the shape of loans. The Government is reported to be practically bankrupt.

The Free Masons.

The society of Free Masons antedates all other societies by centuries. Its origin is so ancient that the place and time of its birth are unknown. Its legends say that it was organized at the building of the temple of Solomon, but this is not accepted with much credence. By some writers its origin has been ascribed to the Druids, by others to the Knights Templars and Pythagoras, and it has not escaped the fad which in modern times has attributed so many of the uncertain productions to the noble brain of Sir Francis Bacon. Within recent years traces of the organization are said to have been discovered in Palestine or the Egyptian obelisks and in the pyramids. In fact, it has been asserted that in western, he has been satisfied that the society grew directly from an organization engaged in the construction of the pyramids.

Czechs Erect Mint.

The mint of the Czechoslovak republic, located at Kromjok, which was partly destroyed by the Hungarians, is being reconstructed, remodeled and re-equipped. New coining machines are expected soon, and after being installed the first Czechoslovak coins will be minted. A recent product of the mint is a plakette with a portrait of President Masaryk, in honor of his seventeenth birthday anniversary.

A Terrible Villain.

A six-year-old girl had been breathlessly watching the terrible villain of the film play. When he reached the railway bridge she turned to her mother and asked: "Oh, mother, what's he going to do now?" "He's going to blow up that bridge," "But mother," came back the small, inquiring voice, "how can he be get enough bruff?"

Dignity!

The mayor of the smallest town in Peru feels that it is incumbent on him, in order to make the proper display of official dignity, to be accompanied by a band of pipers whenever he appears on any public occasion. These musicians have instruments which consist of a series of soda straws, together and make weird music.

Montreal has grown so rapidly in recent years that it is now fit among the cities of the American continent.

One Day's Test Proves NR Best

The stomach only partly digests the food we eat. The process is finished in the intestines where the food is mixed with bile from the liver. If this process is not carried out properly, the food is not properly digested and the result is indigestion. The symptoms of indigestion are: bloating, flatulence, heartburn, acid eructations, loss of appetite, and general discomfort. NR (Nature's Remedy) is the best and most reliable remedy for indigestion. It acts on the stomach, liver and bowels, and restores the normal function of the digestive system. It is a natural, safe, and effective remedy for all cases of indigestion.

Just see how much better you feel, how quickly your stomach feels better, how your general health improves, how your appetite returns, how your food is properly digested and how you feel the relief and satisfaction of a healthy stomach. lace Banks, the altruistic and persistent youth who had charge of the subscription list for the party and the collection of assessments. This entitled, Wilbur, to look haggard and to act as master of ceremonies. He mounted a chair.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he bellowed, "I want to say—that is—ah—I am requested to announce that before dinner we are all supposed to take a walk around the farm and look at things as this is supposed to be the kind of a walk. There's a Swedish lady named Anna going to show us around. She's out in the yard waiting, so please follow her to inspect the farm."

CHAPTER XIII.

Sydney Carton.

WILLIAM wished only to die. He was a quiet, unassuming man, but he had a great deal to say. He was a quiet, unassuming man, but he had a great deal to say. He was a quiet, unassuming man, but he had a great deal to say.

When George did stop it was abrupt. He had been talking about the house, together rather quietly, looking one of the groups of young people chatting with after dinner languor under the trees. However, Mr. Cropper began to read presently in the sweet and staid outdoors, and observing some of the more dashing gentlemen lighting cigarettes, he was moved to laughing.

Anna, William's girl, remained quitted and entranced. She had not said "like" she had said, "Flippit love old friends best." William pressed forward, talking, and placed himself as close as possible upon the right of Miss Pratt, the humor being upon her left.

When the party came out of the barn, William held a great, faint, not walking at his side, but on the contrary, sitting too easily with George Cropper upon a fallen tree at the edge of a peach-porch, just beyond the barnyard. It was Miss Parbury who had been walking beside him, for the truant couple had made their escape early in the Swedish lady's discourse regarding the farm and the various animals.

In vain William murmured to himself, "Flippit love old friends best." Purple and black again descended upon his soul, for he could not disguise from himself the damper fact that George had dined with the lady while he, wretched William, had been permitted to take care of the dog! He strode to the barnyard fence and dropped Flippit rather brusquely at his mistress's feet. Then, without a word, again without a look, William walked haughtily away.

In the shade of a great, ancient tree, he stood, and there he waited, not to faint, nor to die, but to wait for the arrival of his mistress. He was a quiet, unassuming man, but he had a great deal to say. He was a quiet, unassuming man, but he had a great deal to say.

William's final mood was one of beautiful resignation, with a dash in it that he had given her his name. He was a quiet, unassuming man, but he had a great deal to say. He was a quiet, unassuming man, but he had a great deal to say.

After this human little reaction he passed to a higher field of romance. He began to think of the girl who would bring the little boy he had named William to the lonely house. Suddenly William saw himself in his true and strong character—Sydney Carton. He had read "A Tale of Two Cities," immediately reading, until, as he would have said, he "knew it by heart." And even at the time he had seen resemblance between himself and the anti-hero of the between them were perfected by Miss Pratt's preference for another. William decided to mount the scaffold in place of George Cropper.

The scene became actual to him, and, setting one foot upon a tin milk pail which some one had carelessly left beside the smokehouse, he lifted his eyes to the pitiless blue sky and unconsciously assumed the familiar attitude of Carton on the steps of the guillotine. He spoke aloud those great last words.

"It is a far, far better thing that I do than I have ever done. It is a far, far better rest that I go to—"

A whistle, heard on the end of a long, corrugated red neck protruded from the smokehouse door.

"What say?" it inquired huskily. "Non-nothing!" stammered William. Eyes above whiskers became fierce. "You take your feet off that milk pail!"

William's body departed. He found the party still established in the farmhouse at two long tables piled with bucolic viands. Johnnie Watson had kept a chair beside himself vacant for William. Johnnie was in no frame of mind to be bothered by "chattering girls" and he had protected himself by Joe Bullitt upon his right and the empty seat upon his left. William took it.

He began to eat, he continued to eat, he did well. So did his two comrades. They ate chicken, both white meat and dark, and livers; they ate corn on the cob and fried potatoes and green peas and string beans; they ate peach preserves and apricot preserves; they ate biscuits with grape jelly and biscuits with cranberry jelly; they ate apple sauce and apple butter and apple pie; they ate pickles, both cucumber pickles and pickled tomatoes; also pickled peppers and pickled onions; they ate lemon

At that they were no rivals to George Cropper, who was a real eater. Love had not made his appetite ethereal to day. George laid waste his section of the table. The party, however, was not so. Little exclamations of wonder and admiration. With this music in his ears George outdid himself.

When George did stop it was abrupt. He had been talking about the house, together rather quietly, looking one of the groups of young people chatting with after dinner languor under the trees. However, Mr. Cropper began to read presently in the sweet and staid outdoors, and observing some of the more dashing gentlemen lighting cigarettes, he was moved to laughing.

Christmas in the Barnyard

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"CHRISTMAS is coming," crowed Mr. Rooster. "Christmas is coming," gobbled Mr. Turkey. "Don't be too happy about it, for you may be eaten, Mr. Turkey," said Miss Hen. And then she chuckled. "Christmas is coming," gobbled Mr. Turkey. "Gobble, gobble, gobble," said Mr. Turkey. "You needn't be so sure that you won't be eaten yourself."

"Well, it's the best time of the year to be eaten. It's an honor."

"That's what I've always said," gobbled Mr. Turkey. "Please, Miss Hen, try to be original."

"I may try to be many things," chuckled Miss Hen, "but it is impossible for me to try to be original."

"Why?" asked Mr. Turkey, who was much puzzled.

"Because I don't know what it is to be original. I don't know what the word means. How can I be something if I don't even know what that something is? I can't try to be a thing I don't know anything about."

"You could ask what it means, couldn't you?" inquired Mr. Turkey. "Are you too proud for that?"

"Not too proud," said Miss Hen, "but I don't ask favors. I like to have them handed to me without the asking. It makes me appear so superior."

"Absurd," said Mr. Turkey. "Well, if you think so, then," "You May Be Eaten, Mr. Turkey," said Miss Hen. "I suppose I will have to swallow my pride or my superiority and be friendly at this time of the year. Yes, I will actually ask you. What does it mean to be original?"

"I will tell you," said Mr. Turkey, "but first of all let me say that you cannot swallow your pride nor your superiority. Those are not things to eat."

"You may rise above your pride, but it is impossible to swallow it."

"Now, Mr. Turkey, I may be only a poor hen, but I know a few things. It's a saying and a perfectly good-sounding one. I speak of swallowing my pride. Everyone knows no one means to chew it and swallow it actually. Besides, as far as that is concerned, I might say to you that it was not correct to talk about rising above your pride as though pride were the ground and one took a trip in an airplane above it."

"Let us not quarrel," said Mr. Turkey, "for the joyous Christmas season is fast approaching."

"Yes," muttered Miss Hen, "and I was fast approaching victory in that argument."

Mr. Turkey pretended he hadn't heard.

"Oh, by the way," he said, after a moment's pause, "you wanted me to tell you what it meant to be original."

"Yes," chuckled Miss Hen, while a smile passed over her hen face.

"Well," continued Mr. Turkey, "when a creature is original and says original things it means he is saying things he has thought up himself and hasn't copied from someone else. A person who has original ideas all his own. A creature who says original things, says things no other creature says."

"You copied me when you said it was an honor to be eaten at Christmas. That was what I have always said."

"Don't be so fussy, Mr. Gobbler," said Miss Hen; "we can't all be original, as you call it. Besides words are words and we all have to use the same ones to be understood, so what difference does it make how we put them together?"

Mr. Turkey walked proudly about, as though some creature really hadn't copied him to be so bold as to talk to him, but soon a great noise was heard.

"The pigs were all squealing and grunting."

"It is the time of the year when everyone should give me presents," squealed Pinky Pig.

"Everyone should give me presents. That is what Christmas means," said Porky Pig.

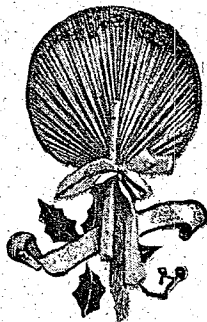

"They should all give them to me," said Rooster. "For Rooster has the most beautiful Christmas gift."

"You don't know it yourself," said Miss Hen. "Christmas is coming. I'm all ready for presents."

But the other animals sighed and shook their heads.

A Novelty in Fans

Small palm-leaf fans, all decked out with pretty furbelows are among the novelties that have been brought out for Christmas gifts. These fans are first painted with a delicate color and then varnished. Then the edge is bound with ribbon having a pleated edge or with gold or silver braid or other fancy binding. A spray of millinery flowers is tied against the handle, on one side of the fan, and the handle wound with ribbon that is tied in a bow below the flowers. Or flowers may be painted on the fan or made with sealing wax, as in the fan pictured here. This sample is bound with silver braid and has a long tassel of silver thread besides a ribbon bow on the handle. It is pretty in turquoise blue, rose color, red, etc., with ribbon and flowers in colors that harmonize, and is easy to make at home.

Gifts Made of Paper

Among inexpensive gifts that are at the same time elegant and workable there are many little convenient articles made of prettily colored, heavy paper. Telephone and laundry lists, card-carrying envelopes in which to place memoranda, etc., are among them. Two articles made of bright blue mottled paper are shown in the picture. The envelope for recipes is made by folding a straight strip of the paper into a pocket and flap. The sides of the pocket are fastened down with little bows of blue ribbon and the flap is ornamented with a painted spray of flowers in pink. The lettering is done in black.

A long strip of translucent paper folded over at each end carries one or more sheets of white paper on which a telephone list is to be written. Small white squares outlined with black ornament it and suggest that this is a man's list. It is tied with a bow of blue ribbon at the top.

Little Wall Pockets

Here are two pretty wall pockets to hang beside or on the dressing table, ready to put in them. Disks of cardboard covered with gayly printed ribbon make the pockets. This smooth, fastened together. The edges are finished with narrow puffing of ribbon, and the same ribbon serves to suspend the pocket. This smooth, fastened together. ## Crochet Lace for Gifts

The girl who knows how to crochet can express much devotion in a gift to relative or friend by making crochet lace to be fashioned into caps, trimmings and yokes for nightdresses or undergarments, bags and neckwear. A lovely yoke in an Irish crochet pattern and a crocheted cap appear in the picture above. They take considerable time to make, but will last almost a lifetime. There are many beautiful patterns for this work, which is very popular for gifts.

Lovely Kerchief Case

Nothing could be lovelier or more exquisite than this handkerchief case made of handsome ribbons. It is fit for a queen and proud will the lady be who counts its like among her Christmas gifts. A beautiful brocaded ribbon makes the case which is lined with a soft, plain satin. There is a frill of fine val lace about the edge and a very beautiful double quilting of ribbon in two shades is placed above the lace. Rosettes at the corners and a ribbon rose at the center add other glories to this bit of magnificence.

Monday

For 15 days in the month of January I was out of the habit of attending to the best of my kind of medicine but nothing did me but I tried it and it was the best I have ever used. As soon as I tried it the Saturday night, the next morning I was feeling very good. I tell you this remedy is very good. I could give you a good certificate any time that you would like to see it. If any time I come to hear about any person sick of rheumatism, I could tell them about this remedy.

Yours truly,

MILLIONS KILLED IN ACTION

Wonderful news! Millions and millions of germs killed in action and thousands of victims relieved of bronchitis, asthma, coughs, and colds. There is great rejoicing in the fact that science has at last invented the world's surest death trap for germs—Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture. With the first dose this remedy gets right down to business, and never ceases in its destructive work until every trace of the disease is completely removed and the victim restored to normal health. Letters from all parts of Canada praising this wonderful mixture are literally poured into headquarters. Read this letter: "Years of suffering from that terrible affliction, bronchial asthma, ordered by all medical men to close my business in Montreal and go south to a warmer climate, but I noticed your ad in the 'Montreal Standard' for the above mixture and I said I would give one more trial to health before I leave my native town, and thank the good maker I did. My bronchial tubes are clear, the hacking cough has disappeared, the wheezing and gasping has ceased as if by magic, and all discomforts have gone since taking your wonderful mixture. Herbert Corry, 417, May Street, Montreal. There is no reason whatever why you cannot be completely and speedily restored to health if you take this remedy. You are satisfied or the money is refunded, according to our guarantee. Don't delay. Buy a bottle now from your druggist."

ORIGIN OF MISTLETOE

Many, no doubt, supposed that it was just to eat some Christmas greens, but there was a lot more to it. At St. Nazaire, Nantes, Tours, at La Rochelle, Brest and Bordeaux, at Havre, Rouen, and in the suburbs of Paris, northward through all Belgium to the edge of Holland, and eastward through Alsace to the Mediterranean and the edges of Spain and Italy the boys went out into the woods, orchards, meadows and river sides to climb a tree and cut a bough, and in so doing a racial character came out of strictly racial character unique among all such doings.

Three thousand years ago people of Britain and European countries were cutting mistletoe as a holiday ceremony of terrific importance, sentimental, gay, mysterious and solemn. Julius Caesar, in his well known book, is full of it, although the Druids in his day, 2,000 years ago, were already evolving into a species of benevolent municipal uncles. And the mistletoe, always mystic, never forgotten, always in the past, the mistletoe was supposed to have furnished the wood for the Cross. Up to the Crucifixion it had been a regular tree, but thereafter it was condemned to exist only as a parasite—a weak and puny bush, growing only by the sap of other trees. Hence the refusal to admit the mistletoe into churches, which continues to-day, by ancient habit at least in England and France. But the Church's dread of pagan superstitions still today persisting gives a corollary explanation.

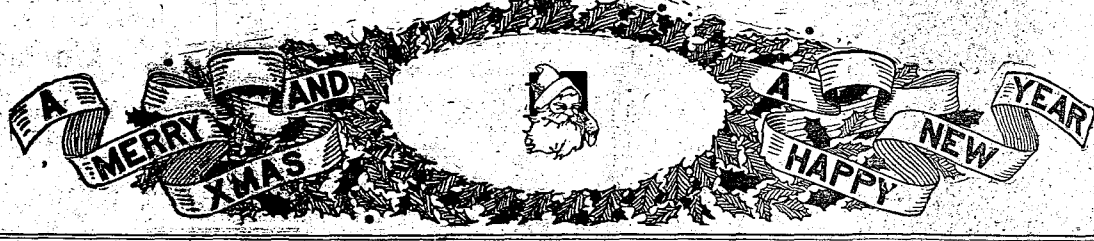

How it required its parasitic habit no man can say; but it was that it owed its continued existence to the seed being carried along with a dose of sticky liquid to the tender branch of some new tree.

It was cut on New Year's day with pomp. The Arch-Druid, in white, ascended the tree, to which stairs and platform had been erected. Beneath the people awaited a picnic banquet; and two white bulls were held ready for sacrifice. With a golden sickle the Arch-Druid cut the mystic boughs, caught; as they fell, in a white mantle. Then they slay the victims," says old Flin, who lived at the time. "praying God to prosper His gift to them, into whom He has given it. Prepared as a drink, it produces fertility and is a remedy for poisons." It was further supposed to possess great healing powers and be a sure protection against poison.

By a later tradition which grew up in ignorance of the usages of the past, the mistletoe was supposed to have furnished the wood for the Cross. Up to the Crucifixion it had been a regular tree, but thereafter it was condemned to exist only as a parasite—a weak and puny bush, growing only by the sap of other trees. Hence the refusal to admit the mistletoe into churches, which continues to-day, by ancient habit at least in England and France. But the Church's dread of pagan superstitions still today persisting gives a corollary explanation.

How it required its parasitic habit no man can say; but it was that it owed its continued existence to the seed being carried along with a dose of sticky liquid to the tender branch of some new tree.

Christmas

Christmas is a time of joy and peace, a time when we forget our troubles and rejoice in the birth of our Lord. It is a time when we are reminded of the love and forgiveness that God has shown us, and when we are inspired to live more fully in His love.

With eyes tear-cleansed, a vision we behold
Of Canada God summoned to be great.
Our sons and daughters have made history;
Fearless, undaunted, they have paid the price.

Humbly we pray for grace to make our
And more worthy of their Christ-like sacrifice.
Made strong by suffering, friend, let us, away,
To bring the world good-will this Christmas Day.

Curious Christmas Charities

In these modern days, when we have learned a great deal of the real way to dispense happiness to others, it is interesting to know of customs which prevailed a century ago, when the more fortunate people in the old countries had not yet solved the problem of helping others in the best, conspicuous manner. Their efforts were just as worthy as ours, but the grotesque bequests are rather amusing to us. Much eccentricity, but just as much generosity is shown in the strange charities of old England, some of which are continued in modified form, even until now.

In Staffordshire there is an old bequest providing plums for the Christmas pudding of every poor family within a certain radius. For many years in Berkshire the vicar of the parish was the host of the day on Christmas. After evening service the parishioners would go to the vicarage, where an entertainment was given and refreshments of bread, cheese and beer provided by the will of a member of the parish who had always enjoyed the gatherings.

A custom which had its origin in the will of two sisters caused quite a lot of scrambling in a certain town in England. These two indigent ladies had received word that they should come to London to claim an estate. Being very poor they set out on foot for their destination, and when they were almost there, they were forced to ask for nourishment at this same town. They were finely treated and reached London the next morning in time to successfully carry out their business engagements. They were so grateful for the help they had received at

Bethlehem
O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie;
Where angels sleep in heavenly sleep,
The silent stars go by,
Yet in thy quiet street
There dwelt a Prince of Peace,
The everlasting Light,
The joy and bliss of all the years
Are in thee this tonight.
For Christ is born of Mary;

And gathered all above,
While mortals sleep, the angels keep Their watch of wondering love.
O morning stars, together,
Proclaim the Holy Birth,
And praise song to God the King
And Peace to men on earth.
How silently, how silently,
The wondrous gift is given;
So God imparts to human hearts
The blessing of His heaven.
No ear may hear His coming,
But in this world of sin
The dear Christ enters in,
O Holy Child of Bethlehem,
Descend to us, we pray;
Pass out our sin, and enter in,
Be born in us today.

So God imparts to human hearts
The blessing of His heaven.
No ear may hear His coming,

CHRISTMAS AND CHILDREN

In the old days they used to celebrate Christmas with wassail, punch and the flowing bowl and a sore head in the morning. Such, however, is no longer the case. It is no longer fashionable to carouse and revel and make the sweetest, saddest time of all the year an occasion for guzzling and topping.

A changed order of things has undoubtedly had much to do with it. It is not merely the modern prevailing in the merry old days, that the moral outlook is different, that prohibition rules where roasting once held sway, that in these days when lives are lived at a hurried rate folk welcome Christmas as a sort of annual, spiritual rest house by the way, where they can stop short, take stock, oil the works rushing on again; that despite materialism the spiritual status of Christmas is higher than in the days of the Apostles.

No, remember that the boar's head, and the snapdragon, the holly and the mistletoe are following the bowl into oblivion and the turkey is showing signs of living after them. The high cost of living has helped to rob the festive season of some of its "merry" trimmings.

Christmas is becoming yearly more and more a time of little gatherings, more and more a season of the heart and not of the stomach, more an intimate touching of heads and a turning back of memory, more and more a delicious affair of the home.

But Christmas to the children never changes. The flowing bowl may be smashed. The cost of living may soar higher than the mountain tops, Christmas to the grown-ups may become a time of prayer, a time of remembrance, a time of sadness or rejoicing, a time of rest, but to the children it remains still Christmas, the surprise packet time of all the year, on which little minds are concentrated for weeks in wondering fanciful thoughts.

We need to keep it Christmas still for the sake of the kiddies. If child thoughts should ever cease to be child-thoughts and babies born into the world, knowing it all, wise and bold and everlasting tired, then God help the world. We must try to see in these days when the world is a harsh, exploded sort of place for growing-ups that it still remains the wonderful world for the children and that Christmas stays on the mystic, mystery, magic time of all the year.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

The Spirit of Christmas is in the air. You can feel it. You cannot see it, for spirit is elusive, invisible, but you know that it is hovering over you and the other people, swooping down gently to kiss the lips of a little boy, to touch with finger the pinched heart of a man who had forgotten just where his heart fitted in, to open wide the eye of a woman who had looked out at the great wide world through half-closed lids. The wonderful, generous, beautiful spirit of Christmas.

You know, just how or why it is impossible to say, that you and the rest of us are feeling just a little different to our usual selves.

We may not be able exactly to figure it all out, but we were never nearer to the great big heart of things as they are. All the rest of the year we let our world slip by us, surrounded, submerged us. We are quite content in our snug, self-satisfied way to have it so. We've got to scramble for ourselves. But when the Spirit of Christmas unseen waves over us the magic of the wand that changes hearts and eyes, and minds and souls, all the things are different. The cloak of materialism slips from us—we stand forth, each of us, in all the naked beauty of women and men made in the image and likeness of God.

What is the Spirit of Christmas? Is it not simply the bubbling up of the waters from the mighty fountain of spirituality that is hidden deep down somewhere in humanity's make-up? Sentiment, even in these days of dollars, don't care,

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

By Prof. C. C. Laughlin, Mus. Bac., Sarina NO. IX—THE FIRST VIOLINISTS.

The perfection of the violin-making was completed during the latter part of the sixteenth century and the beginning of the seventeenth century.

The development of the violin making, the unsurpassable perfection attained by the great violin makers, naturally coincided with the remarkable development of the technique of violin playing.

The Italian violin makers during the course of the seventeenth century brought their skill up to the highest perfection and put into the hands of the performers the most perfect instrument for expression that human ingenuity seems capable of devising.

The central idea in the soloist's mind is to make effect by melody said to have originated with the Germans.

Sir George Birdwood has traced the history of the Christmas tree to the ancient Egyptian practice of decking houses at the time of the winter solstice with branches of the date-palm; the symbol of life triumphant over death, and therefore of perennial life in the renewal of each bounteous year.

Antlers measuring eight feet from tip to tip and huge bones, believed to be those of an immense elk, have been unearthed on the shore of Praes Lake, Michigan, by a trapper.

It has been found that the Gulf Stream has a current greater than the combined flow of all the great rivers of the world and it has been estimated that in one hour 90,000,000 tons of water moves along its course.

A north Carolina man whose automobile license was numbered 13 sent it back to the Highway Commission, with a letter saying: "The first day I rode with it I lost $13 and the second day I lost 13 inches of skin off my leg. Please send me a safer number." He got it.

SOME CHRISTMAS TRADITIONS

Times may have changed in many ways, but Christmas still holds pride of place as a time for hospitality and festivities of all kinds. In ancient times, bringing in and placing the yule log on the hearth in the baronial hall was the great event of Christmas Eve. As soon as the log was placed and had caught the flame and the great yule candles were lighted, song and toast, tale and dance ended up a joyous evening.

There are certain customs which are especially characteristic of this Feast of the Preside, some of which are gradually passing out of fashion, while others hold undiminished rule in the hearts of the people. In ancient times, when each feudal lord feasted all his retainers at his festive board, the "boar's head" was the most curious item of old yuletide fare. It was taken with much pomp into the baronial hall, heralded by a band of trumpets and songs, the guests formed a procession behind the carver, the boar's head—was carried to the place of honor on the table, and the assembled guests took their places. One of the most important additions to the boar's head was the wassail, which on no account might be forgotten.

The Christmas peacock was second in honor only to the boar's head. Its preparation was fraught with much anxious thought by the cooks, and only the richest ladies were considered worthy to dispense this delicacy. The dish was placed before the master of the house or the most honored guest and when cooked in such fashion as to be eatable rather than merely ornamental, was duly carved and served. Occasionally the bird was served in its plumage, while more often the body was covered with leaf gold, and the beak gilded. Very often the bird was set in a pie of jelly, eggs, mushrooms, pork and pieces of meat. The crust which held the mutton shreds was shaped as a manger. This commemorated the manger "cradle of the Christ. The meat was well spiced in memory of the frankincense and other spices brought by the Wise Men. The spices now put in were unknown in the early days. The lack of a wheel-like tail with its Argus eyes was outspread cunningly on the other side as if the bird were alive.

Mince pies were at first pies of pork. A paste was used to contain the pieces of pork cut from the sucklings and from the flesh of the boar slain in honor of the sun god. But these pies gave place to the shreds of mutton eaten in the Middle Ages. Then Christian symbolism took the place of some of the pagan relics. ## ORIGIN OF THE CHRISTMAS TREE

The history of the Christmas tree is difficult to trace. It has been connected with Yggdrasil, the great tree of Norse mythology, and Christmas trees and Maypoles are known to be relics of that famous Scandinavian Arian. The roots and branches of Yggdrasil, the world-tree, or as it is sometimes called, the Tree of Time, bound together heaven, the earth and hell. From it all tribes of nature received nourishment.

According to a Scandinavian legend of great antiquity, the Christmas tree owes its origin to the great tree of Norse mythology, and Christmas trees and Maypoles are known to be relics of that famous Scandinavian Arian. The roots and branches of Yggdrasil, the world-tree, or as it is sometimes called, the Tree of Time, bound together heaven, the earth and hell. From it all tribes of nature received nourishment.

Called the Feast of Lights. From the earliest times Scandinavia was inhabited by two distinct peoples—the Svea (or Swedes) in the north, and the Gota (or Goths) in the south. They spoke similar languages and were of the same stock. In the fourth century, the territory occupied by the Goths extended from the Baltic to the Black Sea, but this vast state was broken up by the Huns, whose hordes then overran Europe. To the dispersion of the Goths may be attributed the spread of Scandinavian customs over the continent and the fact that the Christmas tree is sometimes

LORE OF THE YULE LOG

The Yule-log, a probable variant of the bonfire—so characteristic of folk lore of its own.

In medieval England, its duration coincided with the Christmas revels. As long as it burned, the tenant had a right to feed at the lord's expense. The log was often cut from an aspen—the sacred tree of our Saxon forefathers. There is a gypsy legend that a Lord was born in a field and brought up by an aspen.

The log should, properly, be lighted with a portion of last year's log, a piece of which is always supposed to be preserved for luck. At the same time that the Christmas tree was lit, the Christmas candle had to be lighted. (A portion of last year's taper has also to be kept.) It was unlucky to snuff the Christmas candle, which burned for 12 days—the period of festivity.

You like a soft bed better than hard one because it is "comfy." But how many of us realize that Dame Nature, for her own ends, purpose gave us all this leaning towards a sleeping place that will yield to the body?

Here Genesie found it pleasant to present the scene with some decoration. He dropped the handle of the freezer, rose, assumed a stately but lugubrious expression and "stepped up" to the imagined couple, using a pausing and rhythmic gait.

Then, bending graciously, as though the persons addressed were of dwarfish stature, "Excuse me," he said, "but I please to put me in the line of waitin' my do. For a moment he listened attentively, then nodded, and, returning with the same aristocratic undulations to an imaginary doorway near the freezer, "Missus an' Missus O-laslo Rinkum!" he proclaimed sonorously.

Jane looked at him thoughtfully, "Do you like it better than 'er' 'er' 'er' Genesie?" she asked.

He paused to consider. "Yes," when he had play all him times! My goodness, do you know?"

"Yes," said Jane. "You hat to be quiet on Sunday nights, don't you?"

"Yes," I reckon I bet a-goin' a see you 'er' family at night—see him dance, wait on him at ref-shuans."

Jane's expression became even more serious than usual. "Willie! I don't know whether he's goin' to 'er' 'er' 'er' "Law name!" Genesie exclaimed. "He die of he die, he die to 'at ball'!"

"Oh, he's livin'!" said Jane. "Only I think maybe he won't go."

"My goodness! Why ain't he goin'?" Jane looked at her friend studiously before replying. "Well, it's a secret," she said finally. "But it's a very interesting one, an' I'll tell you if you never tell."

"Yes! I ain't tellin' nobody."

Jane glanced about her, then stepped a little closer and told the secret with

Hampshire Sheep For Alberta

HAMPSHIRE SHEEP AT BROOKS, ALBERTA.

Confident of the prospects for sheep in the province of Alberta, H. O. Brown, a member of the firm of Brown Brothers, of Twin Falls, Idaho, has had several droves of Hampshire sheep shipped to their farm in the Brooks district. He also had twenty head selected from the flocks to enter at the Winter Stock Show, and of these he succeeded in carrying off a championship, reserve championship and several prizes. Mr. Brown says that they are bringing in numbers of well-bred stock for the Alberta farm.

"We are satisfied that Alberta is a fine sheep country," said Mr. Brown, "and I believe that the time will come when practically every western farmer will have a few sheep. It has become a feature in the farm life in different parts of the country, and this province should prove a successful place for sheep raising."

Brown Brothers brought up fifty-two Hampshires a couple of months ago, and within the past week they have shipped in more than two hundred and fifty head. They have a 1,400 acre farm in the Brooks district, and intend to ship in a lot more sheep in the spring. Recently Mr. Brown sold a select herd to Art Stewart of Pandura, Alberta, and J. E. Brown of Brooks, purchased some of the Hampshire sheep a short time ago.

SEA GUARDS PIRATE GOLD

Many Futile Efforts Made Since 1795 To Dig Up Treasure Buried On An Island in Nova Scotia—
An Old Crones's Warning.

America has a treasure mystery that perhaps may never be solved. No one knows who buried it, where it came from or what the amount of it is.

The location is Oak Island, Nova Scotia, near the head of Mahone Bay, an arm of the Atlantic which cuts into the island, forming a sheltered cove with deep water almost to the very shore.

Back in 1795 three young men on an exploring and hunting expedition landed on Oak Island from their birch bark canoe which, having been drawn above high water mark, they left and started to look around.

Passing through a grove of aged oak trees, they came to a spot that many years previously had been cleared. In the center of this clearing, surrounded by second growth trees, was a mound of earth. The mound was marked by an 'X' in the long ago. Also one of its lower limbs had been sawed off and the projecting stub bore marks where a block and tackle had been attached for heavy lifting. Directly below this was a round depression in the ground 12 feet in diameter as if someone had dug deeply, then filled the excavation without tamping the loose earth thrown back in, while the rains had caused to settle, leaving the tell tale cavity to show what had been done.

This lead to further investigation. The tide was unusually low and they found something that ordinary low water would not have revealed, but which was exposed this particular day, namely, a great ring bolt of iron set and firmly cemented in a rock, evidently arranged for the mooring of a heavy vessel. They also found a copper coin dated 1713.

PIRATE GOLD.
Pirates? Of course; here was where pirates had moored their vessel, landed and buried their treasure which the young men had only to find to become rich men.

They hurried away in their canoes, but soon returned with picks and shovels ready to begin digging in spite of the warning of an ancient crone. "Beware! Beware! The treasure of dead men must not be disturbed. They still watch it and their spirits will haunt you if you dig water on any who may attempt to remove it."

The young men laughed, but their teeth chattered and they shook as with age when further questioning failed to elicit anything but the spirit of warning. They persisted in their digging and 20 feet from the top of the ground found another covering of heavy plank; at 30 feet still another. Who ever had buried the treasure had taken much pains to keep it from falling into alien hands.

On feet down they struck a cover of thick oak planks and their hearts beat fast. It looked as if they were on the eve of import and discovery, unless the sea came and backed them.

This planing was removed with difficulty, but nothing was found but more earth. They persisted in their digging and 20 feet from the top of the ground found another covering of heavy plank; at 30 feet still another. Who ever had buried the treasure had taken much pains to keep it from falling into alien hands.

NATIVES FEARED RESULT.
The three young men had neither money nor tools to finish the search. They appealed to the natives for help and were met with a curt refusal. They were told: "No, for if we help you the sea will come and wash us all away," and so the attempt was abandoned.

Six years later a company was formed, laborers and machinery brought and another attempt made. Ninety feet from the top was discovered a great flat stone on which an inscription had been cut.

At a depth of 100 feet the anger passed through 22 inches of metal in pieces, evidently minted money, but bought nothing to the surface other than three links resembling part of a watch chain.

The anger, after passing through the oaken bottom of one box and the top of another, again struck coin, or at least metal in pieces, 22 inches of it as before, then earth, nothing but earth, and financial shortage compelled the abandonment of the attempt.

A year later another effort was made and again water drove the workmen away.

In 1896 a very ambitious attempt was made. A coffer dam, built to keep out the sea water, and improved pumping machinery were used, but this effort resulted as had all others, the salt water, now aided by quicksand, driving the laborers away.

In 1911, an attempt was made to solve the secret. This, managed by eminent engineers with plenty of money back of it, accomplished nothing more than to satisfy every one connected with the venture that there was much treasure at the bottom of the shaft and that it was likely to remain there until the sea dried up or the ghosts of the pirates reveal to some favored descendant the secret of how to get it. Maybe, not until then will the secret of the Oak Island money pit be solved.

TOOK FIRST TRAIN FOR WINDSOR

(Halifax Herald)

Bright and cheery, and as vigorous as most men of sixty, Dan Halley, of Bear River, who on May tenth next will be eighty-seven, and says he is "old enough to vote," was in Halifax last week. He is a veteran railway man and pioneer contractor, who began in the very first days of railway construction in Nova Scotia, and took into Windsor the first train that ever entered the precincts of that ancient university town. This was away back in 1875 and the road was the Windsor branch of the Nova Scotia Railway.

Mr. Halley was born in Ireland in the village of Macroom, west of Cork and between that city and Kerry. He crossed the Atlantic in the sailing ship Charles Cooper to New York. Soon he went to Massachusetts but did not stay there long for he set sail in the schooner Creole for Windsor, and was in St. John when the news came that Sebastopol had fallen. The railway was a-building and young Halley started in to work on its construction. He took the first train into Windsor and has remained with the railway.

Mr. Halley ever since has been with something else also since those far-off days. He was a subscriber for the British Colonist when Alpin Grant was its publisher and when The Halifax Herald made its appearance forty-seven years ago he was on the subscription list. He has been a member of The Herald family ever since.

It was as representing the contractor that he took the first train into Windsor, for the men who built the road had to operate it a year. He tells an interesting story of a farmer who roughly objected to his taking gravel for ballast. One day this obstreperous man was leaning over a fence that he had closed the right of way. They were getting gravel on the train and so worked it that the bank fell and down with it came the fence, the farmer and all. The farmer slowly extricated himself as the train moved off. This was the last of the farmer's life. He was one of the pleases of Mr. Halley's merry Irish heart.

It was not alone in railway work that he took a lot of work to get enough for the demands of the road. He cut most of the hills bare between Windsor and Halifax in the search for the fuel and kept the engine going. Not only this, but when the Prince of Wales was in Nova Scotia in 1914 he was supplying the forts with wood fuel and sending it out as far as Sambo. He cut and sold railway ties and some of his "sleepers" were taken by the Halifax Electric Tramway Company when that road was built some twenty-three years ago. He was appointed agent of the railway at Beaver Bank when it was the Windsor and Annapolis before that time, and from that point he has ever since been identified with the road. He hopes to stay there a long time yet and The Herald hopes he will. He looks as if he would. As already stated one of his daughters is station agent at Beaver Bank and the other is Mrs. F. J. Lurie, of this city. J. T. Halley, superintendent of the Canadian National Railways, is a son of so is W. A. Halley, manager of the Crown Life Insurance Company.

LORD'S TEACHING ABOUT MONEY

How Many Persons Understand Command?

No part of the Gospel is so habitually ignored as our Lord's teaching about money. Most Christians shut their eyes to it or they set it aside as a counsel of perfection which applied to the Primitive Church. Yet on no subject was Jesus more insistent. He dealt with it in stern, plain precepts, as well as in tremendous parables. Again and again He warned men against being greedy for gain. He denounced the lust after riches. He emphasized the spiritual danger of great possessions. When he publicly cleansed the Temple, He passed over the priests who had no faith in their sacrifices, the hypocrites who made a show of their piety, but His scourge fell upon the money changers and traffickers and thieves. Christ looked upon covetousness as a deadly sin which destroys the soul. Above all the powers of evil He singled out Mammon as the direct antagonist of God.

When our Lord commands us to lay up treasure not on earth but in Heaven, many people understand Him to be uttering a maxim in regard to religious thrift and foresight—as though this were only an improved and amended version of one of the proverbs of Solomon. But a Greater than Solomon is speaking here. The clue to the passage lies in its final sentence: "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Christ is not just warning us that any day they may be robbed of their hoarded gold and that they must inevitably leave it all behind them before very long. Indeed, men as a rule are not mere search for the fuel and kept the engine going. Not only this, but when the Prince of Wales was in Nova Scotia in 1914 he was supplying the forts with wood fuel and sending it out as far as Sambo. He cut and sold railway ties and some of his "sleepers" were taken by the Halifax Electric Tramway Company when that road was built some twenty-three years ago. He was appointed agent of the railway at Beaver Bank when it was the Windsor and Annapolis before that time, and from that point he has ever since been identified with the road. He hopes to stay there a long time yet and The Herald hopes he will. He looks as if he would. As already stated one of his daughters is station agent at Beaver Bank and the other is Mrs. F. J. Lurie, of this city. J. T. Halley, superintendent of the Canadian National Railways, is a son of so is W. A. Halley, manager of the Crown Life Insurance Company.

This solemn lesson concerning earthly and heavenly treasure is cruelly and heartily ignored by the vast majority of our present day thinkers and teachers when they emphasize the unpeppery difference between what they call "survival values" and "absolute values." We may attempt to indicate roughly what the terms stand for. If we prize our own existence above all else, beyond everything else in the world, we shall desire to go on living, and therefore, we shall reckon things to be valuable in so far as they assist us to survive. But the instinct of self-preservation is only one part of human nature. Beyond these survival values, we are aware of another kind of values of a different order—values which we must call "absolute," because we recognize that they are inherently precious and to be desired for their own sake, quite apart from any possible use or service which they may yield to us. Truth and Beauty and Goodness are examples of absolute values. But to love and worship Truth and Beauty and Goodness means to love and worship God. Yet he who Christ resolves all religious and all duty into Love. He is pointing to the one treasure in Heaven which faileth not. And He himself makes us aware that this love, which He incarnates in His own person, carries the pledge of its own everlastingness, it has the quality and fragrance of eternity. Absolute truth and Beauty and Goodness have been manifested once for all, and found in fashion as a man. Alone among the sons of men He has uttered the word of life. In His low estate He rose high above all the allments which distract mankind. To His heart money counted for less than any thing in comparison with tenderness and compassion. His detachment appears something natural and effortless. His humility is unconscious of itself. He has not even refused the kingdom of this world. He has translated it, turning from jewels to flowers, like a child. In His eyes all men had absolute values, and "survival values" seemed no account. By His passion of redeeming love, He saved others; Himself, He never tried to save.

St. Paul was echoing our Lord's own words about treasure in heaven when he wrote: "Set your affection on things above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. There is no other secret of detachment but this. For man is drawn by his strongest motive. His path, misers; they hanker after money for the sake of what their money will buy. Covetousness, moreover, is a vice which knows no respect of persons. It can infect a cottager no less than a capitalist. Peasants may be guilty of profiteering, shopkeepers may grow close-fisted and mean. A trade union may prove mercenary as well as a millionaire. "Treasure," it is true, takes varied shapes and forms, but in all manner of strange disguises. A man may set his heart on this object or on that—on his library, on his garden, or his study; or his success in business, or his seat in Parliament. But nearly every man secretly hoards some kind of treasure. He cherishes some darling object round which his hopes circle and his plans crystallize; some dominant interest absorbs him so that his thoughts constantly wing their way back to it, like homing birds, from wherever he goes. He will come in the end possessed by his dearest possession. Your heart perforce goes into partnership with your treasure, so that they share the same fortunes and suffer the same fate. Christ's solemn warning against the affection for things that are earthly and transient means not merely that such things vanish away, and we must therefore endure the bitterness of their loss and the blank they leave behind. The argument is far more penetrating and profound than that. It becomes entangled and made one with our treasure and therefore the man whose nature is bound up with any corruptible object must share its corruption. He must suffer as it suffers from the moth and the rust, and the thief. He is infected with its diseases, and dragged into its haunts. The curse of unworthy and ignoble treasures is not that you lose them, but that you go down into their sepulchre. The heart of your heart becomes entangled with pride and corroded with cares, and worn-out with the gnawings of ambition, and consumed with the slow fire of the rust of selfishness—a worm that dieth not, a fire which is not quenched.

A SERIES OF TALKS ON MUSIC

By Prof. C. C. Langer, M. Sc., B. A., M. A., Ph. D.—THE LUTE.

Lutes or Lutists were attached to the household of Kings and Queens, and this form was not abolished until the 19th century.

The Lute was the most popular instrument during the 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries. It is an instrument traced from Egypt, where it appears depicted in sculptures; the lute held a prominent place in European home life and was only supplanted by the key-board instruments of the piano type.

Lutes were generally built very artistically, the pear-shaped body being composed of narrow strips of wood glued together with great care; the lute originally had eight gut strings arranged in pairs, each pair tuned in unison. This same instrument was considered exceedingly difficult to tune.

The lute was popular because of its long working history; it was the favorite instrument of high society and was instrumental in familiarizing the musical world with that form of music, of melody, supported by chords.

The lute was popular because its playing required such mechanical ingenuity to bring it to perfection; it was also a portable instrument and was adapted to domestic performances.

The kind of music written for the lute consisted mainly of dances, tunes in sets, with some fanciful movements; but the ornamental parts in music seemed childish and tame, yet this kind of music formed the basis of a long and continuous improvement including fantasias, airs, preludes, simple passages of runs and arpeggios.

The pianoforte is now the most familiar object in domestic life and occupies the position at one time held by the lute; the pianoforte has a great advantage over previous instruments from a purely practical point of view.

The lute music was usually soft, and delicate; it would neither rage nor rattle, the music was certainly peculiar and was written on a six line staff.

The period of the invention of the lute is still a matter of speculation, some having said that it is of Asiatic origin.

Of the principal players and writers for the lute we mention Kapsberger, a German lute player and composer, who spent most of his time in Italy composing for this instrument and the voice.

Lambert, born 1610, was another great luteist. He was master of chamber music to Louis XIV and composed music for the lute and harpsichord. He was one of the first to use the lute in a serious way. Gaultier, of the same period, was another lute player of fame and was renowned for his execution. He, with his cousin Jacques, established a school for lute playing in Paris which proved a great success.

Gallie, who is said to have formed the basis for the more modern vocal solo, composed many airs for single voice with accompaniment on the lute, was also a great musical theorist.

The lute was considered the most difficult instrument to tune, and patience and perfect care being required. Mattheson, (1720) calculated despondently that "if a lute player had lived eighty years, he has probably spent about sixty years tuning his instrument." It is even recorded that Mary, Queen of the Scots, required persons from London to tune her lute.

Much literature has been published concerning the lute; song and story are full of allusions to the "whispering lute" and the "whispering lute" and the "whispering lute."

The lute disputes with the organ the honor of first having compositions written for it.

Like a planet's is determined by the prevailing atmosphere of the time. Yet he is free to determine what force shall have opportunity to attract him, what powers shall be free to play upon his soul. Any motive or example which we living near to ourselves, which we contemplate steadily, and which we closely court on us an influence increased in that proportion: When once the Person of Christ Crucified holds the chief place in our thought, He himself will exercise His own invincible attraction, according to the might working whereby He is able to raise all souls unto Himself.

A Christian means a man who has fallen in love with Christ; and where his treasure is, there will his heart be also.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Institute will be held in Temperance Hall on Monday afternoon, January third, at 3.30 o'clock. A large attendance is requested.

The travel to and from Bear River during the Christmas season was very heavy, over sixty leaving the town in a single day for the holidays, while fully as many came in to spend Xmas with relatives and friends.

The Christmas services in the Methodist church on Sunday were much enjoyed by those who attended. Special music was given by the choir, including songs by Fred Harris, and sermons bearing on the Christmas message were delivered by the pastor.

The concert given by the scholars of the Cross Road school not only reflects credit on the pupils but on Miss DeForest, the teacher, as well. From beginning to end there was not a break. The school house was prettily decorated for the occasion showing care and taste, and adding brightness to the entertainment. All the pieces were equally well rendered but particularly pleasing was the one called "Strategy" which called for repeated applause.

The Mistletoe Show was very funny. All eyes were opened (especially the little tots), when dear old Santa appeared (and he was a good one) and gave every one a gift of the tree, and good advice with it, which does not come now-a-days. You who failed to attend certainly missed a good laugh.

Miss DeForest received a goodly number of useful and fancy presents showing how much she is appreciated in our midst.

The Bear River Fruit Company, Ltd.

This organization was incorporated in February 1920, and stands for the best interests of the Farmers and Fruit Growers of Bear River and vicinity, as well as the public generally. Its aim is to conduct a general fruit packing and marketing business; also potatoes and other products, will be handled if opportunity offers.

We are dealers in flour, corn meal, rolled oats, first quality western feeding oats, and mill feeds of all kinds. And the good thing about our business is the prices are right, as are also the goods in stock. Our Western Queen Flour is conceded to be the best flour milled in Canada.

We also carry a full line of grass seeds, fungicides, insecticides, and fertilizers, and buying the three last mentioned as we do, through the main office of the Nova Scotia Fruit Companies Ltd., whose purchases in these lines alone run in the hundreds of thousands of dollars per year, we can defy competition. And we wish our friends, one and all, the compliments of the season.

CHAPTER XV. FATHERS' FORTS

JANE nodded repeatedly for emphasis as she talked about his head to show that he was as deeply impressed as she wished him to be. "I guess," she added after a pause—"I guess Willie has anything you an' I talked about him or clo'es or anything."

She was mistaken in part. William had caught no reference to himself, but he had overheard something, and he was now alone in his room thinking about it almost feverishly. "A second" had not been over on the avenue, when they got swartling suits all way rum sum dollys to nineteen dollys an' ninety-eight cents."

Miss Pratt, that magic girl, was going home. To the competent twenties, hundreds of miles suggesting no impossibilities, such departures may be sending, but not tragic, implacable, the difference to seventeen! Miss Pratt was going home, and seventeen could not follow. It could only mourn upon the lonely shore, tracing the angelic footprints left in the sand.

William decided to make one final appeal before he resorted to measures which the necessities of despair had caused him to contemplate. Descending from his room, he found his father and mother still sitting upon the front porch.

"Father," he said in a loud voice, "I have come to—"

"Dear me!" Mrs. Baxter exclaimed, not perceiving that she was interrupting an intended oration. "Willie, you do look pale!"

But William persisted heroically. "Father," he said, "father, I have come to—"

"What on earth's the matter with you?" Mr. Baxter ceased to fan himself. Mrs. Baxter stopped rocking, and both stared.

"Father," he began once more, "I have come—I have come to—place before you something I think it's your duty as my father to undertake."

"My son!" said Mrs. Baxter. Here William drew a long breath. "I have thought over this step, because there comes a time to every young man when they must lay a step before their father before something happens that they would be sorry for. I have thought this undertaking over, and I am certain it would be your honest duty."

"My son!" gasped Mr. Baxter. "I thought I knew you pretty well, but you talk like a stranger to me. What is all this? What you want?"

He was surprised and hurt to hear his father utter a wordless shout in a tone of wondering astonishment. "I have more to say," William began.

But Mr. Baxter cut him off. "A dress suit!" he cried. "Well, I'm glad you were talking about something, because I honestly thought it must be too much for you."

"Father, I got to have one. I got to have one right away!" The urgency in William's voice was almost fearful. "I don't ask you to have it made or to go to expensive tailors, but there's plenty of good ready-made ones that only cost about $40. They're advertised in the paper. Father, wouldn't you spend just $40? I'll pay it back when I'm in business. I'll work!"

Mr. Baxter waved all this aside. "It's not the money, son, wouldn't I'm standing for and I don't intend!"

"Father, surely you do it!"

"No, I will not!"

see that he gets all this stuff out of me system. He's got to learn some sense!"

Mrs. Baxter shook her head doubtfully, but she said no more. Perhaps she regretted a little that she had caused Mr. Baxter's evening clothes to be so expensively enlarged, for she could rather regretfully, not to say cryptically, during the long silence which followed, and Mr. Baxter resumed his pecking, unaware of the fixity of gaze which his wife maintained upon a thing the most loyal will do something.

The incomprehensible look disappeared before long, but the regretful one was renewed in the mother's eyes whenever she caught glimpses of her son's face and the table, where William's manner was gentle, even toward his heartless father.

Underneath that gentleness the hardest self of William was no longer dead, but a desperate resolve, but had fixed upon it, and on the following afternoon Jane chanced to be a witness of some resultant actions. She came upon her mother with an account of them.

"Mamma, what you spoke Willie wants of those two old market baskets that were down cellar?"

"Well, he carried 'em in his room, an' then he saw me lookin', an' he said, 'G'way from here!' an' shut the door. He looks so awful. Willie want of those old baskets, mamma?"

"I don't know. Perhaps he doesn't even know himself, Jane."

But William did know definitely. He had set the baskets upon chairs, and now, with pale determination, he was proceeding to fill them. When his task was completed the two baskets contained:

One heavyweight winter suit of clothes, one lightweight summer suit of clothes, one cap, one straw hat, two pairs of white flannel trousers, two madras shirts, two flannel shirts, two silk neckties, seven soft collars, three silk neckties, one crocheted tie, eight pairs of socks, one pair of white leather shoes, one pair of tennis shoes, one overcoat, some underwear.

One two-foot shelf of books, consisting of several sterling works upon mathematics, in a damaged condition; five of Shakespeare's plays, expurgated for schools and colleges and also damaged; a work upon political economy and another upon the science of physics; Webster's Collegiate Dictionary; a new drawing book; and Five Hundred Other Hints; "Witty Sayings From Here and There;" "Lorna Doone;" "Quentin Durward;" "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes;" a very old copy of "Moths," and a small Bible.

William spread handkerchiefs upon the two overbearing cargoes, that their nature might not be subjected to the curious, and after listening a moment at his door, took the baskets, one upon each arm, then went quickly down the stairs and out of the house, out of the yard and into the alley.

After an absence of about two hours he returned empty handed and anxious. "Mother, I want to speak to you," he said, addressing Mrs. Baxter in a voice which clearly proved the strain of these rackings days. "Please send Jane away. I can't talk about important things with a child in the room."

Jane naturally wished to stay, since he was going to say something important. "Mother, I got to go to go?"

"Just a few minutes, dear."

Jane walked submissively out of the door, leaving it open behind her. Then, putting all care and when I ask for help, I shall be able to get it."

"Mother, I don't feel I can discuss it any. I simply ask you, Will you lend me $30?"

Mrs. Baxter laughed gently. "I don't think I could, Willie, but certainly I should want to know what for."

"Mother, I am going on eighteen years old to-morrow. I ask for $30. I think I might be trusted to know how to use it for my own good without having to answer questions like 'what for?'"

"Why, Willie," she exclaimed, "you ought to have plenty of money of your own! You ought to have plenty left out of that old junk and furniture I let you sell last week. You had over $40!"

son, dear, I'm afraid the reason you don't tell me is because you know that I wouldn't give it to you if I knew what you wanted it for."

William left in such a preoccupation that he passed the surprised Jane in the hall without suspecting what she had been doing.

That evening after dinner he addressed to his father an impassioned appeal for $30, laying such stress of pathos on his principal argument that if he couldn't have a dress suit at least he ought to be given $30. That Mr. Baxter was moved in the direction of consent, but not far enough. "I'd like to let you have it, Willie," he said, excusing himself for refusal, "but your mother felt she oughtn't to do it unless you'd say what you wanted it for, and I'm sure she wouldn't like me to do it."

On Friday William disappeared after breakfast and did not return to lunch.

Mrs. Baxter was troubled. During the afternoon she glanced often from the open window of the room where she had gone to sew, but the peaceful neighborhood continued to be peaceful, and no sound of the harassed footsteps of William echoed from the pavement.

However, when at last he arrived in his weekday costume to do some wedding and Jane immediately skip forth for mingled purposes of observation and conservation of the situation.

"What do they say?" thought Mrs. Baxter, observing that both Jane and Genesis were unusually animated. After an exciting half hour Jane came crying to her mother, breathlessly.

"Mamma, she cried, 'I know where Willie is! Genesis told me, 'cause he saw him while he was doing it!'"

"Doing what?"

"Mamma, listen! What you think Willie's doing? I bet you can't guess!"

"Jane!" Mrs. Baxter spoke sharply. "Tell me what Genesis said at once!"

"Yes!" the excited girl went on. "Genesis knows all about it, because he was thinkin' of doin' it himself, 'cause he says it would be too slow. This is the way it is, mamma—listen, mamma, because this is just exactly the way it is: Well, this lumber yard, you got into some sort of a fuss because he bought millions an' millions of shingles, mamma, that had too many knots in 'em, an' the man don't want to pay for 'em, or else the store says he bought 'em, an' he won't take 'em back, an' they got to prove how many shingles are bad. That's what Willie's doin'."

"Every time he comes to a bad shingle, mamma, he puts it somewhere else, or someplace like that, mamma, an' every time he's put a thousand bad shingles in that place they get him 6 cents. He gets the 6 cents to keep, mamma, an' that's what he's been doin' all day."

CENTREVILLE.

The men who have been cutting and hauling pulp wood here, returned to their homes at St. Martin's, N. B., last week to spend Christmas.

Rephal J. Morehouse, who is employed in the N. B. office at Moncton, is spending the Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Morehouse.

Franklin Holmes of New York, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Holmes.

Becher Morehouse who has been employed in the pulp factory at Beaver Harbor, has returned to his home here.

Miss Gladys Morehouse who is teaching at Newellton, Shelburne county, is spending her holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Morehouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Haight spent Christmas at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orrie Spaulding, Waterford.

Willis P. Morehouse, who is employed in the third electric Co., Kennebec, is spending the Christmas holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Morehouse.

FLYNTON.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Curll, of Centerville, are spending their holidays with their sister, Mrs. Harry Warner.

Miss Millie Blinn and brother Nelson are home from the United States to spend the holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Blinn.

Rogers, Irving, and Eddie Donette, who were employed for the past six months, arrived last week from Maine where they were spending Christmas holidays at E. P. Warner's.

Alex. MacDonald, and Charlie Warner of Wolfville, are home for the Christmas holidays.

Walter and Wm. Tebo who have been absent in Massachusetts for several years are at home to spend the winter with their mother, Mrs. John F. Tebo.

We are pleased to write that Willis Donette who recently went to the Victoria General Hospital to be operated on for appendicitis has returned, and is regaining his former strength remarkably.

Our teacher, Miss Hudson, was a passenger last Thursday to Bellisle to spend the holidays at her home. On the evening previous, she gave a school entertainment in the school house which was packed to its utmost capacity; the pupils performing their part in a very creditable manner.

We were visited with a very cold snap for Christmas. Mercury dropped very quickly to only six above zero, but Modestine had more moderate weather with quite a fall of snow, followed by sleet and rain.

We with the Courier and its staff a very prosperous and happy New Year. Gordon Potter who is attending the Academy in Digby is home for the holidays.

Mrs. Wm. Melancon and little son, spent Christmas at her former home in Digby.

BARN &amp; BRIGHTON.

Miss Alva Young, who is taking a course at the Truro Business College, is home for the holidays.

Irving Oakes arrived from Halifax Friday and is spending a few days with Norris Rand.

W.C.T.U. AT WEYMOUTH NORTH.

The Ada L. Powers Union, of Weymouth North, closed its first year in December. Notwithstanding discouragements, we can say we are glad we "belonged." We have all earned much that is worth while. In order to extend our knowledge of our lines of work, we have subscribed for "The Union Signal," "Social Welfare," and "Among the Deep Sea Fisheries."

These are to be circulated among our members. "The Light," the official organ of the World's Purify Federation, and "The Christian Statesman" are also accessible to those who desire them. Furthermore we have succeeded in putting "Excellent Motherhood," that excellent mothers' magazine, so long edited by Dr. Mary Wood-Allen and still breathing her spirit, into twenty-three homes.

No regular meeting has been omitted during the year. Three special church meetings were held before the Christmas season. One of these held October 19, was addressed by the Canadian President, Mrs. Gordon Wright, who charmed her audience and gave us courage to go on with renewed zeal.

We celebrated the close of our first year by making our president, Miss Campbell, a life member, the money sent for this purpose to be used for Canadianization.

Our membership has grown slowly but steadily. We now have nine members in Weymouth and hold an occasional meeting there.

KASDALE.

The Kasdale Union Bible Class held their Christmas session on Tuesday evening 21st, at the home of the President E. H. Porter.

Christmas was celebrated with a beautifully decorated by the ladies of the class, and crowned with gifts. Excellent music was given by Mrs. W. G. Heister, dealing with the Life of Christ as considered in the lessons for the quarter.

McNeil at the organ, a splendid song by Miss Annie G. Shaffer. Reading by Miss Winnie Spalmer and Clara Heister.

Refreshments followed, and then a vote of thanks to the President, moved by Miss Betts seconded by Rev. Mr. Heister and acknowledged and a late hour function closed with prayer by Rev. Mr. Heister after which the large company departed all thoroughly pleased with their evening entertainment.

Arthur Hill came from Boston on Friday, the 17th to visit his parents Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hill. He went to St. John on Wednesday returning on Thursday with his brother who had been in the Hospital for appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Porter were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert W. Shaffer Christmas day.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Thorne were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen E. Thorne Christmas day.

Miss Margaret Campbell, of Digby, spent a few days last week with her sister, Mrs. Les Sack.

Miss Dora and Ruby Campbell, of Digby, spent Christmas with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Enoch Campbell.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hensley of Gulliver's Cove, spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hensley.

SAYS TANLAC GOT HER OUT OF BED.

Halifax Woman Recovered From Breakdown After She Started Taking Tanlac

"The way I improved in health after I started taking Tanlac was truly astonishing, and I don't remember ever feeling better than I do at present," says Mrs. Lena Simpson, of 39 A. Frederickton avenue, Halifax, N. S.

"When I started taking Tanlac I had been in bed for three weeks and was in a terribly weakened condition. For two years before that I had been very run down. My nerves were so bad that the noise of the children playing irritated me and any sudden banging of a door would almost scare me to death. I often went all night without sleeping a wink, and became so weak that I could not walk like a leaf and could not walk a block without getting out of breath. I was simply tired from morning to night and didn't have enough energy to do my housework. I lost weight all the time and as I've said ended up by breaking down altogether and having to go to bed for three weeks."

"My husband had taken Tanlac with splendid results and it was his insistence on it trying it. Well, remarkable though it may seem, I was up and about again before I had finished the first bottle and now after taking two more I am feeling just fine again. That tired run down feeling has all left me and my nerves are now steady as can be. I sleep good and sound every night and am so much stronger that I can get through my housework with ease. Only today I have done a big round of shopping and don't feel a bit tired after it. Tanlac certainly is a grand medicine and I gladly recommend it to everyone."

Tanlac is sold in Digby by P. W. Holdsworth and in Bear River by the Bear River Drug Store and by the leading druggist in every town.

Irish Police Are Brave Men

NO race has a greater claim to be regarded as physically courageous than the Irish.

The history of the British army is one record of the heroism and devotion of Irish regiments. On a thousand battlefields, on a thousand days of trial, Leinsters and Munsters, Connaught Rangers and Fusiliers from Ulster have displayed such indomitable courage and contempt of death that the Irish name has become a synonym for personal bravery and it costs little to suppose that the same courage and contempt of death that made the Irish a great fighting people.

It is, therefore, occasion no surprise that the standards of bravery set by Irish soldiers in every corner of the universe is being maintained. The courage of these Irish policemen is that they are engaged in against the evil spirits of crime and anarchy. The courage of these Irish policemen is that they are engaged in against the evil spirits of crime and anarchy. The courage of these Irish policemen is that they are engaged in against the evil spirits of crime and anarchy.

There are no reserve trenches, no rest billets, no nerve cures at Leinster for the R.I.C. There is a perpetual front line south of the city with nothing in the shape of a parapet to protect them from the bullet of the hidden sniper.

Men who have dwelt in towns subject to sudden bombardment will know how human it is to seek the sidewalk that affords the most protection from flying shrapnel. But for the Irish constable there is no safe side of the street although perhaps the most dangerous spot is his own doorstep, which, with malicious cruelty, is often chosen as the place of assassination.

Yet, through it all, the magnificent discipline and fearless devotion of the Royal Irish Constabulary shines like a star. Never has a body of men brought greater credit to the name of Ireland, in the present unpropitious condition of this land, the dogged courage shown by these country policemen in the face of the most fearful and ruthless world over may bow their heads in sorrow at the thought that good Irish men like these are being sent to their death by Irish hands and the sacred name of Christianity besmirched by murder.

As I write all Ireland is discussing the "Battle of Kilmallock" and the gruesome details. Broadly, the affair followed the now familiar line of holding the village in which the doomed police barracks was situated by blocking all the approaches with barbed wire and cutting the telegraph wires. Then, at once in the morning, a force of two hundred men armed with rifles and bombs called on the garrison of ten constables to surrender their charge. But the R.I.C. do not lightly deliver up their arms or their quarters without further parley, began the Battle of Kilmallock. For six hours the police gallantly resisted the onslaught of their barracks was built in the peaceful long ago, when no architect dreamt of assaulting a police barracks with what military engineers term a "field of fire." In fact, it was situated quite centrally among neighboring houses, and the fact overlooked by a schoolhouse at the rear. All the raiders had to do, therefore, was to occupy the most suitable vantage points for sniping and then to open fire.

But two hours of this failed to bring the constabulary forth. Instead, they answered fusillade with fusillade, bomb with bomb, and the could have been little else for anyone within miles of Kilmallock that night. Then the raiders proposed a pump and hose, saturated the building with oil and set it ablaze. In the western wing, Serg. King and Constable Norton were incinerated, burnt to death, but even that did not daunt the others. With magnificent determination they fought on in the blazing building until, at seven in the morning, the frustrated raiders withdrew in disgust. Thereupon the constables emerged triumphant from their blackened ruin, and at once Constable Harty fell a victim to the concealed snipers. During the engagement five others of the garrison were wounded more or less seriously, so that two only escaped unhurt.

The dead men are policemen of long service, and in the manner of Irish constables, are the fathers of large families. The local reporter adds the final pathetic touch to this tale of heroism and honor when he says that "several of Constable Norton's children were crying bitterly at the street in the vicinity of the barracks during the day." And in Dublin I have heard men renowned for their strong nationalistic views lamenting, using much distinctly ominous language, "the Battle of Kilmallock," and wondering where all this dreadful waste of good Irish lives is leading to.

Didn't Want Ducks.

In a village in Staffordshire a lady started a poultry farm with one hen and thirteen eggs. Not having had the least experience in keeping poultry, she inquired of a friend how long eggs generally took to hatch. She received the reply: "Three weeks for chickens and four for ducks." The old lady met her friend some time later, and on being asked how her poultry farm was going, replied: "Oh, I've hatched 'em. The end of three weeks there were no chickens, so I took the hen off, so I didn't want ducks."
